Four of the [illegible] freshmen and five more are sophomores so there is a dearth of experience which we hope will be counteracted by the coaching and the early practice before the trip. It is because of this lack of experience that too much cannot be hoped for, but if the Cats make a creditable showing things will look favorable for the remainder of the schedule.

A list of the men has been given out. Frank O'Keefe will hold down the first baseman's position. O'Keefe was the utility infielder of last year's team but this is his first year as a regular occupant of a varsity berth. Second base will be occupied by "Pie" Frazier, a frosh who has shown some classy baseball so far this year in the cage. He fields like a veteran and is proving his worth with the willow. Although the southern trip will give "Pie" his first chance in a regular collegiate game he has played in whirlwind company and the keystone sack looks like the steadiest in the infield. He has exceptionally good form in the field and makes the tough ones look easy.

Jay is making the trip to cover the shortstop berth. He is another frosh that has shown up well in practice, and with a little experience he should turn into a fine infielder. McKay, also of the class of '32 will hold down the hot corner while Howard, Wirant, and Morse are slated for the work in the outer garden. Captain Macomber has been shifted from the field and will work behind the bat with Stroh as his understudy.

Six of the fifteen men are pitchers. Wood a letterman of last year, Sergeant Rothwell, Kendricken, McBride and Foster complete the list of the squad. When not in the box Sargent is capable of filling in at first or even in the outfield. McBride will also act as an outfielder in an emergency.

The Vermonters have an even chance with some of the teams that defeated last season's nine. For instance the Quantico Marines do not look as strong as they did last year as only three members of last year's team were defeated the strong Green and Gold outfit are left. They are Smith and Kidd, outfielders, and Levey, the shortstop. The Marines broke even with William and Mary in a two game series last week.

All in all the team looks as though it should turn in a presentable record. As yet almost all of the practice has been in the cage and the men may look even better when they get out of doors. It is practically impossible to tell how the squad will shape up but all promise to be well.

The management has received from some of the merchants the following prizes to be awarded after the South

Former Treasures of the Honorable George P. Marsh at Billings Library

[illegible] distinguished scholar and diplomat [illegible] Marsh [illegible] a final and fit abode in the [illegible] for it is the heritage [illegible] of the University of [illegible]. The story of the gathering of this collection with the journeys of purchase of it and then following them [illegible] to the various posts of honor in Washington, Constantinople, Turin, Florence and Rome; the long storages of personal possession and the final assemblage and orderly rearrangement of the volumes in their present commodious and permanent quarters, would in itself form an entertaining article. But the space of the present paper is restricted to an account of the special features and most valuable features of the collection.

Interesting as some of the volumes are, the library as a whole is of profound[illegible] greater importance than any part of its parts. The cost of every book was a matter of serious consideration to its purchaser, and no volume was bought that could be spared. As a result of this forced economy, the collection included only the best books in the different departments. It is emphatically a working library, being the material employed by Mr Marsh in the preparation of his treatises on Scandinavian and English philology, [illegible] philosophy, the history of Romanism, and the minor topics discussed in his various pamphlets. But the subjects represented by the twelve thousand volumes of his library, though clustered about these nuclei, really cover almost all the departments of human knowledge. One third of the volumes may be classed as literature, one third as history including biography and travels, and the remaining third as philology, natural science, political economy, theology and works of reference.

In August, 1854 Mr Marsh in a letter to Charles Lanman wrote from memory the following description of his library which is copied with important typographical corrections from the Literary World for October 13, 1883. At the time of this writing Mr Marsh had published none of his books except the Lectures on Language. The list it will be noticed gives no hint of the directions taken by his later collecting.

My library consists of something less than five thousand volumes, and as such a heterogeneous collection as of course it must be one ill suited at all to the purposes of a scholar of rather multifarious than profound reading, necessarily must be. It is meagre in all departments except that of Scandinavian literature in which I suppose it to be more complete than any collection out of the northern kingdoms. In old Northern literature it contains all the Arna-Magnæan editions of the Islendzke Sogur all those of Suhm, all those of the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries and in fact all those printed at Copenhagen and Stockholm as well as in Iceland, with scarcely an exception.

In modern Danish literature I have the works of Holberg, Ewald, Herbert Begetsen, with other celebrated authors in Swedish those of Leopold, Stagnelius, Tegnér, and indeed almost all the belles lettres authors of Sweden, the transactions of the Royal Academy of Science, others that are hundred volumes, those of the Swedish Academy and of the Royal Academy of Literature and many collections in ecclesiastic history, besides numerous other works. In Spanish and in Portuguese, besides many modern authors I have numerous old chronicles such as the Madrid collection of old Spanish chronicles in seven volumes, the Portuguese Livros Inedittos da Historia Portugueza, Viterbo, Marcos Navarrete and others. In Italian most of the best authors who have acquired a European reputation, several hundred volumes of French works including many of the old chronicles, a respectable collection in German including many editions of Reineke de Vos the Nibelungen and other works of the Middle Ages, in classical literature good editions of the most celebrated Greek and Roman authors among which I may notice as rare in this country most of the old Church fathers, Roger Ascham, the Works of King James I, John Smith's Virginia, edition of 1624, Annales de Gand and Palmerin of England. In lexicography I have the best dictionaries and grammars in all the languages of Western Europe and many biographical dictionaries and other works of reference in various languages. I have also many works in astrology, alchemy, witch craft and magic and a considerable collection of works on the situation of Plato's Atlantis and the Elysian Fields such as Rudbeck's Atlantica, Cerquides, Escobar and others.

To represent the accumulations of the succeeding years the above list would need to be greatly extended. Under the single subject of Finnish the catalogue shows 150 titles and under Icelandic Church over half as many. Space therefore has limited me to the mere mention of a few of the distinctively rare books hoarded in the treasures of the Marsh Library.

Of Mr F Billings personally as a whole and in reference to the history of Mr G P Marsh's relations the words of President Buckham in speaking of Mr Billings at the dedication of the Billings Library in June 1885, may be appropriately inserted.

How came it to be the rare good fortune of this institution, one of the lesser lights of learning in Mr Webster's phrase to have been made the recipient of so princely a gift? The answer is one of profound significance, honorable to learning, honorable and full of encouragement to the necessity of learning. It so happened that forty-five years ago this institution had a corps of instructors such as few in

PROFESSOR KIDDER ON EDUCATION AT OXFORD AT DISCUSSION CLUB

Prof. George V Kidder of the University of Vermont spoke on Oxford at the meeting of the Discussion Club of the College Street Church yesterday noon.

The main theme was a comparison of some aspects of English and American university training, and the reflection of the ideal of English higher education in the life of Cecil John Rhodes. Rhodes was the fifth of nine sons of a clergyman in an unimportant parish in Hertfordshire. At the age of 17, ill health sent him to South Africa to join an older brother engaged in cotton raising. He arrived almost exactly at the time of the great diamond rushes. The two brothers joined the diamond seekers, and within two years had accumulated enough wealth to permit Cecil to realize a long cherished ambition to enter Oxford University. Recurring periods of illness, due to consumption and a weak heart, kept him traveling from England to South Africa for relief, until eight years after entering he was finally able to complete his course.

He had learned the true value of wealth and also that his great ideas for the British Empire and South Africa in particular could be made realities only by the use of great wealth. In South Africa he had already entered politics, and before leaving Oxford for the last time he had been elected a member of the South African parliament, a position he held to his death. At the age of 55, twenty-seven years ago almost to a day, he succumbed to the ravages of disease, though not until he had lived on for thirty years after his doctors had assured him he could not live six months.

Leaves Large Bequests

His will left some two million pounds ($10,000,000), a third of his estate, as a trust fund to provide for the well-known Rhodes Scholarships. The beneficiaries were to be promising young men of the colonies and the United States whose scholastic ability and attainments, high moral character, and capacity for leadership might mark them as qualified to become the leaders in administering the Empire and maintaining the racial solidarity of the English speaking peoples. These men were to be sent to Oxford for three years to complete their training as the university best qualified to turn out political leaders.

Function of University

This means important a consideration of the system at Oxford and her ideals of education. Numerous other universities in England are not unlike our own, but Oxford proceeds under the conviction that the function of a university is to train men for civil service, and, secondly, that a study of the history of earlier civilizations and the philosophy of the past is the best possible preparation. That Lord Balfour, Lord Milner, Lord Grey of Fallodon, Lord Asquith, Stanley Baldwin, and Winston Churchill, for example, are at once men of outstanding scholastic attainment and the guiding powers of the recent years in England is testimony to the value of this conviction. It was Rhodes' idea, as it is Oxford's idea, that the development of outstanding leaders who will return to their own territories to "leaven the lump" is the highest service to humanity.

However in this country we do not turn our ablest and best men into the channels of civil service and politics and our universities do not put that as their ideal. It is perhaps for this reason that returning Rhodes Scholars, the oldest still in the prime of life, have turned almost wholly to teaching, the law, and other professions, where their influence has been less obvious, though none the less real. The point I would make however, is that this is not entirely the sort of part Rhodes had hoped his young men to take. The situation in India is an interesting contrast. Increasing numbers of Indians are attending Oxford, meeting with tolerance at best, and are returning to India to take a real part in her government to be sure, but joining the leaders of the party which would force Britain to grant India independence.

NEW YORK ART SCHOOL BRINGS EXHIBIT TO CITY

Fascinating and fantastically beautiful is the art exhibit from the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts that is brightening and wholly transforming the erstwhile staid reading room of the Fletcher Free Library.

Modernistic, to say the least, are the majority of the designs and often, as in the case of a poster for a lace exposition and fashion show, the work is so realistically done that one marvels at the unearthly effects that can be produced by the use of paints and human fingers.

Interior decoration, costume designing and advertising are the principal divisions of the school that are represented in the work exhibited at the library, although there is also a little of the work in theatre designing included. The students at both the New York and Paris schools use their research work from every period and in every type of occupation as a base and background for their exposition of the modern ideas in art.

There is one lovely plate that shows the effect of Chinese research. The colonial period, Syrian, French, in fact every conceivable idea, has been caught in some way.

A poster showing the artist's impressions after hearing a Damrosch concert is grotesquely enthralling. It is weird, but so are some of the others; it is seemingly a jumble of colors splashed on—at first glance. One must come back to it a second time and then once more, each time finding something more in it until it leaves a lasting impression of being a clever and almost reasonable interpretation in paints of a well-known concert selection.

The plates displayed number 100, including some of the prize posters that were displayed at the Grand Central Palace Flower Show in New York City. One glance and the reason is seen why all the prizes then were awarded to the school. There are trophy panels, borrowing the idea of the 17th century ones and adding much more vim and verve and the dash of modernism. That hardware can be grouped so charmingly on a panel as to deserve a place in a drawing room has to be seen to be believed. Many of the plates look as they were ready to be placed in the Vogue or Harper's Bazaar and it was learned that many of the students are actually doing work for the New Yorker, Vanity Fair and other leading publications. Even the freshman class apparently have ideas galore and most amusing are their marionnette plates.

Sympathetically arranged interiors for homes and enticing dress designs are also featured in the display. There are also modernistic textile designs and new ideas for wrapping paper. The display really has to be seen to be thoroughly appreciated, for time and space forbid enumerating of all its charms.

The New York School of Fine and Applied Arts, which has a branch in Paris, is the most up-to-date school in the country—possibly in the world—and its head, Frank Alvah Parsons, has been acclaimed as an art leader. He has written a number of books on the subject and will be the main speaker at the Eastern Art Exposition at Easter. In the New York School there are 905 students and in Paris 217, representing nearly every country. Last year there were four students from Vermont registered at the New York School.

The exhibit at the Library, which has been secured by the Art Department of the University of Vermont for the enjoyment of the people of Burlington, has been all over the country. From here, about April 12, it will be presented at Middlebury.

UNIVERSITY SINGERS GIVE LENTEN RECITAL

Lenten and Easter Music Presented by Choir and Glee Clubs Under Professor Bennett

Nearly a capacity audience filled the Ira Allen Chapel Sunday afternoon for the annual concert of Lenten and Easter music presented by the University choir, assisted by members of the men's and women's glee clubs under the direction of Professor Howard Gordon Bennett and with Miss Miriam Natilee Marston at the organ.

This hour of music in the beautiful chapel has come to be one of the delights of the Easter season to Burlington music lovers. Professor Bennett has developed an excellent choir from the many splendid voices at the University, and the concert as arranged by him has many impressive moments. Miss Marston brings out all the exquisite tone of the organ.

The program of Sunday was very similar to that given a year ago. Opening with the Chorale Prelude on "O Sacred Head, Now Wounded," by Bach, the program continued with a hymn, Pange Lingua Gloriosi Proelium Certaminis, by Gregorian, sung by the choir outside.

Then came the Processional hymn, "O Sacred Head, Now Wounded," as the black-gowned choir proceeded up the aisle to the platform.

The program which followed was excellently rendered throughout, and the soloists deserve special mention for their singing. These included the Misses Hazel Ladd and Mailla Putnam, sopranos; Miss Catherine Bassett, mezzo-soprano; Miss Marion Baldwin, contralto; Roger Allbee, tenor; Rodney May, tenor; and Harrison Goddard, baritone.

Young Vocalists Popular

Practically all of these young vocalists have been heard in previous concerts at the University and have made themselves deservedly popular with the discerning music lovers of the city. They were heard Sunday to good effect in several airs from Handel's "Messiah" and in the solo parts of the lovely "Filii et Filiae."

The choir numbers included O Bone Jesu, by Palestrina; Ave Verum Corpus, by Mozart; Bach's final chorus from the "St. Matthew Passion"; Christ is Arisen, with an organ prelude arranged by Professor Bennett; "Give Ear, Give Ear, Good Christian Men" from the Piae Cantiones; "O Filii et Filiae"; and the ever-inspiring "Unfold ye Portals Everlasting," from "The Redemption" by Gounod.

The choir and the congregation sang a hymn, "The Strife Is O'er," which was followed by the prayer and benediction; the response "Christ Is Risen," sung softly in the distance; the recessional hymn, "Christ the Lord Is Risen Today"; and the organ postlude, "Alleluia."

The Rev. I. C. Smart assisted in the service with scripture reading and prayer.

Stude: "Say, what's the huge idea of wearing my raincoat?"

Roommate: "Well, I've got your suit on and I didn't want to get it wet."

A. T. O. WINS FRAT RELAY AND SIGMA PHI TAKES TRACK MEET DEFINITELY

Alpha Tau Omega Gets Loving Cup and Ten Points Toward Track Meet—Kappa Sigma, Second in Relay, Gets Five—Not Enough to Win Meet

Monday afternoon in the U. V. M. cage the Alpha Tau Omega relay team crashed through to beat the Kappa Sig team by two-fifths of a second in the final race of the Interfraternity tournament. As a result the Sigma Phis copped the interfraternity meet from Kappa Sigma, winning by four points. The Alpha Tau Omega team won the twelve laps in 2:52⅕ and the Kappa Sigs in 2:52⅖.

The winning team was made up of Kaziauskas, Bjorn, Halligan, and Bond. The men on the Kappa Sigma team were Jay, F. H. Woodward, LeBourveau, A. E. Woodward.

The winners in the three leagues were Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Sigma and Sigma Nu. In the semi-final race Kappa Sigma defeated Sigma Nu.

Relay league results:

ATTACKS "HELL WEEK" IN FRATERNITY INITIATIONS

Dean Goodnight, of the University of Wisconsin, in a recent issue of the trade magazine Fraternity, takes a slam at certain widespread fraternity failings, notably the institution known as "Hell Week" and the low scholastic ratings of fraternity bodies.

"Fraternalism, loyalty to the order and respect and esteem for older brothers cannot be beaten into a freshman with a heavy paddle. The nationals have long since realized this and have long been advising against it. A protected hell-week, in which freshmen are deprived of food and sleep, razzed and beaten, arouses the ire of parents, demoralizes the academic work of all concerned, and raises questions of the fraternity system on the part of faculty members. Furthermore, serious injury, even death, occasionally results. Texas is even now considering the abolition of fraternities because an initiate recently lost his life there through an initiation stunt. Only year before last, a dozen students of our own campus were hauled to the hospital suffering from mercury fume poisoning as a result of an initiation stunt, and the physicians tell me it was a close call. Several deaths might easily have resulted. But 'try and get' fraternities to give up hell-week and rough initiations! I have kept up a steady barrage on our Wisconsin fraternities for the last six years on this subject. Some, I am pleased to say, have reformed, some have modified the objectionable practices but others continue as of old!

Poor Scholarship

"Another serious charge which is brought against fraternities, and not unjustly, is that of a low grade of scholarship performance, of failing to realize to a proper degree the purpose for which both University and fraternity are organized and maintained. Again last semester, the scholastic average of all undergraduate fraternity men at Wisconsin was lower than the scholastic average of all undergraduate non-fraternity men. This is true in a majority of institutions I am told that the Interfraternity Conference, meeting at New York last month, regarded it as quite a triumph that 46 percent of all institutions reporting showed fraternity men a shade better in their studies than non-fraternity men, whereas the number had been only 43 percent the year before. I see no reason for any self-congratulation this side of 90 percent. The fraternities cheerfully 'admit' that all outstanding men on every campus are fraternity men. And it is true. Student leaders are almost invariably in fraternities. Fraternity men control student politics, manage student affairs, occupy all strategic positions, and carry on the student activities. That is the chief reason why they do not carry their studies as successfully as non-fraternity men. Every chapter hounds its men to get out into activities, thereby bringing glory to dear old Eta Alpha Pi.

"Activity" in the Ascendency

"The houses are kept in a state of turmoil at so many seasons of the year by political pow-wows, caucusses, canvasses, committee meetings and the like that the occupants, even those who are not directly interested are effectively prevented from doing good college work. The whole chapter is ordered out in the evening to see the frat bowling team compete in a match, to root for their basketball team in an interfraternity tournament. There is rushing. There are dances on Friday and Saturday nights at which the chapter must be properly represented. The poor kids don't get the requisite time and quiet to do their work well. It isn't that they haven't the ability. They have. I think it is quite true, that the average of ability in fraternity men is above that of the non-fraternity men. But the fraternity demands so much that its members are prevented from doing well what they come to the University to do. Thus the fraternity becomes an obstacle to the fundamental purpose of the University. Frankly, it is so regarded by a good many faculty folk, as well as outsiders. And the scholarship statistics the country over seem to justify the conclusion."

CAT'S MEOW

—SPORTING EDITOR—

Best of luck—baseball team!

We shouldn't expect too much from such a young and inexperienced team but a few victories would be appreciated.

Vermont's game with Georgetown will be the latter's second game of its season.

The Catamounts have the best chance in years to defeat Keady's Marines who are slightly weaker than usual.

Maryland has a veteran squad to pick a nine from this year.

The New York City teams are unknown quantities now since they don't do anything more in baseball than teams in Northern New England until after the spring recess.

Vermont is very fortunate in being able to send a baseball team southward every spring. Very few smaller colleges can do this.

Holy Cross and Boston College teams have both left for the warm regions.

Though Coach Hugh Duffy of Boston College is taking sixteen players South they are not certain of holding their positions. The calibre of the candidates at the Heights this season is such that when the squad returns home the battle will be on once again.

Holy Cross baseball hopes dashed temporarily when Fitter Cahill who had been shifted over from third base where he has starred for two years to shortstop was hurt. His injury, originally believed to be a bone break, proved to be only a sprain.

The five Tufts battery candidates who are still in doubt about their scholastic standing will have their minds set at rest before the team leaves for New York on Monday. A great deal of the success of the Tufts nine this season will depend on whether they get back into good standing or not.

In answer to a call for infielders and outfielders for the Middlebury College nine twenty-five men reported to Harvey Hessler, new Middlebury coach. With Porter Field still a sea of mud the upper campus of the college was used for the first outdoor session of the season. Of the men who reported Hessler had three veteran outfielders and four infielders.

North Carolina defeated Springfield College 12 to 9 and 5 to 1 at Chapel Hill this week.

Bruins and Rangers are in the Stanley Cup hockey play-off this week-end. This is the world series of hockeydom.

GRID DRILL PROGRAM STARTS ON APRIL 15

On April 15 spring football practice will start under the direction of Coaches Rattan and Tully.

Practice will be held for three weeks, five days each week. Much of the drilling will be done on the back campus, but during the third week of training the scene of activities will be shifted to Centennial Field where scrimmages will be held. The last day of practice will be May 3.

In view of this short period and the benefit that the players and coaches will derive from the work all men with potential ability along football lines are urged to signify an intent to report, to one of the coaches as soon as possible.

Among those who have already signed up are:

Captain Levine, DeRose, Dewitt, Dorey, Burstein, Huey, Sirois, and Segal, letter men of the past fall, Goursen, who made his letter as full back in 1927, Allerton and Codding of the 1928 squad, Polofsky, Bowers, Bedell, Collins Brown, Creaser Davis Isenberg, and Manning of last season's frosh team. Bernstein, who played forward on the basketball team and was a star of the 1930 freshman grid outfit, Kelsey, Berry, Blanchet, Aronson, Burr, Dober, Murad, Towne, Tupper Varricchione Wallace, Taft, Tilley, Bond, Strauss Lawrence, and Schechtman.

Naval Athletes

Athletics were so popular at the United States naval academy that there were enough teams at the academy during the last year to require no less than 245 captains, or a captain to about every seven students.

NEWMAN CLUB CHAPLAIN ELUCIDATES EVOLUTION

Points Out Compatibility of Religion to Science—Sunday Night Meeting a Success

Last Sunday evening in the Cathedral High School the members of the Newman Club of the University of Vermont were treated to a very instructive and interesting address on Evolution by their pastor, the Rev. Robert F. Joyce, U. V. M. '17.

Clearly elucidating every phase of the various scientific theories having to do with evolution, the chaplain easily demonstrated that there is no conflict between the Roman Catholic faith and the established facts of science. The theory that plants and animals have come through a series of progressions does not contradict the Bible nor any doctrine of faith. He read statements from a number of contemporary scientific authorities to show that the origin of man is still shrouded in a great deal of mystery for the scientist. It was pointed out that the soul, being spiritual, is not a subject for biological investigation but belongs in the realm of the philosophical. The fact that truths discovered by different sciences cannot contradict each other was cited and the impossibility of revealed truth being in conflict with the scientific truth since God is the author of both.

Starting with the views of pseudo scientists and theories of publicity seeking young professors of science who persisted in regarding the Bible as a scientific tract he showed that the revelog of their argument availed nothing in the eyes of any educated person. He further strengthened this assertion by citing the well known fact that the people invariably say that the sun rises and sets which as a matter of scientific fact does no such thing. That is one reason why he continued, the Biblical history of the origin of the world and its inhabitants must be taken as a whole to mean and emphasize the fact that God created everything; how he did it lies in the power of the God given intelligence of man to work out. That is one of the prime reasons why the members of the Roman Catholic Church have no fear that science will ever contradict their faith.

As examples of the work of Catholic scientists he mentioned the astounding and little known fact that among the first persons ever to express views on the subject of evolution as a possible scientific theory, centuries before Darwin was born, was none other than the great St. Augustine.

Of more recent and noteworthy scientists in general Pasteur the noblest of them all the Agamemnon of scientists in the medical field who presented an Illiad of cures to mankind was pointed out as a Roman Catholic scientist who clearly recognized the totally different spheres of religion and science and died in fame with the latter, and in peace with the former. Mendel, the discoverer of Mendel's Law, and Wassman were other modern scientists, both of them Roman Catholic clergymen whose biological work has won them undying recognition.

After the address questions from the members were satisfactorily answered and a discussion of various other matters followed. This being concluded some of the more talented members entertained and refreshments were served. Because this meeting, held in the nature of an experiment was so successfully attended the next monthly meeting will be held at a similar time and place.

Gentlemen:

Replying to your circular letter of June 29, be informed that your sample packages were received. With them I received the pamphlet describing your product, which I was able to enjoy reading because there was not in the circular matter the usual distasteful sales talk which makes the recipient of a sample package feel obligated or uncomfortable.

I believe your practice of giving your prospect a sample and then letting him make up his own mind will gain you many more customers than will the usual modern sales practice of pushing the product down the prospect's throat. As a matter of fact, since receiving your sample and your advertising matter I smoked up the sample package and have since purchased a number of cans from neighborhood dealers, all of whom carry this tobacco in a city of this size.

I have found Edgeworth to be a satisfactory blend at a very reasonable price, and although my past acquaintance is brief, I look forward to a long membership in the Edgeworth Club.

Yours very truly,
Jeff Corydon

DANCING TO DEFICITS

A net loss of ninety dollars on a dance originally reported to have reached the heights of success is a serious matter, for only gross mismanagement could have brought about a situation in which the Sophomore class treasury was required to pay so large a share of the expense of entertaining forty-six couples.

Glance over the financial statement just made public by Dr. Grout and note such items of expenditure as $70 for an orchestra, $85 for favors and $23 for decorations. It is not the comparatively large sums that astonish even the casual observer but the total absence of economic management, the easy-come easy-go attitude of the committees in charge which alone could have produced such a complete fizzle that not merely astonishes but shocks.

There is no reason whatsoever for expending $70 for an orchestra to play for less than fifty couples. There is no reason whatsoever for expending $85 on favors for a Sophomore Hop unless there is positive assurance of a very large attendance. Least of all is there reason for a deficit resulting from a dance in the city of Burlington.

Edmunds High School, although it holds frequent dances, reports no deficit of anywhere near such proportions resulting from dances in recent years. Profits have been turned into losses, while the three dollars extracted from each student activity fee to meet class expenses diminished to meet the deficits of formal dances held for the pleasure and entertainment of forty-six couples.

Who is responsible?

The president of the class appoints the chairman for the dance and he, together with other committeemen similarly appointed, dictates the financial policy of the affair.

No more inefficient and ridiculous system was ever devised. Committee appointments have become the exclusive property of fraternity combines, to be parcelled out on the basis of fraternity strength. No one need show any special abilities along financial grounds to secure such an appointment. It is simply an honor to be recorded in the Ariel alongside with other achievements when one has reached his junior or senior year.

The system is as futile as would be a general class election for such a purpose, but with none of the democratic forms of the latter. The only way out of a badly muddled situation seems to be a resort to the old method of "scrubbing." Only a man who deems the position important enough and worthwhile enough to give his time and effort to it should receive the honor. Most of the committees might well be dispensed with and the whole matter entrusted to two or three capable directors to be selected on the basis of their work by a faculty member especially designated to supervise them.

What has been the situation in other instances in the past? We are not told. But, bearing this instance in mind, let us resolve to avoid a repetition of it in the future.

DOES IT PAY?

The average student enters a university after completing twelve to fourteen years of primary and secondary education. He believes that during this formative period he has imbibed sufficient knowledge to render him capable of performing many tasks in the actual mark-a-day world. Consequently, whenever he becomes discouraged or dissatisfied with his college education, whenever he feels that he "is not getting enough out of all this silly theory," he advances the time-worn argument that he can "make more by stepping out and finding a good job."

Now, it is not our endeavor to attempt to keep a good man down, but the fact is that the law of averages is decidedly against his rising from office boy to third vice-president in eleven short and pleasant years. Indeed, conservative federal statistics show that only thirty-one men in five million, with no schooling, become distinguished, thus giving the man with no schooling one chance in 161,290; that 808 men in 33,000,000 with an elementary education attain distinction, or one in 40,841; that 1,245 men in 2,000,000 with a high school education attain distinction, or one in every 1,608; that 5,768 men in every 1,000,000 with a college education attain distinction, or one in every 172. Note the college man's advantage here.

Furthermore, less than one per cent of American men have been college graduates, yet from that less than one per cent have come: 55 per cent of our presidents; 54 per cent of our vice-presidents; 62 per cent of our secretaries of state; 50 per cent of our secretaries of the treasury; 30 per cent of our members of Congress and 47 per cent of our Speakers of the House.

Ah yes; granted that a college education broadens, deepens, and refines the mind, that it more often leads to distinction and all that—but where's the money end of the inducement to gain the coveted sheepskin?

The Brooklyn Teachers' Association made a study of this angle in 1909, and learned that "the man who left school at 14 will average $650 per year; that the man who left school at 18 will average $1,550 per year; and the man who finished college will average $2,923 per year."

It was then calculated that if the boy quit school at the age of 14, grammar school, he would have a normal expectancy of life of 46.16 years, and at an average earning capacity of $650 per year, would earn $30,004 in his lifetime. If the boy quit at the age of 18, he would have a normal expectancy of 43.53 years, and at an average earning capacity of $1,550 per year would earn a total of $67,471.50, an increase of $37,467.50 in total earnings over his grammar school competitor. If the youth finished college, say at 22, his future life was estimated at 40.85 years. With an average earning capacity of $2,923 per year, he would earn a total of $119,404.50, a difference of $51,933.00 over his high school competitor and $89,400.50 over his grammar school-mate. All of the figures, of course, are based upon the assumption that the boy does his work well, no matter what his age on leaving school, and that he wins the normal promotions in his line of business.

You wish to leave college? Very well. You believe you'll be happier if you do? Perhaps. You feel "that you'll make more if you do?" Hardly!

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

The Car of Frau Louise Wrey

The Wednesday morning edition of The Newcastle Sentinel carried the following A head:

FOUR KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Milford Turnpike Scene of Smashup Early This Morning

Four young members of the cast of "Don't Kid Yourself" were instantly killed when the heavy sedan car in which they were riding turned over on the Milford Turnpike stretch of the Boston Post Road at about 4.30 this morning. The two young men and young women were Bert Russell, Clayton Haff, Frances Wrey and Marjorie Stephens. They were members of the cast of "Don't Kid Yourself," a musical comedy which completed a two-day stand in New Haven and which opens in New York at the Earl Carrol Theatre sometime next week. Miss Wrey was the leading lady, the rest had minor rôles.

At the time of the accident Miss Wrey was driving. Mr. Russell was seated beside her and the other couple occupied the rear seat. They had told Mr. James R. Broderick, manager of the production, that they would meet the company in New York City and were probably on their way there when the crash occurred.

Police Fail to Find Reason

Preliminary police investigation failed to disclose any reason for the accident. The road at this point is newly-laid concrete perfectly straight and capable of accommodating five cars abreast. Moreover, there were no traces of skid marks on the pavement. The car seemed simply to have left the road, turning turtle and killing all four occupants. Both the local police and state troopers from the Bridgeport Barracks are probing the accident and Coroner Thompson will conduct his official investigation on Saturday, the 28th.

After this guy Thompson, the coroner fails to find any criminal responsibility or anything else, for that matter, I decides to get the low down on the whole affair. I had read about it in the home papers that they had sent up to my fishing camp in Maine. And to be frank, I took a pile of interest in the thing. Never handled a case before in which show people were mixed up; always wanted to though. So I decided I'd lop a few weeks off my stay up here and get back home and find out what it was all about. No, I wasn't called in on the thing. Just wanted to start something on my own hook.

And I do plenty! Here's the way I work it. I've got a system all my own. Most of the gum shoes collect all the tiny details and put these together to make the whole. I don't. I pick out the biggest thing and follow it through—trace it way back, all the way back until I find the tiny details. It worked in the past. I knew it would work here.

It was easy. Someone had been killed—four of 'em, in fact. Out of the four three were mere details and one was big. That one was Frau Wrey. How do I get that way? Well, she was a star, she was beautiful, she was very wealthy and they had all been driving in her costly sedan. O. K. So I start with her.

She was born in Traynor, Ill. I hops the rail pounder for Traynor. There I learn that she actually was twenty-two years old at the time of her death, that her father owned a small grocery and that she had been considered a very nice girl. I go to New York and see Broderick. I ask him just three questions.

"What show did Miss Wrey first star in?"

"Who was the big bug connected with that show?"

"Is he still living, and if so where?"

Then, with this information in mind, I go to see Charles G. Austin, the man who made Miss Wrey the star she was. I don't tell him who I am. I don't even give him time to think. In short—I open fire on him, taking a long shot.

"Mr. Austin, I'll ask the questions. You better talk and talk straight."

He talks, but not straight. So I stop him, hand him a cigar and tell him all about the third degree and other pleasant pastimes that the station boys use. He never takes his cold, expressionless eyes off me. And he talks. He talks muchly and at great length. Sure, he met the girl when she first came to the city and she was the typical country girl coming to town for the first time. Coming to town to go big. She did go big, but she paid more than it was worth. She paid it to Mr. Charles G. Austin, stage producer, financier and social whirlwind. But she had told him that if it ever became known she'd kill herself immediately. Yes, somehow she'd kill herself.

He still liked her. Had just bought her that new car, for example. Yet liquor can work wonders. It can make men talk. In this case it made two of them open their silly yaps. Austin talked to Bert Russell; and you can take my word for it that Russell let drop some crack about it to his companion at the wheel while they were clipping it down the Milford Turnpike.

The result was only natural. When you've steeled yourself to do a thing if something happens, when that something does happen, you don't even have to think about what you're to do. Miss Wrey probably didn't. The thing was out; couldn't keep it hid anymore; probably didn't care such a lot about the glare and tinsel after she'd gotten it—not at that price, anyway. Might as well get rid of herself and the one who knew. She did.

S'funny how these cops don't try to get beneath the cold surface; to get at the really human things in life. But then, that's how I make my living. I should worry!

SAYINGS OF NAUTES

Following are the three prize answers to the question on the ballot:

Are You in Favor of

A. Present Prohibition
B. Present Bootlegging
C. Repeal of Either
D. Repeal of Both
E. Better and Cheaper
F. More Prohibition
G. Modification of any of the present
H. Odorless liquor
I. Public Censorship
J. Something or other

And if so or not, why?

Answer No. 1 to Why . . . .

You will notice, if you read closely, that I vote neither for against, or undecided on the whole lot of the International Society for the Prevention of Cheating Bootleggers (I. S. P. C. B. . . .) And why. From childhood days I have had an open mind . . . mind. In fact I may say without exaggeration or hyperbole or any figure of speech, including anacoluthon, prolepsis, tmesis, and epiphora, I was famed, renowned and known far and wide, all over the universe for my open-mindedness. (But remember, I am telling you in strictest confidence, [and I have strict (i.e., if, L., etc., limited confidence in you], so do not let any of this get bruited abroad once prohibition is permitted to brew). Hence . . . read so many questions which I with two strokes of my pencil (my pen is mightier than the sword if I use a pencil,) settle forever all ing the disputes of other men . . . open mind rebelled, refused, would certain judgment, to take away life the enjoyment of so many . . . So I opened my mind wide enough understand and entertain (at a party in the town, village, or burg of Winooski) all three of on all the points that were not included on the ballot. That is the reason why I voted as I did.

(Unsigned)

P.S.—I forgot to write my name but it's too late now. Somebody my mind was open on all sides that what went in, continued on I don't know what he meant but seems all right.

Answer No. 2.

Hon. Mr. Vilius,

Dear Sir:

It has been my distinguished ure to vote on the right side of straw ballot conducted by the F. A. I mean by that, not the side of the question, but the right of the sheet. You will notice voted in favor of A., Present bition System. My reasons are complex, compound and Inprimis, I have lived most of under the present system. am, being Conservative. Liberal Democratic, naturally averse change. In the second place words "Present Prohibition" are nicely illiterative, and all men have loved illiteracy. In fact can say that "Dees ees a which I could not if there were tem. Fourthly, if this system should be repealed think of bootleggers, importers, analytillers, etc., that would immediately be impoverished. In the first they would probably start selling quor at the Coffee Corner, and sell enough bad stuff there to fact there are so many reasons I couldn't see my way clear night; I can't remember what opened) to vote other than as I did.

Sincerely your friend,

Hon. J. P. Hobey

c/o Sheriff Todd.

Answer No. 3.

The reasons I voted as I did Modification of some or none questions (A. through G. Public Censure of Bootleggers follows:

1. A verb never modifies a word, there are no verbs in A, therefore, modification is a For modifiers of A., I suggest ful, or successful; for modifiers I advocate anti-, pro- or con- ficators of C. I advocate the lemon: in the case of D I would be modified to include lime whisky; while in the case of teen bottles should be used should be reduplicated

2. As my vote suggests, I modification of all or none nation of most. That is, tournament of this sort must be eliminated to reach

3. In short good English Science requires nothing.

4. "Bootleggers," as . . . "are the cynosure of all eyes." With such great public sinecure (the bootlegging is of course advisable.

BOSTON HERALD TELLS OF OVERWORKED YOUTH

The following quotation from the Boston Herald could be applied equally well to college men and women:

"The busiest person we know is a boy in prep school. He has literally no time to himself. He rises at 7 o'clock, goes to bed at 10 or 11 o'clock and between whiles studies and recites Latin, French, mathematics, English, physics, history, the teacher of each subject jealously demanding the major share of his attention; he has compulsory exercise, he goes to a class meeting, he tries for the school paper, he attends a Glee Club rehearsal, he studies his part in the school play, he snatches a few odd moments to do some 'required reading.' Of reading for its own sake he does very little, having neither time nor energy nor possibly inclination. Reading for its own sake demands that you sit down quietly with a book, free of interruptions. Should he do that, he would have to do it to the neglect of something else, and suffer the consequences. Nor does he ever have time to sit down quietly with himself, and just think things over. Alas! most school teachers would look upon the mere suggestion of such a proceeding with stern disfavor. At best he manages now and then, sometimes in the dark after lights out, what he calls a bull session with his mates. In these sessions many things are discussed, from the nature of God to the cut of Bill Brewster's new tux, and the boys regard them highly, though they are ignored by the College Board examiners.

"The schools, of course, blame the college entrance requirements for their hectic pace. That particular buck has been passed till it is wearing a bit thin. If schools have no larger purpose than to shoehorn boys into Harvard and Yale, they aren't worth their endowments. It isn't that boys shouldn't study, shouldn't be kept busy and alert, physically and mentally. But no one, at any age, least of all in youth, can absorb a constantly repeated schedule of studies and activities and gain personal value from them, without time to pause and think them over and let them sink in. Why do our schools cut to a pattern? Why is the unusual boy generally so unhappy in them? Because the unusual boy insists on thinking things over, insists on reading for himself, and has to break the schedule to do it. Boys may be, as Arnold said, young barbarians. But most of them, also, are sensitive and sentient beyond our guess. In them, no less than in men, deeds are born of thought, and in silence the thought matures. They need some time to themselves, when they are left alone. Many will abuse it, as their masters will hasten to tell you. But what of that? They will not abuse it more than schedule is abused now by the, to them, almost meaningless drive of absorption so their school can have a high standing at the College Boards. They are graduated standardized to a factory pattern, so far as human beings can be standardized, victims of a relentless schedule and the fetish of 'school spirit.' If you have a son in prep school, ask him about it."

Prom Without Males

An orgy of rather peculiar nature was recently held at the Florida State College for Women. The affair was a miniature prom, sponsored by the junior class and featured by the exclusion of all members of the male sex. The affair, however, was strictly formal. Refreshments in the form of root beer and pretzels were served in the swimming pool room which for the evening had a regular bar fixed up around the walls. The intricate details of the affair have been withheld but pamphlets on "Rushing Rules for Popular Girls" were distributed.

Campus Philosophy

You have two alternatives. Your professor is easy or hard. If he is easy you don't need to worry. If he is hard you have two alternatives. Either you study hard or you bluff. If you study you don't need to worry. If you bluff you have two alternatives. Either your bluff works or it doesn't. If it works you don't need to worry. If it doesn't you have two alternatives. Either you're conditioned or you flunk. If you are conditioned you don't need to worry. If you flunk you won't need to worry any longer. Therefore why worry?

Check-up

In every organized and orderly business there are periods set aside to allow those in charge to review, improve the condition of the business and to note the progress that has been made. We, as college students, are engaged in a very important personal business, namely that of educating ourselves and bettering our chances of success in life. Are we remembering to "take stock"? Now is the time to take an inventory of one's self and take the proper steps to strengthen the weak points in our campaign of success in life.—Michael Covarrubias.

In spite of a $5000 offer by a safety razor manufacturer to stop a beard raising contest students at the University of Illinois are determined to carry out their plans. About 2,000 men have entered the contest.

Miss Bradish, instructor in singing at the University of Vermont, will be the vocal coach. Professor J. T. Metcalf has charge of the dramatics, as last year. The same persons will assist in the production as did last year.

No Rules at Utah

Co-eds at the University of Utah learn many lessons in ordering and regulating their lives as a result of the very lax rules in force. There are no hours stated nor rights specified for dates. The girls are allowed to come and go at will. As a result there is more self reliance, and co-eds seem to do as well in scholarship as at any University.

Dean Speedy Abolishes All Finals at One Broad Stroke

Gives Skynic Reporter His Reasons for Startling New Program in Exclusive Interview—Stresses Brilliancy of Students and Vermont's State of Finances

DEAN'S POPULARITY ON CAMPUS HAS BIG JUMP

Dean Speedy, the well beloved head of the College of Marts and Finances (as well as of the Automatics Department), has issued an announcement that is, we are confident, of the greatest interest to all students of the LUV'M. This is straight from the office, as he issued it.

Owing to the unexpected intelligence and A grades of the entire student body, and for various other reasons, there will be no final examinations at the University this year.

(Signed) ACTING DEAN ELISHA SPEEDY.

When your reporter read that notice on the Lottabull Board, he immediately went to Dean Speedy to get the low-down on the "various other reasons."

"Yes," remarked the Dean, smiling cheerily and tapping a reflective "Happy Strike" on the arm of his chair, yes, this is an unusual situation. I have personally been there many years, but never have I felt the urge to do such a thing, and very likely never will again." Observing your reporter's sad countenance he remarked cheerily, "Here, lad, give me a light. And by the way have you a cigarette lighter? No? Well, I'll tell you how to make a cigarette lighter (if you take Calculus you know anyway). It always works, too. Take out some of the tobacco."

Out of deference to authority the people's representative (referring to your reporter) immediately fell into an uncontrollable spasm of laughter, a paroxysm of mirth.

"Paroxysm, laroxysm, naroxysm, bearrocksysm, laringitis. "Alas!" quoth Dean Speedy. "Here's why. Last year I visited quite a number of hospitals for the segregation of the demented (vulgarly termed 'insane asylums'). I noticed there quite a number of interesting experiments. So I took it into my head to make an experiment here at this—ah—ah—instit—, college. If the President of the United States stops bootlegging,—as is to be hoped—(you know you can't stop the breaking of a law without abolishing the law—see Blackstone, White Owl, Robert Burns, etc.)—maybe we can have a happy world. Tra-la-la-la-la-la-la' Have you any apples today, d-ay, d-ay? Whoopeeeee?!! I'm a wild and woolly Indian from the open and untamed wastes of the West."

"Ah, and did you have anything else in mind in making this announcement?"

"My lad," said the Dean, blowing smoke ellipses and hyperboles reflectively, "There is a great Power that watches over us and guides our destinies. This is not for publication, but confidentially, is there anything wrong in that? Zowieee! I'm Helen Walkingstick. No, there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip, and who knows what may happen before 1827 is up.

Le roi est mort. Vive le roi. Sacré bleu, ventre bleu, corbleu, sang bleu, and other French idioms of domestic sociology. By the way, I've decided to take on every third freshman as a prof next year."

"Yes?"

"Yes."

"In what department?"

"Political science, economics, kindergarten 11 and 12, 101, 13, 401, 1913, 1776, and 1910, automatics, bimistry and tatting. Keep it a secret though, as it has yet to have the approval of the secretary of war and the Liberian government."

"Ah, now, Dean, and what is your opinion on the Lindbergh-Morrow situation?"

"Ah, I was afraid of that. It's a bad example to the youth of the country. Everybody will want to follow his example, and some will do so."

"How, by marrying Anne Morrow?"

"Oh shut up."

"Is that all you have to say?"

"Not at all. One primary reason for making this announcement was that we must make money."

"Yeh," remarks the reporter, "everybody's gotta live, even the garbage

JACK ROBBINDAUGHTER TO SUPERVISE KNITTING CLASSES AT VERMONT

Popular Physical Training Professor Deemed Well Trained for New Work by Present Position—P. T. Hank to Assist

Mimicking Tunney, the prize-fighter who could lecture on Shakespeare between bouts, "Jackdaw" as he is affectionately called by ye sons and daughter, will bend his delicate frame to the thimble trade. Wistfully acknowledging his intended career, he says, "It will be the greatest pleasure of my humble life to nobly supervise the thread and needle trade." We, who know him, can well believe it. Yet for the benefit of those who may never know him I will write a brief sketch of his official duties as leg puller in yonder gym. We will view him during one of his typical P. T. classes.

Mutely sweating, he stands facing his class. "Once more," he bellows, "rise up on your toes." While the class is standing on their tip toes, he proudly reflects how he is raising the morals of the school. Continuing these exercises, a little while before the end of the hour, he is surprised that every one in his class can not twist himself into a knot. "Alas," he cries, "that I should live to see such a bunch of bananas. Look at me!" Proudly reversing his torso to the amused glances of the entire class, he displays his pantomime. "This," he yells at the same time tweezing an unborn hair from his chest, "is the limit." All the class nod in affirmation.

"We will now proceed with the deep knee bending exercises. Do it the same way as I do." By way of illustration he started to do it, but as his knees were rather squeaky he desisted from it and yelled, "Heave ho, boys, now that I've shown you the correct method to balance your spinal column in coordination with your clavicular area, bend, bend, bend that's what I'm proud to have you do, and I'll have you know that I'm a conscientious cuss, by jimminy." All the class nod in affirmation.

"This next exercise is done in twenty counts. If you pay strict attention to the twenty counts, and watch my movements, you'll acquire the very same form that is so characteristic of me." Standing on the top of one's head was done to the first count. Balancing on the left arm was the next, and so on until the last count found you so twisted that, as "Jackdaw" had promised, you thought you were he. The worst of all evils. And so to his question of whether we feel as he does, all the class nod in affirmation.

The last exercise was singularly designed by him to fill each student with the very same magnetism that he believed resided in himself. It consisted of striking one's chest with the palm

THOUSANDS JAM CHAPEL WEDNESDAY MORNING

Packed to the very rafters was the Ira Allen Chapel last Wednesday morning, as thousands of wild, of eager students fought to gain entrance to the service at which the Rev. Dr. DePlore spoke. Dr DePlore is pastor of the Reformed Reformist Church of Cicero, and exchange pastor of the Holy Rollers First Congregation in nearby Chicago. He is president of the Anti-Nicotine League and a widely known enemy of the gangster and bootlegger. Millions know him as the "radio healer of the heartsick."

His topic for sermon was: "Go West, Young Man, Go West, Their Football Teams Are Best."

This is an excerpt from Balaht (of Kirtloff's Balalalukai Orchestra), book I, chap. III, verse 21. Passing citizens were crushed in droves by the falling bricks that the crowd's thunderous applause jarred off the building at the topic's announcement.

Dr DePlore spoke long and earnestly about his mission in life, and, with smooth tongue, grew eloquent on the adjustment of religion to college life In ten minutes the shores of the multitude jolted the city for miles.

In true movie style, DePlore's sermon had no connection with his topic while he held the audience sleep-bound his confederates went through the multitude, netting forty three dollars and twenty two cents in nickels, dimes and pennies, and one second-hand math book. Nobody showed for the 10:30 classes.

DEBATERS OUTSHOUT NORWICH ARGUERS

Clinch State Title by Proving to Three Expert Judges That Bones Should be Eliminated from Codfish

NOSLEN, NAMSIL, SRAES RAVE ON FOR VERMONT

Showing the superiority of calcium nitrate to bones, the Catamount debating team last night took a 2-1 decision from the Norwich debating team. "Resolved that bones should be eliminated from codfish," was the subject of the dissension which ended in a broken window, two broken chairs, three broken heads and four broken arguments. Vermont, upholding the affirmative of the question, having lost only to Middlebury and St Michael's, now claims the state championship

"This is an outrage!" cried the chairman, opening the debate "The jury system should not be abolished!" After it had been carefully explained to him that Noone was concerned with the jury system three pails of water sufficed to bring him to himself

Noslen, first speaker for the affirmative, clearly defined the issues He characterized the cod as "a fish of cod . . a fish of bone whose skin shone . . like the uniform of a Norwich cadet." The speech concluded with a free-for-all fight in which Norwich was disqualified for kicking and scratching.

Norwich Conjugates

Norwich, on the negative, declared that "bones were, bones are and bones will be." Amid thunderous applause the cadets defined their position on the question "If you snatched a bone from a dog, where would you be?" cried the first negative speaker "And yet the affirmative has the temerity to suggest that we eliminate bones from codfish!" Foaming at the mouth he left the platform

Namsil, continuing the affirmative case, maintained that codfish bones are an economic waste Carefully he read through the cod liver oil advertisements, then passed out samples of codfish to the audience. "If this

Former Vermont Professor Murdered In Sigh Hall!!

Cueball J. Mallett, Last Year's Popular Dean of the Public Squeaking Department, Found Knifed and Hammered— X Marks the Spot—F the Reason

1310 STUDENTS HELD IN JAIL AS SUSPECTS

Slashed and beaten almost beyond the point of recognition was found the brutally murdered corpse of Cueball J. Mallet, at 5.15 this morning in a classroom on the third floor of the Sigh Hall. Professor Dummer A. Smokes, head of the University Botanical Department, discovered the mangled victim while taking one of his well-known periodical strolls through the building to see if all were well.

Chancing to open the door of a chemistry classroom which is never used except during four periods in the mornings and an equal number in the afternoons, Professor Smokes was properly shocked to find a torn and bleeding shapeless form lying in a tar end of the room. Knives, daggers, swords, bee bee guns, a Browning automatic shoulder weapon, model 1918, gas operated, and air cooled, and a 30-30 army rifle, model 1903, lay scattered about the room. Strips of flesh, shreds of skin, buckets of blood, pieces of bones were littered over the floor, desk and seats.

Two short, thick strips of Armco Ingot wrought iron (yellow spiral strips) covered with blood that was still warm, which lay to the right of the body, testified as to the awful beating the man had received at the hands of his dastardly enemies

"Oh Me, Oh My—" Sighs Professor

"Oh me, Oh my —" sighed Professor Smokes as he surveyed the ghastly spectacle before him

"And to think that it just had to happen up here, of all places."

He approached the still body, and carefully wrapped a pocket handkerchief about the fingers of his right hand, he knelt reverently and placed his thus covered fingers over Professor Mallet's heart To his surprise, he found that it was no longer beating

Must Be Dead!

"Why, he must be dead!" cried the Doctor of Botanical Research, and having reached that important conclusion, he flew from the hideous chamber to call the police

Police Arrive Immediately

Chief of Police Careless, and 36 of his valiant apostles arrived two hours later, immediately proceeding to investigate all details First, finger-prints were taken hither, thither and yon about the room Then, just as in "The Canary Molder Case," all articles within the place were carefully sealed to prevent their being moved or tampered with After that, the pieces of the former instructor in Public Squeaking were carefully swept up and deposited in an ash can "Ashes to ashes, etc.," hummed Burlington's Finest

Authorities Quiz Prof. Smokes

Professor Smokes was taken to the Burlington Memorial Auditorium where the following cross-examination took place: Chief of Police Careless: "Your name?"

Professor Dummer A Smokes. "Professor Dummer A. Smokes, Ph D., P D Q., M N X."

C O P C: "When did you first discover the victim?"

Prof D A S "At 5.15 this morning."

C O P C: "What were you doing in the Sigh Hall at that hour?"

Prof D A S "Sir!"

C O P C "I beg your pardon, Professor Did you recognize the victim?"

Prof D A S "Not at first However, I was able to identify him by his long, curly hair"

C O P C: "I see What is his name?"

Prof D A S: "Professor Cueball J Mallett"

C O P C: "His position?"

Prof D A S: "He was Dean of the Public Squeaking Department of the University last year"

C O P C: "In what part of the room did you find the deceased?"

Prof. D A S: "In the spot marked X."

C O P C: "Can you advance any

Dean Speedy Abolishes All Finals at One Broad Stroke

Gives Skynic Reporter His Reasons for Startling New Program in Exclusive Interview—Stresses Brilliancy of Students and Vermont's State of Finances

DEAN'S POPULARITY ON CAMPUS HAS BIG JUMP

Dean Speedy, the well beloved head of the College of Maths and Arts as well as of the Automatics Department, has issued an announcement that is, we are confident, of the greatest interest to all students of the U.V.M. This is straight from the office, as he issued it

... account to the unexpected intelligence and ... quality and for various other reasons, there will be no final exams ... at the University this year.

(Signed) ACTING DEAN EUSTIS SPEEDY

When your reporter read that notice on the Lottabull Board, he immediately went to Dean Speedy to get the low down on the "various reasons."

"Why," remarked the Dean, smiling ... and tapping a reflective "Hap ... Service" on the arm of his chair, "this is an unusual situation. JACK ROBBINDAUGHTER TO SUPERVISE KNITTING CLASSES AT VERMONT

Popular Physical Training Professor Deemed Well Trained for New Work by Present Position—P. T. Hank to Assist

Mimicking Tunney the prize fighter who could lecture on Shakespeare between bouts, "Jackdaw" as he is affectionately called by ye sons and daughter, will bend his delicate frame to the thimble trade. Wistfully acknowledging his intended career he says, "It will be the greatest pleasure of my humble life to nobly supervise the thread and needle trade." We, who know him, can well believe it. Yet for the benefit of those who may never know him I will write a brief sketch of his official duties as leg puller in yonder gym. We will view him during one of his typical P. T. classes.

Mutely sweating, he stands facing his class. "Once more," he bellows, "rise up on your toes." While the class is standing on their tip toes, he proudly reflects how he is raising the morals of the school. Continuing these exercises, a little while before the end of the hour, he is surprised that every one in his class can not twist himself into a knot. Alas, he cries, that I should live to see such a bunch of bananas. Look at me." Proudly reversing his torso to the amused glances of the entire class, he displays his pantomime. This he wells at the same time tweezing an ill born hair from his chest, is the limit. All the class nod in affirmation.

"We will now proceed with the deep ... bending exercises. Do it the same way as I do." By way of illustration he started to do it, but as he ... knees were rather squeaky he desisted from it and yelled. "Heave ho, see now that I've shown you the correct method to balance your spinal column in combination with your clavicular ... bend, bend, bend that's what ... I'm proud to have you do and I'll have you know that I'm a corpora... ... class as proudly." All the class nod in affirmation.

"This next exercise is done in twenty counts. If you pay strict attention to the twenty counts and watch my movements you'll acquire the very same form that is so characteristic of me." Standing on the top of one head was done to the first count. Balancing on the left arm was the next, and so on until the last count found you so twisted that an Indian had presented you a thought you were ... The worst of all evils. And so to the question of whether we feel as he does all the class nod in affirmation.

The last exercise was simply to be signed to him to fill each student with the very same sentiment that he has passed resulted in himself. It consisted of striking one chest with the palm

THOUSANDS JAM CHAPEL WEDNESDAY MORNING

Packed to the very rafters was the Ira Allen Chapel last Wednesday morning as thousands of wild-eyed students fought to gain entrance to the service at which the Rev. Dr. DePore spoke. Dr. DePore is pastor of the Reformed Reformed Church of Cicero and exchange pastor of the Holy Rollers First Congregation in nearby Chicago. He is president of the Anti-Nicotine League and a widely known enemy of the gangster and bootlegger. Millions know him as the radio healer of the heartsick.

His topic for sermon was "Go West Young Man Go West. Then Football Teams Are Bad."

"This is an excerpt from Balabit ... Kimball's Balalaikaisai Orchestra book I, chap. III, verse 21. Passing citizens were crushed in droves by the falling bricks that the crowd's thunderous applause jarred off the building at the topic's announcement.

Dr. DePore spoke long and earnestly about his mission in life and, with smooth tongue grew eloquent on the adjustment of religion to college life. In ten minutes the exodus of the multitude left the city for miles.

In true movie style DePore's sermon had no connection with his topic while he held the audience sheepbound his contributors went through the meal plate, netting forty-three dollars and twenty-two cents in pennies, dimes and pennies, and one second-hand watch back. Nobody showed for the 10:30 classes.

Clinch State Title by Proving to Three Expert Judges That Bones Should be Eliminated from Codfish

NOSLEN, NAMSIL, SRAES RAVE ON FOR VERMONT

Showing the superiority of eloquence over fact the Catamount debating outfit to bones the Calamount debating team last night took a 2-1 decision from the Norwich debating team. Resolved that bones should be eliminated from codfish was the subject of the discussion which ended in a broken window, one broken chair, three broken heads and four bruised ... Vermont, upholding the affirmative of the question having journeyed to Middlebury and St. Michael's now claim the state championship.

This is an outrage cried the chairman opening the debate. The jury system should not be abolished. After it had been carefully explained to him that Nestor was concerned with the jury system, three pails of water ... offered to bring him to consent.

Noslen first speaker for the affirmative clearly defined the issue. He characterized the cod as a fish of ... and a fish of bone ... whose ... shape like the picture of a Sioux ... which ended. The speech concluded with a plea to all fish to unite. Nor with, was dismembered by pitching and ... catching.

Norwich, on the negative declared that bones were hated, are and would ... with be. Amost thunderous applause the cadets defined their position on the question. If you snatched a bone from a dog what would you be? Dumb, cried the first negative speaker. And ... the affirmative has the temerity to suggest that we eliminate bones from ... codfish." Foaming at the mouth he left the platform.

Samsil, continuing the affirmative case maintained that codfish balls are an economic waste. Carefully he ... read through the cod liver oil advertisements then passed out samples ... of codfish to the audience. It was ...

At a billiard tournament he was once asked to tell a story and here it is in his own words.

The game of billiards has destroyed my naturally sweet disposition. Once, when I was an underpaid reporter in Virginia City, whenever I wished to play billiards I went out to look for an easy mark. One day a stranger came to town and opened a billiard parlor. I looked him over casually. When he proposed a game I answered "All right."

"Let them be balls around a little so that I can get your cast," he said, and when I had done so, he remarked "I will be perfectly fair with you. I'll play you left handed." I felt hurt. So he was crossed handed and had red hair and I determined to teach him a lesson. He won first shot and I took my half dollar and as I got over the opportunity to chalk my cue.

"You can play like that with your left hand," I said. "I'd like to see you play with your right."

"I can't," he said. "I'm left handed."

UNIVERSITY MUSEUM ACQUIRES NEW FOSSILS

Every spring the museum receives new fossils from the Googoobyme foundation. This spring was no exception. The following fossils were forwarded:

A well preserved skull of Prof. Fern, discovered under the Science Hall, with the sweet tooth and the wisdom tooth intact. Degeneration had not yet set in.

A well balanced skull of Prof. Robin daughter, found under the gym, imbedded between two Indian clubs, grinning toothlessly carelessly, in his typical debonair manner.

A well-pickled tonsil was also forwarded. As the label certified that it came from an individual named P. T. Hank, it was put on display as such on the side of P. T. Hank's skull which was found in an unmentionable place.

In accepting these gifts, the curator of the museum said:

"I have never yet received such a lot of old fossils. I hope that many more who are dead and don't know it, will be forwarded at once."

Marie: "Please keep your hands off me!"

Arthur: "Honey haven't you a heart?"

"Sure I have; but you've been looking for it long enough!"

Dear Friends:

I am a travelling salesman with a stock of travelling salesman jokes but the biggest joke I know is your tobacco. The only thing that prompts me to continue smoking Edgeworth (Plug Slice) is the fact that here in the wilds of Brattleboro it's the only stuff left. I guess the rest of the men wouldn't touch it, but anyway it makes me the victim—as they say in the Strange Interlude, or is it Desire Under the Elms?

Anyway, from now on, my motto shall henceforth be: "Don't feed the pipe that bites you!"

ABOLISH THE FACULTY!

Now is our chance, brethren. Sh!h! Oh tiptoe . follow me to the secret dungeon. Yes we're alone now. Lock the door. Gather 'round, boys, and consider, brethren.

Eh? All right! Now's our chance. Brethren, for hours on end, for weeks on end, for months on end, we have worked for; we have planned for; we have prayed for; we have sweated for. For whom? For "Them."

They have piled it and piled it with outrageous tasks, they have burdened us with countless and ever-increasing amounts of study; they have taxed us, they have ostracized us, they have insulted us, they have broken down Our Wills and have confiscated Our Spirits. We hate the faculty.

We have been crushed beneath the beheaded heels of Latin profs; we have been stepped upon by the spiked heels of math profs; we have been crushed in the dust by the O'sullivan heels of Es profs.

In mute agony and long-enduring silence we have stood this humiliation, this disgrace, these mental outrages and physical tortures. We have had to take tasks of misery and have hung by our thumbs from the scaffolds of degradation.

How long can flesh and blood stand such treatment? How long, brethren, I ask, can we continue to submit passively to such treatment?

Ah! I can hear you muttering among yourselves. I can see the Fascist whiteness in the flashing and gnashing of your sharp teeth; I can see the pallor-green of your sickness and the blush rays of your Cells and Sororities.

Good brethren! Then the spark of Life is not yet extinguished from your once free souls, your hearts still beat more quickly at the word Liberty.

Ah, brethren, I knew I could place faith in you. Liberty! Sweet Liberty!" Sweet, Sweet Liberty!"

Listen, brethren. Here is our plan. Tomorrow these despicable tyrants shall parade their way to chapel, to purge themselves of their sins. Is it to laugh? It is to weep! It is both to laugh and to weep! Ye of such sorry mold ever purge themselves of the iniquity, cowardice and superstitiousness that lies deep within their black and treasonous hearts.

Here, then, brethren, is what we must do. As they pass the Sigh Hall, brethren, I say, Rise, Rise and Rise signal rush out and stab as many of them as do not flee to their worthless lives. Ah, brethren, Good! What a morning! Hmm!

From that escape you shall be handled by Brothers Kane, Otak, Yee, Jones and Cleat who shall be in hiding at the Chalkings Liberty. You, brothers, shall not know your rather shall shoot. And upon pain of your lives shoot straight! Ah, Brethren, Lead! Cold, merciless death wingsig Lead!

To exterminate any who remain bombs shall be hurled into the various departments offices at two-minute intervals.

Have no fear brethren, we shall conquer. Justice and right shall triumph in the end and we shall be free. free as the little birds that flit from limb to limb and cry O so sweetly, "Cocoa! Cocoa!"

Obscenity lies in the mind and not upon the printed page or in the spoken word. It is subjective and not objective. Obscenity exists in the mind of the individual.

MUSINGS ON MOTHER GOOSE

Old Mother Hubbard
Went to the Cupboard
To get her poor dog a bone;
But when she got there
The cupboard was bare
And so the poor dog had none.

It is a sad commentary indeed on our modern college-bred civilization that we have so long neglected the pathos and beauty of the simple and natural. Who among us, for instance, has ever appreciated to its full extent the simple sentiment of "Old Mother Hubbard?"

"Old!"

With that word the rhyme begins. On that word it sounds its keynote.

"Old." A word, you will say, a mere word; but yet a word pregnant with meaning. "Old." It is decrepitude itself. It presents a vision of an ancient, careworn woman hobbling slowly and painfully to her destination.

And note too the word "mother." "Old Mother Hubbard."

What does not that word connote! It brings back recollections of sunny afternoons and the pictures in Mother's Day advertisements. We vision a woman who has known what it is to rock babies to sleep and now, in her old age, has become "Old Mother Hubbard." The grandeur of it all! She goes to the cupboard. Not to an elegant decorated shelf, not to a sumptuous, well-filled pantry; but to a cupboard—a wooden, clapped-to, crumbling, creaking cupboard. And there to get a bone!

A bone, mind you. Not a piece of delicious meat, not a luscious morsel for a pup to devour or an old dog to gloat over, but a dry, withered bone. One's heart aches to think of it.

The dog is not even named. It is not a doggie or a puppy, the affectionate pet and playmate of a happy household. It is but a "poor dog," and a "poor dog" it remains down to the very last line.

That last line is a masterpiece. There are no heartrending cries, no shouts, no alarms. Mother Hubbard does not burst into tears. The dog does not go mad with disappointment and chagrin.

They have resigned themselves to their fates.

"And so the poor dog had none."

That is all—not another word. A silence as of death succeeds. And it is the silence of an entombed fate.

It is sad. And it is sadder yet that no voice has yet been raised in behalf of Old Mother Hubbard's poor dog. One weeps to think that no one of our brilliant college grads has yet petitioned a patriotic congress to act, that no professor has yet raised his voice in stentorian protest.

Hugo? Bah! Dickens? Blah!

If you want real sentiment, real pathos, read again the pitiful rhyme of Old Mother Hubbard.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of The Cynic:

If you acknowledge how great a number of shabby books can be found on the shelves of the Billings Library, I possibly attempted to get a few names. In some one of our modern authors and I knew many could I find? As I said, I found an astonishing number none at all.

We realize of course an author proceeds to quite lately nothing while he is living. But when he is dead, then it is that he becomes worthwhile. A book must exist at least fifty years before it should consider it worth its while reading.

The truth is there are many writers today who are extremely worthwhile as worthwhile as many of the old masters. Why not put their books within the reach of college students at least? The city libraries throughout the country make some effort to gather as many of the better books of modern writers that they can. Is it not logical that a college library should contain such of the modern works of literature that are extraordinary that are bound by the national law of things to survive in the future?

Cabell, for instance, is not to be found at the Billings Library. Why not? Is not his essay "Beyond Life" worth a whole shelf-full of statistics on how many ears of corn were grown between the year 1801 and 1905 in Cuba? It seems that at least the better books by modern writers should be found in the Billings Library.

"It [illegible] like this," I expostulates. "It [illegible] seems that the Mapestic had enough [illegible] trouble to get ahold of "Art" Frown. [illegible] either that or it was blind luck. If [illegible] it was the best bit of luck that the [illegible] management ever had.

[illegible] how they got him I don't know, but [illegible] one thing is—he's 'way too good for [illegible] burg. Not that he isn't appreci[illegible]ated, don't get me wrong. Half the [illegible] age and 99 44/100 percent of the [illegible] house goes and sits on a hard bench [illegible] and occasionally glances at an in[illegible]ward fadeout just to hear him play. [illegible] But the funny part of it is—although [illegible] they go to hear him, they don't know [illegible] how good the stuff is that they're get[illegible]ting.

"A couple weeks 'fore vacation, the [illegible] powers saw fit to send three of us down [illegible] to the big city to perform certain plat[illegible]itudes in athletics called debating. Dur[illegible]ing our idle moments there, we'd wan[illegible]der in and out of the movies, mostly [illegible] Paramount. Jesse Crawford exer[illegible]cising the organ there, he's rated as one [illegible] of the best in the country, y'know—[illegible] records and all that. Well, get this—[illegible] taking into consideration the Packard [illegible] Jesse Crawford drives and the [illegible] Maxwell that "Art" has to work [illegible] with, there ain't such an awful lot of [illegible] diff between the two. And since this [illegible] ain't runnin' down the talented Jesse [illegible] you know what it means.

"Not only that, but I'll wager that [illegible] second "Art" Frown gets malaria [illegible] something, (saints forbid, knock on [illegible] wood, etc.) just that second does the [illegible] left side of the Mapestic's ledger [illegible] start to show a maze of red lines. [illegible] There that's that!"

"Oh, that place!" pipes up one of [illegible] the boys who, by the way, starred on [illegible] the Southern Trip. "If they show [illegible] any more westerns down there, [illegible] anybody'll think it's a livery stable!"

"Whaddye mean?"—from all sides.

"I refuse to answer on the grounds [illegible] that it might incriminate me."

"O K. Guess we get you anyway." [illegible] Going into Henrique's the other [illegible] night we see two co-eds, from the [illegible] classical course, too, sneaking [illegible] in the Orphan. Why all the secrecy, [illegible] dear? We won't breath your names [illegible] to a soul; they wouldn't stand for our [illegible] kidding so, though even our best friends [illegible] won't tell us. Last week, we saw [illegible] "Springtime In Vermont" at the Or[illegible]pheum. A perfect washout! A little [illegible] draggy in spots, but it had a perfect [illegible] riot of laughs.

"Well, here's to the fun we all have [illegible] at Art" Frown's Community singing! [illegible] Let's break it up, fellows! Gotta hit the [illegible] hay. It's the first six-weeks that [illegible]

K. A. T.

K A T held [illegible] at the local [illegible] Friday and Saturday night.

The Misses R. Weaver, J. Warped, G. Humbert and E. Core passed out the Ancient Moulds and Fortunate Punches.

At the tea which followed, the rain poured.

DELTA DELTA DELTA DELTA

(Down on the Delta, etc.)

Delta Delta, ad infinitum, held its annual spring washing at their club rooms on Champlain Street Saturday afternoon. Indeed, sheets could not tell what took place there.

The Misses H. Prentissky, J. Goodrichsky, J. Watermansky, V. Goodenoughsky, and M. Everestsky manned the tubs.

PI FACE PIE

Vermont Betabuck of Pi Face Pie held its semi-annual spring brawl at the C. of K. rooms on Friday night, preceeding Easter recess, in order to have time to recuperate during the vacation.

Joe Neckher's Vermonters deafened. The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. Weir Blind, Mr. and Mrs. Weir Deaf and Professor and Mrs. Weir Dumb.

Those in charge of the memorable event were: J. Wrong, P. Awwhynot, R. Lot, F. McCream, H. South-Willard and L. Backinup.

ALPHA HE FELTA

Upsigo Chapter of Alpha He Felta held an Easter Wrassle at its club rooms on the back steps of Morrill Hall on last Friday or Saturday night --they cannot remember which.

Doc Denyon furnished the reason for neighbors' complaints. No chaperones were present. The Misses E. Hanger, F. Great-Scott, J. Mavis, L. Gullet, and I. Warhorse were responsible.

ALPHA CRY NUTMEGA

Alpha Cry Nutmega did nothing before Easter vacation and is proud of it. However, they intend to make whoopee and merrie over the Fourth of July.

STIGMA DAMMA

Stigma Damma held a cute little tea dance at the club rooms in Mallett's Bay some months ago. The tea is over, but the memory lingers on. The guests were: Prof. and Mrs. Varie Hungrie and Mr. and Mrs. Natzo Hungrie. The hostesses included B. Lebaronwastes, R. Spearhead, C. Stonehead, L. Littlehead and L. Cochwalked.

KLAPPA MELTA

Alpha Hata Chapter of Klappa Melta held its annual Spring house cleaning today, tomorrow and until finished. The following swept all aside: H. Grantmelife, E. Pshaw, E. De Brooms and M. Pierce-Arrow. The following washed windows: E. Lacey, R. Downtown and C. Grimmm.

A good time was had by all who were absent.

Grey Liars, men's honorary literary society, will hold its next meeting on the back porch of the new Slade Asylum for Women. Professors Gass, Spiel, Blow and Metcow will expostulate, gesticulate and expectorate.

Big Dance at the B. H. S. Cowbarn next New Years. Fifty cents (50c) a yoke. Bring your own balloons.

C.* [illegible] and the Dean's List, they [illegible] rate in Burlington, Winooski and Essex Junction combined is greater than the infant mortality rate in Hoboken. "Show us a better plan," went up the cry of the second speaker as the chairman kicked him off the stage.

Declared Sraes of Vermont: "A better plan exists." He then went on to show the superiority of halibut to mackerel winding up with an impassioned plea from the Declaration of Independence and the Rutland Rail road timetables.

"This is a frame-up!" cried the last Norwich speaker. Gesticulating wildly, he replied with perfect coolness to every argument of the affirmative. Wild applause greeted every remark as soon as he had finished talking.

Ends With Rebuttal

A three-man rebuttal concluded the debate, each speaker refuting in detail the arguments of his opponents. As the second rebuttalist opened, the two teams, after secret conference, agreed to change the question. The judges voted for Vermont. Soup was served after the debate, inverting the ancient formula to read: "After the nuts, the soup."

Judge Ebenezer McCarthy of the West Hinesburg Divorce Court, John W. Wensyzclos, Professor of Etiquette in the Burlington College for Women and Jimmy the Gyp, President of the Dollar-a-Year Club of Winnsor State Prison, served as judges.

JOHN FLOEY CLUB DISCUSSES WOMEN

Puzzles Over Ways and Wiles of Vermont Co-eds for Three Months, But is Unable to Arrive at Any Definite Conclusion

SEVEN OF FAIRER SEX PICKED AS ULTRA FAIR

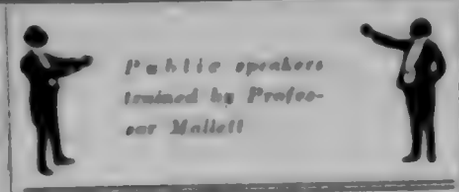
A very interesting meeting of the John Floey Club was held at the Kappa Sigma House last evening, just prior to the reopening of college. The object of the meeting was to settle some rather heavy problems which were puzzling the members of the club all through the Easter vacation.

The greater advantages of a 1908 horse over a 1916 Ford roadster was the first question discussed and this consumed a considerable portion of the time as there were many students on both sides. But the discussion finally switched over to Henry Ford and his ideas on history. One student declared that Henry Ford was absolutely correct when he said history was all blah blah! Didn't Henry Ford make a great success of himself without worrying his head whether Marco Polo defeated the Romans on the banks of the Rhine in 25 B.C.? Another student jumped upon his feet and shouted that Henry Ford was not qualified to talk upon history since the explosion of gasoline was not in any way related to powder explosions in a caution. A great uproar followed this declaration and the meeting came near to a disastrous end. Order was restored, however, when the chairman in charge of the meeting announced that the next topic for discussion was co-eds. There was an enormous crowd at the meeting and everyone was eager to propound his views on this subject especially the eds who said they had a deal to say.



It was the unanimous opinion of the eds that after all the co-eds were not really to blame for many of their shortcomings. Many things about women, such as good looks, were inherited, they declared. The women at the meeting became indignant over this and said haughtily, "Is this all you think of our trouble?" It appeared that the eds had overlooked the fact that most women do try to improve their looks. But one rascal who was not appealed to by this weighty argument in favor of the opposing side just laughed and said, "Pooh-pooh! Why, look, even men use cosmetics and see—where can you find a really bee-u-ti-ful man?" One man took offense at this statement and would have boxed the fellow's ears had not three co-eds who stood between them intervened.

Everyone was agreed this meeting was getting extremely dull and some threatened they would leave if some person did not come forth immediately with some new live idea. Forthwith, a shy little co-ed asked what course in college should a co-ed take who does not want to lose her good looks. Everybody started to think hard. Eventually an ed ventured to say that he thought the Course in Greater and Bigger Business was that course. A co-ed must prepare for future life and secretaries were in great demand. The Course in Greater and Bigger Business gave a co-ed every chance to develop her talents. Everything was so obvious in the course all we had to do was guess. This eliminated study. A body could then devote her time to studying Houlihant's beauty secrets. One got round-shouldered and anemic by studying too hard. Nobody else had any ideas on the subject and again a disruption of the meeting was threatened.

Three eds went into private conference in an adjoining room and when they returned they very dramatically announced they wanted everyone present to answer an oral questionnaire. Would everybody please give thought to the following question? Who are the seven fairest co-eds of all co-eds present at the meeting? Another of the trio quickly interrupted and said with a kind smile upon his face that, of course, all the co-eds present were fair, yes very fair, but what was wanted to be known was who are the seven ultra fair. There is a slight distinction, he said. But everyone became so embarrassed that a death-like silence pervaded the room. The women all blushed and the men twiddled their fingers. This performance lasted ten minutes. Then one of the trio announced that of course that all he could infer from all this was that all the women were ultra fair.

The discussion came to a close and refreshments of doughnuts and cheese were passed around. It was noted that only seven of the co-eds were escorted home. The trio deduced from this circumstance that these were in reality the seven ultra fair of the co-eds present.

The meeting was a huge success!

THE NEW LINCOLN

Vermonters! Men of old Vermont! Dear students of the ell-UVM! Patrons of the University Store! Matrons of the——oh, pardon me. Lovers of the Old Mill! Attendants of the Sigh Hall! Participants in Military Science! P. T. Porters!

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party. Here is one of the new biographies on the intimate modern style. It gives the hitherto unpublished (and unprintable) incidents relative to the Lincoln and its makers. Justly enough the writer uses a pseudonym. I may say without undue exaggeration that this book is just about as big a lot of blah as we ever saw. Verbum sapienti sat, but a fool heedeth not lengthy exhortations of his betters, to paraphrase.

The title is self-explanatory, chapter 1 is entitled "The Departure," chapter 2, "The Arrival," "chapter 3, "The Rube," etc. "This book," says the Johns Hopkins News Letter, "is without a parallel, we may safely say, among works dealing with the modernistic branches of higher mathematics."

To quote the N. Y. U. Daily Booze, "At last we have the personal experience of a co-ed daringly set down on paper. Now we know it for a fact that she feels, and, after her own fashion, thinks. The book of the (17th) century."

There is no need to review this book at length. Anyhow this is a nice paper.

[Dodd Doman, Inc., publ.—365 pp.—no cover (burnt off)—duo—3 x 4 12—foreword by Rev. S. Marks Badman.]

This foreword, by America's distinguished raddio sermonator, is unusually illuminating. It is printed in red ink. "Finfair Flewis," says Badman, "gives the naked facts in this book. It is the everyday life of America, written in a truly touching fashion. He's the only question I can't answer."

Tribute such as that is tribute indeed. You may feel it well worth your while to read this little romance.

In the heart of Vermont a youth was born. This was a phenomenon seldom witnessed in those days, for usually only babies were born. Later it was found to be either a typographical error, or a writer's mistake. This youth was destined to become the greatest boose hound of all time. Toward this end his parents took a great step when they sent him to the ancient and honored institution of higher learning in that state. There, in an atmosphere of astounding moral purity he grew into manhood. Buy the book and find out the rest. Suffice to say that this was chosen by the "Crime Club" as the greatest crime of the year.

BASKETEERS OF U. OF VERMONT WIN A GAME AT LAST FROM RIVALS

Middlebury High School Succumbs to Savage Attack of Catamount Warriors and Drops a Hot One to Vermont

Vermont's splendid and brilliant basketball team surprised and delighted old U. V. M. last night with the news of victory.

True, it was the only victory of the year. But then, it was over Middlebury High School and the boys of the Green and Gold fought hard to earn their 107-106 win over the lads from the city of mud and banners.

Game By Rounds

Vermont opened the game by kicking off on the 20-inch line. Middlebury caught the ball and raced it back for a snappy two-bagger. Vermont stole the next base and, with a pretty feint toward the northeast, dropped in the pill for a heartening twin-counter.

Middlebury retaliated n the next inning by kicking the Vermont captain in the shins. The Catamounts bit back but alas it was too late. The damage had been done and the High Schoolers have scored.

Pandemonium broke loose somewhere in the sixth quarter when the referee called a foul.

Crowd Perturbed

"Kick him out!" shouted the crowd.

Nervy Frat Men Are Severely Censored by Abeworthy

TRY AND FIND IT!

Three ushers, hastily summoned from the Strong Theater of the Queen City of Vermont, arrived in time to pelt the odoriferous referee with odoriferous eggs.

At the seven-eighths the score stood 201-25 for the Middies. Every spectator in the gallery was booing the Blue and White boys with all the might of two thousand throats and three fire sirens. As the cheer leader started to lead off the "Vermont Fight" yell the Catamounts entered on a 30-yard sprint, nattily attired in brand-new pajamaes and spiffy white leggings.

The Score Mounts

Then was witnessed such a scene as mortals have told of but have rarely seen. Perched on the running track, the team, single-handed, tore off score after score from the board until Middlebury was down to 106 and Vermont was up to 107. In the space of a few short minutes Vermont had scored 82 points to Middlebury's 95.

There was no individual star in the game. Vermont's offense was brilliant and so was Middlebury's defense. Middlebury's offense was splendid and so was Vermont's defense.

RULES OF MILITARY COMPETITION GIVEN

Colonel Black Releases Revised Provisions Governing Contention for New Reserve Officers' Cup

TO CREATE INTEREST IN MILITARY TRAINING

Rules governing the first annual interfraternity competition for the recently donated Reserve Officers' Cup have been formulated by Colonel Black and his staff.

The cup was given by a group of the Burlington Reserve Officers to Colonel Black to choose whatever plan of competing for it he might desire. Lt Colonel R. W. McCuen, in a letter accompanying the gift declared that several of the World War veterans of the Reserve Officers of Burlington felt that they should continue to take an interest in the Organized Defense Corps of the United States Army. In order to foster this idea, they conceived the plan of showing their appreciation of what the Reserve Officers Training Corps at the University of Vermont has accomplished as a part of National Defense by giving a valuable prize to those in the local unit who are most deserving.

Realizing Colonel Black's wealth of experience and keen judgment, they left the matter of the type of competition involved, the rules governing the contest and all other plans in his hands. After much deliberation, he decided to hold squad competition to determine what squad possessed the greatest efficiency in performing the Manual, alertly obeying command and marching.

Basis of Judging

There are several points which the judges will consider in determining the most efficient squad. Among these are excellence of performance of movements in the competitive drill, military bearing and the condition of the uniforms and equipment of the members of the squad in ranks and of the squad leader, and the manner of giving commands and the general control of his squad by the squad leader. During the competitive drill, a squad may be called upon to execute any or all of the movements described in the memorandum of the Military Department given below.

Cup to be Awarded Annually

The handsome silver loving cup will be awarded annually to the most efficient squad, as selected by competent judges at a competition to be held at the time of the annual Federal Inspection in May. Each fraternity may enter one squad in the competition and one squad may be composed of non-fraternity men.

The cup will be retained for one year by the fraternity or group furnishing the winning squad. It will become the permanent property of the fraternity or group which shall furnish the winning squad in three annual competitions.

The squad in competition will consist of eight students in ranks and

The Reserve Officers' Cup

Realizing the value of military training to National defense, the Reserve Officers of Burlington, Vermont, through Lieutenant Colonel R. W. McCuen have presented a cup to the Infantry Unit of the R. O. T. C at the University of Vermont, for the purpose of encouraging competition in drill and thereby increasing the efficiency of the Unit.

This cup will be awarded annually to the most efficient squad, as selected by competent judges at a competition to be held at the time of the annual Federal Inspection in May. Each fraternity may enter one squad in the competition and one squad may be composed of non-fraternity men.

The cup will be retained for one year by the fraternity or group furnishing the winning squad. It will become the permanent property of the fraternity or group which shall furnish the winning squad in three annual competitions.

PROF. HALL SPEAKS AT FIRST CHAPEL SERVICES

Professor Hall of the English Department spoke at the first chapel service since vacation on religion and the student's attitude toward it. Students seem to think they have lost religion, he declared, and that the church is a myth which was carried on by our ancestors. But this is a paradox.

The church is founded on religion and religion shall never vanish. It is like a beautiful finished piece of music that must be played for appreciation. Belittling philosophy and churches gets one no where. Religion does not have to be preserved or divined, it has to be lived. There is the active aspect, and the receptive aspect, consisting of fellowship, peace and power.

Professor Hall cited two examples from Dr. Fosdick. A woman wished to join the church. Wishing to know what her conception of religion was, he asked her what she believed in. The reply was that she believed in affirmative prayer an attitude of receptivity with actual help. Hers was true religion.

The other example was of a college boy who came to Doctor Fosdick and said that he had lost his religion, but when asked if he had nothing left to live for he insisted that he had much to live for. Thus he had religion which was dormant; he simply had not recognized its development, he wished to give his life for others.

College people have not really lost religion, for at the source of the divine is the personal and psychological aspect, together with the active and receptive development.

THREE WEEKS OF SPRING FOOTBALL COMMENCES ON MONDAY AFTERNOON

Call for Candidates Issued by Head Coach Rattan Who Will Be Assisted by George Tully

At 4.15 p.m., Monday, April 15, candidates for the 1929-30 Catamount football team will convene on the back campus to receive preliminary instructions from Coaches Rattan and Tully. At that time there will take place the first session of the spring football practice schedule.

All men interested in football and not engaged in other athletic activities are urged to report at the time and place mentioned above. Practice sessions will be of short duration with emphasis being placed on speed, precision and physical condition. Much attention will be placed on fundamentals. Practice will be held on five days a week through May 2 and on May 3 a regulation football game will be played on Centennial Field between two teams, chosen by the coaches, which shall be designated the Green Jerseys and the Black Jerseys.

Prizes will be awarded to the best forward passer, the best forward pass receiver, and the man who makes the most all-around improvement.

There will be no practice on Saturdays. Sophomores and freshmen who attend all the practice sessions will be excused from Physical Training for the remainder of the current school year.

Football equipment may be drawn from the equipment room this afternoon or tomorrow afternoon by those who plan to report for practice.

Freshmen who desire to scrub football managership should report to Assistant Managers H. W. Adams, M. R. Covert, W. E. Craig and C. W. Walker on Monday afternoon.

The following men have signified their intentions of reporting on Monday: Letter men, Captain Levine, Gourson, Burstein, DeRose, DeWitt, Dorey, Huey, Segal, Sirois, freshmen, Burns, Collins, Bedell, Brown, Creaser, Sober, Murad, Davis, Bowers, Isenberg, Towne, Tupper, Manning, Pelofsky, Taft, Kersey, Allerton, Aronson, Berry, Codding, Strauss, Buxton, Blanchet, Burr, Donaldson.

Sophomore Class Holds Elections for its Annual in Old Mill Chapel on Thursday Afternoon

STAFF APPOINTMENTS TO BE MADE IN FUTURE

At the meeting of the class of 1931 held in the Old Mill Chapel Thursday afternoon, George R. Brush and Hugh R. Mattison were elected editor-in-chief and business manager respectively of next year's Ariel. These two men were chosen by the class from a group of seven recommended by E. Henry Powell, editor, and Robert P. Pillings, business manager, of the 1930 Ariel.

George R. Brush, of Arlington, who is a member of Lambda Iota, besides being the newly-elected editor of the University of Vermont year book, is treasurer of the sophomore class, one of the news editors of the Cynic, a member of Gold Key, Eta Sigma Phi, and has been on the honor roll, besides being active on several important committees.

Hugh R. Mattison, of Bennington, who is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, is the new business manager of the year book and has been active on the campus. He is an assistant manager of eligibility, assistant editor of the Cynic, he was on the victorious sophomore debating team last fall, and is an inactive member of Gold Key. He has also been active in musical organizations, being a member of the R. O. T. C. band, the Men's Glee Club, and the University Choir.

Although no definite plans have been made as yet, the new heads of the Ariel hope to get as much of the work done before the end of this college year as is possible in order to insure the publication of the annual in time for Junior Week next year. In order to accomplish this it will be necessary that they have the cooperation of the class of 1931.

The members of the editorial and business boards, who are appointed by the editor and business manager, have not been chosen as yet. They will be announced in a later issue of the Cynic.

SHATFORD TO PREACH BACCALAUREATE SERMON

The Rev. Allan P. Shatford, pastor of the Church of St. James the Apostle Montreal, Canada, will preach the Baccalaureate sermon at the University of Vermont on Sunday, June 16, it was announced yesterday. The speaker is not a stranger to Burlington. He came here and gave an address at a vesper service at the University, February 12, 1928. At that time he was highly praised as a speaker by both college and townspeople.

Canon Shatford, as he is known in Montreal, is a native of Nova Scotia, Canada. He was educated at the University of Kings College, Windsor, Nova Scotia, receiving his B.A. in 1895, his M.A. in 1898 and his D.C.L. in 1921.

Canon Shatford served four years during the World War with Canadian troops and was mentioned in despatches and awarded the Order of the British Empire.

He is a past grand master of Masons for Quebec, Canada. He has served as lenten preacher for the past seven years in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, Rochester and Boston. He has preached before the students and the faculty of McGill University, Toronto University, Cornell, University of New Brunswick, Kings College and Bishop's College at Lennoxville, P. Q. He has spoken often before patriotic, literary and fraternal organizations in Canada and the United States.

The demonstration football game staged at Harvard April 2 was an interesting affair. Many intricate rules were interpreted. Walter R. O'Keson, dean of officials, was master of ceremonies.

Vermont Victorious In Three of Six Southern Trip Games

Fort Myer, Catholic U., St. Johns Fall Before Northerners' Bats —Georgetown, Maryland, Army Games Rained Out—Eligibility Halts Navy Contest

GOOD SEASON PROMISED BY ROOKIE AGGREGATION

After a twelve day southern trip the Green and Gold baseball team returned to Burlington yesterday morning, having established one of the best southern trip records of Green and Gold nines of recent years. Of ten scheduled games six were played, and the squad which left the University some two weeks ago, inexperienced and lacking outdoor practice, emerged victorious in three of them.

Quantico Marines, under the management of Tom Isbell, former Vermont all sport coach, set back the young Cats twice in the first two games of the schedule, 3 to 0 and 11 to 2, and the strong New York University outfit downed Vermont 7 to 4 for the latter's only other defeat. The older and larger Fort Myer team was the first victim of the plucky mountaineers by a 12 to 3 score. Catholic University fell next 4 to 3, and the crack St. Johns' team of Brooklyn was batted down by the same score.

The trip was a huge success from every angle and the freshmen who were unknown quantities have proven themselves smart ball players who are in the game to the last pitched ball.

Pic Traynor was perhaps the outstanding man on the team by virtue of his brilliant keystone sack play. His brilliant stops and throws cut off many a rally by opposing batsmen. His flashy fielding made difficult ball handling look simple. Traynor reminds one of Captain Jack Smith of last year's nine, one of Vermont's best second baremen, and by mid-season should be a nemesis to enemy sluggers and cause place hitters to look the other way. Jay at short was a bit unsteady at times in the field but a little practice should iron out the rough spots. As lead-off man he did a good job at bat. McKay looked especially good at bat with six hits, including a double and triple. Sargent, who played first base in place of Frank O'Keefe, who was stricken with appendicitis and was operated on at the Marine Emergency Hospital at Quantico, hit consistently and made some great stops at the initial bag.

Captain Cal Macomber was superb behind the bat. He has a strong accurate throwing arm which he used to good advantage and was always working hard on the receiving end. As for his batting he continued last year's batting spree and batted at a .417 clip. Wimant, with two triples and Howard with a home run in the Fort Myer game, captured long distance honors, while Morse was the premier fielder with a perfect record and several sensational catches to his credit. In the box, "Jimmy" Kendricks looked like a find by holding Catholic U. to four hits and the Marines to seven scattered hits and only three runs. Wood turned in a good performance in his only appearance in the box against St. Johns. McBride went the distance in Vermont's first win over Fort Myer.

Four Games Cancelled

Georgetown and Army games were cancelled on account of rain and the Maryland game was called on account of rain at the end of the third inning with the score tied at one all and Sargent in the box. Navy's three year ineligibility rule which disrupted the annual service chain of football with Army brought an unexpected cancellation of the game scheduled with the midshipmen.

Much credit is due Coach "Larry" Gardner, who with all odds against him, a green squad and his first year at the University, has developed what will surely turn out to be a winning team.

Marines 3—Vermont 0

Vermont opening its season on a wind-swept diamond, lost a close game to the U. S. Marines, 3 to 0. Both teams played fine baseball but the lack of outdoor practice could be noticed in the Green Mountain aggregation.

The Vermont squad suffered a hard blow when Frank O'Keefe, who was slated to start at first base for the Catamounts, was taken to the Marine Hospital stricken with acute appendicitis. Sargent held down the initial sack in Frank's place, thus making up an infield of inexperienced men.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO RENDER ITS FINAL CONCERT NEXT SUNDAY

U. V. M. Students Offered Special Tickets To Concert — Joe Lechnyr Leads Burlington Musicians

Burlington's Symphony Orchestra will play its last concert of the season next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. Louise Baxter, contralto, of New York City, will be featured as a soloist. Joseph Lechnyr, who is the director of the orchester and who also leads our own R. O. T. C. Band, announces that the students can purchase tickets at the University Book Store for the special price of fifty cents. Many of our own students are included in the personnel of the orchestra and everyone is assured of excellent music. The first concert played earlier in the year was excellently rendered.

Miss Baxter has appeared as soloist in the Alexander Avenue Baptist Church of New York, at St. Matthew's Church of Brooklyn, and has been for eight years soloist in the famous old First Presbyterian Church of Elizabeth, N. J. She has also been soloist for many prominent clubs, including an appearance with John Charles Thomas at the New York Mozart Society, and a joint recital with Charles Gilbert Spross under the auspices of the Elks Club of New Jersey. At the concert Sunday Louise Baxter will sing the famous aria "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice" from the opera "Samson et Dalilah" by C. Saint Saens, with orchestra and a solo group with piano which will include "Dawn" by Curran, "Through the Silent Night" by Rachmaninoff and "The Answer" by Terry.

BY WAY OF EXPLANATION

The Vermont Cynic is again back to normalcy after a slight digression from its accustomed path as the official news organ of the campus. Appearing in a cold printed or attractive pink paper so soon after the Easter recess it took the entire ranks by surprise. However, so great was the popularity that before the morning was half over the supply in the Lawrence Bookstore was completely exhausted. And a few hundred extra copies were printed at that!

Six or eight years ago, a humorous issue of the Cynic was printed for the first time. At that time, there was much propaganda concerning the activities of the Bolshevists or the so-called Reds. The Reds were given a good deal of publicity by way of flaming headlines in all of the leading papers of the day for their revolutionary tactics in establishing their socialistic doctrines in the country. In accordance with the sentiment of the day did the Vermont Cynic appear on the flaming red paper as a satire on Bolshevism.

Since that time other colleges have published a humorous edition of their student newspapers at various intervals. It has been only in the past year or two that the periodic appearance of an amusing issue has become quite universal. As a result, the editors of the Vermont Cynic spent a most enjoyable Easter vacation composing the Vermont Service. In fact, the editors probably had quite as sportive a time making up the paper as some of the students did in reading it.

All in all, it was an attempt at facetiousness. No ill will lurked in the minds or ink of the editors in the process of composition. The paper was published in a spirit of fun, and we sincerely hope that no one will take offense at its contents. All credit for the issue must go to George Nelson, Louis Lisman, Paul La Crosse, F. W. Householder, Ira Allen and Edmund Gemmell. Perhaps if only favorable comment is continued to be heard concerning the past issue, the editorial staff may wax capricious again sometime.

ALL OUT FOR SPRING FOOTBALL PRACTICE!!

Are you going out for spring football practice? Manager Mahoney is anxious to have as many candidates as possible report for practice which will begin next Monday. An excellent opportunity is presented to prospective candidates to reveal their abilities to the coach, Captain Kattan. Here is a chance for members of last fall's freshman squad to put in their bid for a berth on the varsity.

Practice in handling the ball, the duties of each position, and possibly some preliminary signal practice will be stressed during the course of the spring training season. The coach is anxious to size up prospective material for the varsity squad next fall, and will judge the candidates mostly on their ability in handling the ball. Punters, backfield men, and linemen will all be given a chance to display their wares.

What say? Are you ready? Coach Kattan will be looking for you next Monday afternoon.

Tsing Han Revolts

Chinese students at the Tsing Han College are determined that they will have liberty or trouble. They have declared that they will disregard all regulations that they will not accept any instruction unsatisfactory to them, and that they will have the right to pass on the appointment of the president.

Spring is Here

It was in front of Redmond Hall that I first saw her. I feel confident that the spot was there before I saw her. As I glanced nonchalantly [illegible] and as I drew nearer she bowed gracefully [illegible] Redmond Hall.

Recognized I paused and raised up, on her feet, hand to feet, nothing above all her marked essential raiment. [illegible] none of it. Oh, yes, they all do around Robinson Hall!

My own silken attention rested upon her for some moments while I debated the advisability of drawing nearer to her, she evidently decided that I was extremely rude to stare so at her. For she did what I had expected her to do, yet hoped she would not do. She spread her colorful wings and sailed away over the new Slade dorm. My first robin this spring. Oh yes, they all do around Robinson Hall!

One of the boys just told me that the wimen 'r' gonna have a trainin' table a new gym trainers, rubbers and all and are gonna git up a football team and challenge the He-men's team up hyar. Huh! Never was much of an athlete myself, but—waal, guess I might as well try out for the Spring practice.

Here's a hot one—I seys to the roommate the other night, "Have a lucky," 'n' he says "Naw. I've quit smokin' cigarettes," so I seys "Well, have an Old Gold," but he seys "An Old Gold's a cigarette, ain't it?" 'n' I seys "No. An Old Gold's like that guy that wanted to get the boys out of the trenches before Christmas; tried hard enough, but never quite got there." Ain't that kinda snappy?

Yeh, only been outa Wallingford a few weeks 'n' I'm fast getting on to this Collegiate up here. Nice taown, Wallingford. Lots of pretty wimmen 'n all.

Wuz talkin' to Jim Blarney of Wheys 'n' Blarney yisterday.

Chicago."

"How come Chicago, Jim?"

"Ain't most of the big guns there?" he wants to know.

Waal, I never looked at it that way, but darned if they ain't.

Wuz also talkin' to Ken Strong—you hain't forgotten him have you?—a coupla weeks ago.

"What's the secret of your football success, Ken?" I demands.

"Lay off the wimmen 'n' booze, git to bed early nights, eat good, wholesome food and get plenty of fresh air and exercise," he recites without even so much as glancin' in his Spauldin' Rule Book.

"But, Ken, do you do all them things?" I wants to know.

"Naw," he seys. "I don't believe in 'em. But you asked me for the secret of my success 'n' I never tell secrets."

Speaking of Spring, d'ja sleep well last night? Know I didn't. The pesky mosquitos bothered me all night long. Drat these early summers up hyar!

Horses and Buggies Return

Co-eds at the University of Indiana are forbidden to ride in a student's automobile unless their parents accompany them in the car or unless special permission is granted by the dean. A consequent boom in the popularity of horses and buggies has been noticed on the mid western campus.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY

"The Letter," a motion picture presentation of Somerset Maugham's play and short story of the same name, is [illegible] a talking picture the most mature effort that our infant industry has yet produced. I don't know how it will be presented without sound unless the Majestic pulls a fast one on us and smashes in a talking machine when we're not looking, which they really ought to do if only for this picture. The picture is nearly perfect. It has a marvelous story, not strikingly original but powerful. Jeanne Eagels, in her part as the woman who murdered her lover and then sought to lie her way out of it, is superb. The climax of the story with Leslie, the woman, screaming out her revenge is the most intensely dramatic moment that they have ever had in motion pictures. As I say, however, I do not know how it will be without the almost vital talking of Miss Eagels. Subtitles cannot give you the force and emotion with which she renders effective every scene of this drama. Perhaps it can be done. I only wish they would hold the picture over until they do get in their noise machine. This picture is something to which we can look forward, and something for the perfect presentation of which we could wait.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY

"The Duke Steps Out" in the Saturday Evening Post was screamingly funny or at least as screamingly funny as anything in that immense and ponderous tone well can be. The picture is not so funny. The plot seems slightly ridiculous and yet somehow the thing manages to be effective. It's a good program with Joan Crawford looking more gorgeous and prvocative than any woman whom you can't meet should look. Such excitement as she stirs up is bad for a person. Ask any doctor. William Haines on the other hand starts up, in me, at any rate, a different kind of excitement, the murderous kind, the kind that would like to stick a knife in his back some dark night. This wise guy gives me a pain and if you don't like him he'll give you a pain and ruin your bum-bum, too, because he's just as wise as ever. Anyway, the picture is good fun.

FRIDAY

Once in my innocence I suggested that you might have a good chance on a Friday since there were two pictures and there might be one of them worth while. Well, I was wrong. Forgive, forgive and this one time forget, because this one time both of the pictures are awful, and it's hard to say which is the more awful. Jack Holt,... that man, that man, he just goes through life making western pictures. This one is called "Sunset Pass," and if you look up the files and find out what I said about the plot of the last one called "Avalanche" you'll save me a lot of trouble reading it over and writing it down here and you'll also leave a little space in the Cynic so they can put in more advertisements which is good for business in Burlington. Now, haven't I got public spirit? Dunt esk.

The other thing is Charlie Murray in a picture called "The Head Man" which has nothing to do with either head waiters or cannibal head hunters, but which concerns itself with the attempt of Charlie Murray to become mayor. Charlie Murray has two grimaces and he works them overtime in this picture. Awful.

SATURDAY

Saturday they boast a picture with the enticing title, "Trent's Last Case." They ought to be ashamed. It has an all star cast in it, which, as usual, means that the company making the picture went out into the highways and byways and said to everyone whom they met, "Have you a job?" and the answer was no, and lo, that person questioned became a star and after they got a flock of stars they said, "Let's make a picture," and they did, and now just look at all that mess that somebody ought to clean up. It's "Trent's Last Case" and it ought to be.

EXCHANGES

Again we have one about a Scotchman who was invited to a party and told to bring something. He brought his relatives.

Friend: "Hello, old chap! Did you fall in?"

Dripping Angler: "You don't suppose this is perspiration, do you?"

Hal: "What makes Ed so furious when he finds the traffic lights are against him?"

George: "Oh, he always gets furious when he sees red."

Every evening, my girl calls me up and then calls me down.

Vermont officially closed its basketball season March 2, when it fought a losing fight with the quintet from Holy Cross. The Green and Gold five did not come through the season very successfully as the team was able to win only eight games out of eighteen starts.

However, this is not as bad as it might be, for the varsity was weakened by the loss of three men from last year's regular team and some of the best men of last year's Kitten team were not available for this year's squad. Coach Cayward in his first year as coach built a fine team about Captain Estabrook and Captain-elect Halligan, the only two regulars from last year. The other guard position was filled by Manning, and Wallace was the regular occupant of the other forward berth. The pivot position was held by Sargent, who alternated with Wallace. These five men made up the first team and there was an adequate line of good substitutes who could go into the game at any time and carry on.

Wallace was the high scorer for the season, and led the rest by a good margin. He played a good consistent game and was usually good for a high score when he went into a game. He was especially accurate from the free-throw line and thirty of his total score for the year were collected in this fashion.

Halligan was lightning in the other forward position. He was all over the floor, and played a consistently good defensive game as well as offensive. He was one of the best passers of the season and accurate in his shots. He will be one of the mainstays for next year and will make a good leader. Ex-Captain Estabrook played one of the best seasons of his career. He is one of the most unselfish players of the quintet and he always distinguished himself in every contest in which he appeared by his speed and clever guarding. The University will lose a fine guard when he graduates this June.

Manning was the other regular guard although he was unable to appear in several of the games because of an injury to his knee which he received in mid-season. Besides his defensive work he has distinguished himself in the offensive department of the game, and is well up in the list of scorers, holding fourth place. Next year we shall see him better than ever.

Sargent, the lanky center, will also be available for next year. He was unable to find himself in the first part of the season but he finally got going and finished in a very favorable showing. He was especially good on the defense and stood high in scoring.

It is to be hoped that the Catamounts next year will surpass this year's record. Five of this year's eight letter men will be on next season's squad.

BASKETBALL CAPTAINS

Ex-Capt. Seeley Estabrook, who completed a brilliant college basketball career last month.

Capt.-Elect "Tim" Halligan, who has been an outstanding forward for two seasons, will lead the 1929-30 quintet.

but they played heads up baseball and a lot of credit should go to them.

"Jimmie" Kendrick pitched wonderful baseball in his initial start for Vermont. Seven hits and one earned run were made off his delivery. The game developed into a pitcher's battle between Kidd and Kendrick and the pitching of Kid combined with two sensational plays made by Levy and Gatewood gave the Devil Dogs a shut out victory.

Marines 15 Vermont 7

Under ideal baseball weather the Vermont team met its second set back from the Marines. The game was loosely played throughout. Both teams used two pitchers in an attempt to keep the score down but Vermont's errors coupled with effective hitting by the Keadymen gave them a decided margin of victory. Vermont started the game off with a bang with a single by Jay and a double by Traynor. An error on Howard's roller gave Vermont two runs but the devil dogs soon took the lead by passing across three runs in their half of the first inning and were never again headed. Rutkowski, freshman twirler, took the mound for Vermont and had a rather stormy time of it until he was relieved at the end of the sixth inning by Sargent. Stroh going behind the bat and Macomber to first base. Taliaferro started pitching for the Marines but was relieved early in the game and Smith pitched good ball, holding the Vermont batters in check. Levy and Almond led the attack by the devil dogs and Jay looked best at bat for Vermont.

Vermont 12 Fort Myer 3

By hitting two army pitchers hard and often the Vermont men won 12 to 3 from Fort Myer in a seven inning game.

McBride was on the mound for the Catamounts and after the first inning held the home team well in hand for the remainder of the game. Vermont collected ten hits off Hayes and Paine pitching for the post team. Howard's home run with two men on bases featured.

Vermont 1—Catholic U. 3

Vermont defeated Catholic University 4 to 3 while Kendrick for Vermont pitched a nice ball game allowing only five hits. Vermont hit well against the three pitchers used by Catholic University gathering a total of 12 hits but could not hit when hits meant runs.

In the eighth inning Hurley relieved Conlin with three Vermont runners on bases and proceeded to walk three men in succession, which not only tied the score, but put the visitors ahead one run. Hurley was later relieved by Masi, who finished the game.

Vermont 4 St. John's 3

The Catamounts took the St. John's College nine of Brooklyn into camp, 4 to 3, in its first home game of the season for St. John's.

The feature of the game was the hurling of Wood who, although he allowed two more hits than his mates gathered from McElroy, a freshman who twirled for the home team, proved to be the master of the batters in the pinches. Wood kept the St. Johns hits well scattered and bore down well in right places. After a scoreless first frame St. John's got the jump on the Cats in the second inning by scoring twice on an error by Howard and a hit and run play. Vermont retaliated in its third time at bat by pushing three runs across to gain the lead. With two men down, McElroy passed Traynor and Howard. The former scored on Macomber's single to right center and the runners advanced a base on the throw to the plate. Morse beat out an infield hit to short and when Hinchcliffe threw to first Howard and Macomber scored. McKay forced Morse at third for the third out.

The visitors tallied their fourth run in the fourth when Wood smashed a long triple to deep center with Sargent who had singled on base. Wood's hit was the longest of the game. In the ninth St. John's started a ninth inning rally which fell two runs short of victory.

New York U. 7 Vermont 4

Vermont went down before New York University's heavy artillery at Ohio Field by the score of 7 to 4.

McKay led the New England attack with three hits in four times to the plate, one of them a three bagger. Winant got a triple and a single in four trips to the plate.

Strong's three bagger was the longest hit seen on Ohio Field in several years. Kastner hit a homer in the same inning.

The local players scored in the opening frame when Strong singled scored Roberts who had walked. In the next ... Wallace, Halligan, Sargent, Manning and Bernstein will make up a smooth combination.

The substitutes this year showed up well whenever they had a chance. Palmer and Tobin looked good at guard, and Morse and Bernstein had several chances at forward. Tobin and Bernstein will be applicants for a position on next year's five, with Bernstein reasonably sure of making a regular berth.

The Catamounts seemed to specialize in thrilling games this year, for most of them were won or lost by close margins and many of them were distinguished by remarkable last period comebacks.

Joe Godfrey, sporting editor of Collier's Weekly, has announced his mythical All-American hockey team as follows:

Holt (Capt.), goal, Dartmouth
Dyon, right defense, Clarkson Tech
Giddens, right wing, Harvard
McFadyen, center, Marquette

The new grid rules will be used for the next three weeks on the back campus during spring training.

The scientific fumble may make its appearance in football this fall. If a back finds he cannot make the distance on fourth down, he will be crazy to hold onto the ball. He can fumble with perfect safety towards his opponents' goal line. There is a chance that one of his teammates will recover and even if the opposition gets the ball it cannot advance it. It could gain possession on downs any way.

R. L. SMALLEY TO VISIT UNIVERSITY THIS JUNE

Vermont Grad and Congo Missionary Is On His Way Here —Inspired The Smalley Campaign Last Fall

Mr. R. L. Smalley U. V. M. '11, and for whom the Smalley Conference was named, on April first is on his way to the Vermont Alpine and will spend the remainder in Burlington before continuing on his way to Belgian South Africa a few weeks and and are expected to be in New York in a few days.

Mr. Smalley's old home is in Stowe, Vt. where he received his early school ing and prepared to enter the University of Vermont in the fall of 1907. He soon became well known in many college activities but especially did he [illegible] the Christian Association where he took a prominent part in all of the work in the Religious Council. He is a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

Following graduation from college, Mr. Smalley married Miss Ruth Hubbell, also of the class of 1911. She was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority and also took active part in campus affairs. She still holds the women's tennis championship at the University.

Mr. and Mrs. Smalley are both very active in missionary work which has taken them to some of the most out-of-the-way parts of the world. At the present time they conduct a school at the Congo Institute, a central training school for the natives in the Belgian Congo. The institute although young and small is considered a success in the native mind for, as Mr. Smalley says "It is very much higher than anything they have ever known of heard of." The sum of money amounting to a little over four hundred dollars which was contributed by the students, professors and a few alumni will be given to Mr. Smalley when he visits the University in June, and will be used to further the work of the Congo Institute in which he is one of the most zealous workers.

Next Monday evening at 7 o'clock the Vermont Independents will hold a meeting in the Y office. Several matters of interest are to be discussed, principally prospects for the coming interfraternity baseball season. There will also be the question of activities of the society during Junior Week, when there is some talk of having a dance.

Conquering the Cascades

SNOW falls every month in the year where the Great Northern crosses the Cascades. Steep, tortuous grades increase the difficulty of the railroading problem. Nature has stubbornly resisted man's effort to conquer the range.

In January, 1929, the new Cascade tunnel was opened. Man, with electricity as an ally, had conquered the Cascades.

The eight-mile bore was driven in three years—a record impossible without electric power. And electrification has been extended to the entire 75-mile route through the mountains.

The conquests of electricity on the land and on the sea, in the air, and underground, are making practicable the impossibilities of yesterday. As our vision encompasses wider horizons, electricity appears as a vital contribution to future industrial progress and human welfare.

BRUSH AND MATTISON APPOINT ASSISTANTS

Wappler to be Women's Editor—Coburn, Worrell, and Webster Given Major Positions on Staffs

NEW EDITORIAL STAFF HOLDS MEETING FRIDAY

George R Brush and Hugh R. Mattison, newly elected editor-in-chief and business manager respectively of the 1931 Ariel, have prepared for publication their boards of assistants. Jean Wappler has been chosen to act as women's editor of the book. Her appointments will be found elsewhere in this issue.

The men's editorial staff is as follows: Managing editor, Donald E. Coburn, of Hardwick; grind editors, Harvey D. Butterfield, of Burlington, Edward Clark, of Richford, and John W. Willetts, of West Hartford, Conn.; photographic editor, Harley M Chatterton, of Rutland; humor editor, George R. Nelson, of Stamford, Conn; Kake Walk editor, Louis Lisman, of Burlington; sporting editor, Douglas L. Stewart, of Bennington; assistant sporting editor, Chester C. Kaufman, of Plainville, Conn.; assistant editors, Richard A. Backus, of South Orange, N. J., Ralph E. Bond, of Union Village, Charles N. Crockett, of Burlington, John V. Detore, of Burlington, William S. Heaton, of Montpelier, Robert W. Hendrick, of Newtonville, Mass., Norman C. Hoxie, of Proctorsville, Lewis L. Jones, of Poultney, Roderick J. Maynes, of Woodstock, John O. Percival, of Pike, N. H., Walter E. Sargent, of Morrisville, and Arthur Sharples, of New Bedford, Mass.

The business board of the annual will be composed of the following men: Advertising manager, Roy W. Worrell, of Providence, R. I.; circulation manager, Truman S. Webster, of Shelburne; assistant business managers, Henry C. Smith, of Stockbridge, Mass., F. Stanley Smith, of Adams, Mass., and Robert E. Tobin, of Fairhaven, Mass.

The first meeting of the new editorial board will occur Friday evening, April 19, at 7.15 at the Owl House. It is very important that all those appointed to serve on the board attend this meeting, as the nature of the work expected of each man will be discussed and a few questions pertinent to the success of the book will be brought up. It is not likely that any assignments will be made for some time yet, but the editor requests his co-workers not to forget that they have been given a duty as well as an honor in being appointed to the Ariel staff.

It is to be hoped that the present sophomore class will realize that this small group has been chosen to represent the larger and more unwieldy body of the class at large. It is up to the class of 1931 to cooperate as much as it possibly can with its representatives. If the proper degree of cooperation is given, there seems to be no reason why a very satisfactory year book cannot be issued.

NEWS IN BRIEF

E. W. Gustafson, '29, has been named chairman of the committee in charge of the squad competition which will take place during the federal inspection in May.

A group of five University men climbed Mount Mansfield during the Easter vacation. Professor Puffer, Myron and Robert Jenks, Robert Allen and Edmour Germain, went up the mountain a week ago last Tuesday and returned to the city the following day. The mountain was a glare ice and there was a hard crust upon the snow. The wind blew fiercely too, but there was an excellent view from the top. Snowshoes were not used all the way up, but on the return trip this was made over Bear Head Ridge. Travelling would have been impossible without them. The party remained for the night at Taft's Lodge, the Green Mountain Club hut near the summit of the mountain.

DOCTOR ANDREWS IS HONORED BY RUMANIA

Vermont Professor in 1927 is Awarded Decoration by Rumanian Legation for His Writings

Dr. Arthur Irving Andrews, professor of history at the University of Vermont in 1927, has been awarded the decoration of the Order of the Commander of the Crown of Rumania by the Rumanian legation on recognition of his writings as an historian on Rumanian subjects. At the present time, Dr. Andrews is engaged in research work at Harvard.

Dr. Andrews was born in Providence, R. I., on March 27, 1878. He received his A.B. from Brown University in 1901, and his Ph.D. at Harvard in 1905. From 1906-09 he was instructor of history at Simmons College, Boston, Mass.; asistant professor of history at Tufts College, 1909; and a professor of history and international law there, 1912-26. Before his year of teaching at Vermont in 1927, he had been a professor of diplomacy at Charles University, in 1921.

Besides being a professor of history, Dr. Andrews was a member of The Inquiry, United States Department of State in 1918, and was selected a member of the New England Group for Historical Service in 1917. He is a member of the American History Association, American Political Science Association, American Society of International Law, New England History Teachers' Association, Society for Advancement of Slavonic Studies, and a host of other foreign societies having to do with history and international law. In the field of history, Dr Andrews is a recognized specialist in the Slavic and Mohammedan East.

VOTE TO KEEP SOCIAL WHIRLPOOL WHIRLING

Key and Snake men held a conclave recently to ponder the advisability of sponsoring a dance on the date assigned them in the social calendar, next Saturday evening. The debate waxed warm on both sides, but after it had been ascertained that the Burlington High School gymnasium was available, a fact which assured an unruffled surface for the gyrations of the society hounds, and that it was possible to secure the services of an orchestra which was wholly adequate to the exacting demands of the present jazz-mad age, it was the unanimous opinion of the K. and S members that they should contribute to the social opportunities of the college by holding a dance as per schedule.

Members expressed the inspired thought that large throngs would attend the festival of song and dance, especially those who (A) were invited to the Mortar Board affair and those who (B) were not invited to the Mortar Board gambol, but had hopes.

The junior honoraries expect to make this dance as big a success as the one which they conducted last fall.

COMIC OPERA AT STRONG THURSDAY

Well-Known "Patience" Will Be Presented Thursday Evening by Combined Men's and Women's Glee Clubs

OPERA SATIRIZES EXCESSIVE HIGH-BROWISM

Music lovers will be given a rare opportunity when the Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera, "Patience," is produced by the combined Men's and Women's Glee Clubs of the University at the Strong Theater on Thursday evening, April 18. Gilbert and Sullivan need no introduction to those who know and love music, but this will be the first time that any of their works have been produced by Vermont students. These writers are known all over the world for their operas, which include "the Mikado," "The Pirates of Penzance," "Pinafore," "Patience," and many other favorites. Their operas are known not only in the English speaking countries, but they have been translated into other tongues. In Germany especially these productions have been very well received.

The opera "Patience" was first produced at the Opera Comique in London on April 23, 1881. It was performed later in the Savoy Theater, a playhouse built especially for Gilbert and Sullivan productions. From the very start it was more than successful, for its initial run totalled 408 performances. Indeed, the play was so popular that other companies attempted to steal the rights, and then the words and music. At various times the same play was produced at a playhouse only a few blocks from the original theater.

Satirizes High-browism

"Patience" was originally intended as a satire or caricature of a fashionable craze or fad of the 1880's, called the æsthetic movement, but it may still serve as a caricature of any sort of excessive and insincere high-browism. "Patience," the opera, still lives, while the movement which it satirized is dead. "Patience" does live because of Gilbert's perfectly irrepressible wit and Sullivan's absolutely delightful tunes.

Miss Hazel Ladd '30, as Patience, plays the lead. H. E. Goddard '29 and R. H. Albee M.'31 play opposite her in the two leading male rôles. The complete cast follows, all characters being members of the Men's or Women's Glee Clubs:

Patience, a dairy maid . . Hazel Ladd
Bunthorne, a fleshy poet H. E Goddard
Grosvenor, an idyllic poet . R H Albee
Lady Jane . . . . Marion Baldwin
Lady Angela . . . . Dorothy Nash
Lady Saphir . . . . Lorraine Guillet
Lady Ella . . . . Doris Duprat
The Duke of Gunstable . M B Jenks
Colonel Calverley . . H. M Sheffield
Major Murgatroyd . . . . B. Baker

The cast of this play consists of "heavy dragoons," rapturous maidens, two rival poets, and Patience, the dairy maid. The soldiers are in love with the rapturous maidens, but the fickle maidens, once madly in love with the dragoons, prefer the poets, while the poets prefer the dairy maid. The problem is, whom does Patience choose? She is torn between love and duty. She has been taught to love Bunthorne, one poet, but she really loves Grosvenor, the other. The clever manner in which the plot is handled is characteristic of all Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

The rapturous maidens, when off the stage, are Helen Albee, Rosana Allen, Elizabeth Cory, Ruth Field, Georgiana Hulbert, Elizabeth Mandigo, Irene Marhulbert, Elizabeth Mandigo, Irene Marcott, Margaret Rice, Katherine Skinner, Helen Spaulding, Winona Spencer, Dorothy Sweeney, Helen Taylor and Evelyn Trask.

The soldiers, who are officers of the dragoon guards, are: J R Allen, F B Bachl, G Basilicato, H C Dalrymple, E J Dimon, L M Donahue, A O Eaton, K G Hooker, R S Jenks, W E Morgan, J O Percival, A A Scharbius, R D Towne, L S Walker and P E Weston.

Act I takes place at the exterior of Castle Bunthorne.

In Act II the scene is in a glade.

WAPPLER ANNOUNCES WOMEN'S ARIEL BOARD

Vice-President of Sophomore Class is Given New Honor—Board Completed Except for One Position

Jean Wappler has been appointed woman's editor of the 1931 Ariel. Miss Wappler whose home is in Rutherford, N. J., is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta fraternity, and is vice-president of the sophomore class. Prominent in athletics, she has made varsity hockey and basketball for two years and made varsity archery last Spring. Miss Wappler also shines along literary lines, she is vice-president of Blue Stockings, and edited the W. A. A. Handbook this Fall.

Having made Dramatic Club last year, after being in the freshman class play, she starred in the sophomore play this year. She is a member of W. A. A. Cabinet, Student Union Cabinet and Eta Sigma Phi, was on the Sophomore Hop Committee, has been on the honor roll each semester since being in college.

Miss Wappler has appointed her board as follows: Associate Editors, Dorothy Emery, Englewood, N. J., Virginia Goodenough, Jewett Center, Conn., Carolyn Whitney, Essex Junction; Grind Editors, Julia Hausley, Wellesley, Mass., Dorothy Nash, Concord, N. H., Janice Davis, Wallingford, and Ruth Field, Northeastern, Mass., Art Editor, Phyllis Arbuthnot, Burlington, Sports Editors, Lena Cochran, Stowe; Harriet Wright, Essex Junction, Photographic Editors, Carlotta Grimm, Windsor, Conn., Helen Taylor, Montclair, N. J.

The teacher training editor, chosen to represent the women enrolled in the two-year course in education, will be announced later.

C. M. T. C. ATTENDANCE TO MAKE UP FAILURE

C. M. T. C. work can make up for a semester's failure in the R. O. T. C. basic course. Captain Rattan announced to the freshman and sophomore men enrolled in military science, at the regular weekly drill last Friday morning. The Cynic approached the Military Department for further information concerning this new regulation and Colonel Black declared that the new ruling was intended to free men from making up any failures in the R. O. T. C. basic course while in college. Any man who got F for military last semester or this semester can by attending a C. M. T. C. camp this summer, get a passing grade in his military course here. It is expected of course, that the man will successfully complete his C. M. T. C. course. This ruling applies only to freshmen and sophomores.

April 15 was the closing date for submitting applications for admittance into a C. M. T. C. camp, but Colonel Black declared that if students here who are interested in the C. M. T. C. camp, act promptly and see him without further delay, their applications will be accepted. There are many vacancies in the Vermont C. M. T. C. quota and in the whole corps area there are 800 vacancies.

The following girls are in charge of the Practice House this week: Hostess, Marion Backus '29, assistant hostess, Margaret Corbin '29, cook, Emma Dougla[illegible], household manager, Helen Albee '29, assistants, Anne Wilder, '31 and Faire Linvill '31, freshman member, Jeannette Thabault, '32.

WOOD, KENDRICK, McBRIDE RUTKOWSKI TO TWIRL

Vermont baseball fans were greatly encouraged by the record that the green and gold nine brought back from the South and things are beginning to look a little brighter for the coming season. The Catamounts are due to invade the Bay State this week end where they have been signed up for encounters with the three strong line-ups of Boston College, Springfield, and Holy Cross. All three of these colleges have always put a good team on the field and their records seem to show that they will do the same this year.

Boston College First

The Cats are scheduled to meet the Boston College nine Thursday afternoon for the first battle of the trip. The Eagles seem to have been playing in pretty tough luck so far this season, for they were only able to play three of their seven games on the southern trip because of rain or wet grounds, and they have been unable to get in much outdoor practice since they came back also because of unfavorable weather. At the present time, they seem to have a serious problem on their hands in constructing a suitable outfield. They have one position open, and there is a strong possibility that Larry Gibson one of their strongest men in the outer garden will be unable to play because of ill health, in which case there will be two positions to fill. Boston has a fast, peppery infield, with Al Wooton at first Creedon at second, Spognardi at short, and O'Day taking care of the hot corner. All of these fellows can bat and have a high fielding average. Colbert, who is the regular catcher, has been connecting with the ball consistently for a batting average of .600.

Springfield Next

The next day the Catamounts are slated to meet the Springfield College nine, who have had only fair success so far this season, having lost three out of the five games that they played on their southern trip. It is entirely possible that some of the men that have held regular positions on the nine may lose them, and this seems especially true of the third baseman, Hooper, who has been given a hard run for his money by Bigelow. However, Hooper is valuable in that he is a pitcher of no mean ability. Woods, a veteran of last year, will hold down first base, while Becker, one of the best batters of the team will perform at second base. In the outfield they have Blesh, Williamson and Duncan, a formidable group of stickers. Gustafson, the diminutive basketball star will be seen at short.

And Holy Cross

On Saturday the Catamounts will travel to Worcester to meet one of the best looking baseball teams that ever represented Holy Cross. With a record of seven wins in as many starts on its southern trip, the Purple appears headed for another great season.

Jack Barry has an unusually well balanced team with no apparent weakness and battery strength that is the envy of college coaches. Comparative scores may mean little but the results of the Holy Cross team did not suffer any by its two victories over Reading just before the minor leaguers defeated the Braves.

The Holy Cross pitching staff has two brilliant southpaws in Frank Hoke Nekola and Ray Dobens. This pair did some fine work on the southern trip and will be a hard team for any college outfit to defeat. Norman Sloan, the rangy freshman ace of a year ago, has a fast ball that has already attracted the attention of the big league scouts. Gene Hebert the fourth member of the quartet is another coming star with all kinds of possibilities.

Dick Phelan, the veteran catcher from last year, is receiving strenuous opposition from Desautels and Cassidy, the football star. With such a capable

CAST SELECTED FOR JUNIOR WEEK PLAY

R. T. Krogh and Beverly Householder Have Leading Parts—Many Veterans Secure Roles in Spring Production

"SUMMERTIME" WILL BE AT THE STRONG IN MAY

R. T. Krogh and Beverly Householder will take the leading parts in the Junior Week play, "Summertime," as a result of a series of tryouts held to select the cast of the annual Spring production. The full cast was announced by Professor J. T. Metcalf of the psychology department and coach of dramatic productions. Professor A. H. Merrick of the Romance languages department, Professor W. E. Aiken and Miss Laura Parker, both of the English department.

Krogh will take the part of Wellington Spicer and Miss Householder will play that of Susan. The rest of the cast is as follows:

Jack Hollyhock ..... F. W. Householder, Jr.
Henry Davenport ..... P. M. Perry
Reginald Wybrow ..... H. D. Butterfield
Lukins ..... R. B. Aiken
Jenny Tompkins ..... Elizabeth M. Carr
Rose Philpotts ..... Kathryn A. Roach
Ernest Brankwater ..... Hope K. Rasselow
Vye Watkins ..... Dorothy Cottrell
Selina ..... Phoebe B. Flint

Veterans in Cast

A good part of the cast is composed of veteran players whose past appearances have always caused much enthusiasm. Both the leads are taken by active members of their respective dramatic societies, Krogh being prominent in Wig and Buskin and Miss Householder in Masque and Sandal. Thus Krogh made his dramatic debut last year in Lady Windermere's Fan and was winner last May of the Kingsley Prize Speaking competition. Beverly Householder has also secured an envious reputation through her work in dramatics, having participated in several productions.

Cottrell Prominent Veteran

Dorothy Cottrell has long been prominent in dramatic activities at Vermont. She has had a part in practically every college play since her freshman year and in such recent productions as Lady Windermere's Fan and The Devil's Disciple has won unusually favorable comment. Harvey Butterfield, a member of Wig and Buskin, did his first acting last fall and Fred Householder, although only a freshman, has already participated in his first college play, the rest of the cast two of whom are freshmen, were selected in competition with a host of veterans.

Due May 16

The play which has been selected and which will be presented at the Strong Theatre May 16, is "Summertime," by Louis N. Parker. It is a comedy of youth and irresponsible high spirits, with Ippiepen, Devon, as the scene of action. It was first pro-

The Duke Power Company Turbine-Generators

Where do young college men get in a large industrial organization? Have they opportunity to exercise creative talent? Is individual work recognized?

THE largest steam-turbine generator units to be installed south of the Mason-Dixon line are now being built for one of the most unusual organizations of its kind in the world. The Duke Power Company is famous for the efficiency of its power plants—and for the fact that its operating profits are distributed largely to charity.

At a horseshoe bend in the Catawba River in the heart of the Piedmont Carolinas the Duke Power Company is building a generating plant which, if present plans are carried out, will be the largest of its kind in the southeastern United States. The ultimate capacity will probably be 600,000 horsepower. The first two units, which Westinghouse is now building, each are to have a generating capacity of 55,000 kilowatts. They will develop 150,000 horsepower.

By operating at practically full capacity during the entire 24 hours of the day, letting the company's hydro-electric plants handle variations in the quantity of power required, the new units will furnish the means to reduce current costs to a minimum.

The large jobs go to large organizations. Westinghouse holds a strong appeal for young men of enterprise and genius because it almost daily provides contacts with outstanding developments in the electrical field.

A stunt was put on by each class and the seniors won first prize with an impersonation by Edna Shaw and Esther Nelson. The frosh won second place with a prize fight between Isabelle Holmes and Janet Miller.

The freshman and sophomores are tied for the all Sports cup, and the juniors and seniors are tied for second place. The spring sports will decide the issue. Early in May, five of the best and most representative co-ed athletes will be sent to St. Lawrence University to represent U. V. M. at a field day. On May 25, Middlebury women will come to Burlington for a field day. It will be recalled that the women of Vermont were their guests at a similar event last fall.

Society Notes

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

The engagement of Pauline Perkins, '27, to Kenneth Gurney, '28, Phi Delta Theta, has been announced; both are of Burlington.

PI BETA PHI

A daughter, Sally Ann, was born Saturday to Mr. and Mrs. Patrick of this city. Mrs. Patrick was formerly Jane Howe, '26.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Eta Chapter of Delta Delta Delta announces the first and last degrees of initiation for the following girls: Frances Laythe, '30; Emily Murray, '31; Dorothy Sweeney, Roberta Powers, Louise Manson, Charlotte Carpenter, Helen Cunningham, Elizabeth Smith and Cherolyn Barber, all of the class of '32. On Saturday evening, the final rites of initiation, the banquet was held at the Hotel Vermont. Miss Isabel E. Roberts, Province Deputy, and Lila Mayfield, a representative from the Middlebury chapter, were guests.

On Wednesday evening, April 10, the active members entertained the college chapter with a supper. The repledging ceremony for Verna Parker and Dorothy Collins, both of '31, took place.

SIGMA GAMMA

Sigma Gamma announces the initiation of Dorothy Dickinson, '31, and of the following freshmen: Rosetta Harmon, Anna Oakes, Elizabeth Mandigo, Ruth Holden and Edna Herridon. The ceremony on Friday evening, after the banquet was held at the Hotel Vermont. Frances Farr, an alumna, served as toastmistress.

KAPPA DELTA

A pledge breakfast was served Sunday morning, April 14. The second degree pledging service then took place for the following girls: Anna-Gray Bell '30, Winona Spencer, '31, Oralie Allen, '32, and Hildur Wilde, '32.

Fraternities Forbidden

Miami College has lifted its 80-year ban on secret Greek letter societies to the extent of permitting local fraternities to live on the campus. Social fraternities still are prohibited.

MORTAR BOARD HOLDS ANNUAL SPRING DANCE

A large number enjoyed the Spring Mortar Board dance, which was held at the Burlington High School gymnasium Saturday evening with the "Tropical Serenaders" syncopating from eight-thirty to twelve. The gymnasium was prettily decorated with pastel colored streamers of crepe paper extending from the center to the corners.

In the receiving line were Marion Backus and B. W. Gustafson, Professor and Mrs. J. E. Pooley, and Professor and Mrs. C. W. Stillwell.

Lucy Morgan was the chairman in charge of this dance, which marked the end of another season of the very successful semi-annual dances that Akraia Chapter of Mortar Board has sponsored in recent years. By means of these dances funds are raised for the social and personnel work of Mortar Board.

"I could die dancing," he said, as he walked all over her feet.

"Maybe so," she agreed; "but we don't need to make a death pact out of it."

FRATERNITIES TO DECIDE CHANGING RUSHING TIME

According to A. A. Luciani, '29 president of the Interfraternity Conference of the University of Vermont this organization will meet sometime next week to discuss the advisability of changing the time of rushing until after the football season. This contemplated change is in accordance with the views of Professor J. E. Donahue chairman of the Athletic Council, who last November, appointed a committee of five to meet with the Interfraternity Conference. As it has been quite evident that fraternity rushing does interfere with the football playing of both the varsity and the freshman teams, this change, if adopted, will ensure closer cooperation among the players of both teams. The change as contemplated by the Athletic and Interfraternity Councils will bring the rushing season in December instead of November, as it is now arranged.

At the same meeting the Interfraternity Conference will decide on the petition of Phi Sigma Delta, a Jewish fraternity founded in 1928, to enter as a member of the Conference.

HOLD CARD PARTIES TO BOOST MEMORIAL FUND

A card party was given Wednesday, April 3, at the Ethan Allen Club house for the benefit of the Dean Pearl Rand Wasson Memorial Fund.

The prize winners were the following ladies: Mrs. O. E. Luce, Mrs Eve lyn Cohen, Mrs. E Alpert, Mrs F. A. Girard, Mrs. Effie Truax, Mrs. Mary Rist, Mrs Kenneth Hinds, Mrs H G. Allen Mrs H. A. Allen, Mrs W W Eichell, Miss Laura Parker, Mrs Van Gelder, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Alfred, Mrs G F Preston and Mrs. H E. Gray.

There were seventy-five tables of cards in play. The members of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the afternoon were Miss Marian Way, Mrs. M L. Hard, Mrs Chester M Way, Mrs Rae V Parrott, Mrs T W Gurney, Mrs. A Hugh Miller and Mrs. Ben Lane.

The tables were most attractive with their covers of pastel tinted crepe paper and each had candy boxes of green and gold.

The girls who waited upon the tables for the afternoon were Miss Jacqueline Lanou, Miss Lucene Little, Miss Margaret Miller, Miss Janet Miller, Miss Margaret Corbin, Miss Beverly Householder, Miss Mary Waddell and Miss Lenore Aldinger.

In the evening at the same Club rooms, T. W Gurney had charge of the arrangements for a men's card party for the same Fund. There were twenty tables in play at that time.

GREY FRIARS SOCIETY HEARS MANUSCRIPTS

Grey Friars, men's honorary literary society, held a regular meeting last Thursday evening in the Radio Building. Considerable business was disposed of and many manuscripts were read. Humorous stories were read by Glenn Shiff and George Nelson. Herrick Macomber presented an interesting essay written in the style of Aristotle and dealing with college students. Sam Barker read a tale full of pathos and contrasts, and Robert Stewart read another essay dealing with college life.

Mother: No, dear, let him keep on thinking so. Towner Cat.

Here's a challenge to young men who plan to make farming a business

TO the serious-minded young man, especially to the graduate or under-graduate of agricultural colleges, there's a challenge in Florida's unbounded agricultural possibilities which offers an opportunity to exercise knowledge and skill for real profit in farming. Business men, you know, expect to make money. If you are one who plans to make farming a business—profitable, full of joy of achievement—you need the story about Florida.

Investigate!

There's no better way of spending your summer vacation than loading up the car for a camping trip to Florida for personal investigation of this state's many agricultural opportunities. You'll enjoy a vacation unlike any you've ever had. It won't cost a lot—but it may mean much to you in planning your future. Be sure to send for facts about agricultural subjects you are most interested in. There's a handy coupon below.

"PATIENCE"

Comments have been made and heard on the campus that Vermont is backward along musical lines. We hope to discourage further comment of this nature when we recommend that those dissatisfied ones attend the comic opera "Patience," presented at the Strong Theater Thursday evening of this week, by the combined Men's and Women's Glee Clubs. Those who have been so fortunate as to witness some of the rehearsals cannot praise the production and its cast too highly. They state in a most unreserved manner that the opera is the finest musical production that the University students have attempted for many years. In it the music lover will find his music, the playgoer his drama, and the pleasure seeker his entertainment. In other words, the comic opera has qualities which satisfy more than one social group. Its appeal reaches many. Consequently its universal popularity.

The pleasure-seeker may rest assured that his time will not be ill spent at this entertainment. "Patience" is the product of those world famous composers, Gilbert and Sullivan. Those who have attended one of their collaborations are high in their praise of any one of their more well known works. These two men, one of whom furnished the music and the other the words, list among their works "The Mikado," "The Pirates of Penzance," and "Pinafore." Anyone who has not witnessed one of these productions may well consider his musical education as neglected.

Further than that, the cast has been rehearsing regularly for the past month under the able direction of Professor Bennett, director of music, and Professor Metcalf, coach of dramatics. Those taking the leading roles are exceedingly well qualified for their parts both from the musical and also from the dramatic point of view. They have been heard at different times in the various concerts sponsored by Professor Bennett and given in the Ira Allen Chapel and have always proved more than satisfactory and pleasing. A strong chorus of mixed voices will support the cast.

The satire on an excessive form of high browism will be cleverly brought out and will furnish the humor to the plot. From any standpoint the opera is well worth your presence at the Strong, Thursday night. We heartily recommend "Patience" and must necessarily praise the cast and directors who have made it possible for Vermont students and their friends to enjoy a production of such high merit.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE NINE

Great was the misgiving of most of Vermont's ardent baseball fans for the future of the diamond sport at the University during the next few years when so many of its regulars, some of whom were veterans of four years, were graduated last June. With a new coach and a scarcity of material prospects did not look so bright this spring. With only two men who had ever made the trip South before and a half-dozen of more first-year men, the team split even on games played during the trip. The results were most gratifying and pleasing news to ears that were expecting worse.

An infield of first year handled the ball like veterans of more than one year's experience. The outfield did some spectacular work. The pitching staff of all new men lacking varsity experience did exceptionally well. Bucking teams of far greater experience the showing of the Vermont nine was nothing short of remarkable. If the team, without one day of outdoor practice, can make a showing like that, what may we expect when it trots out onto the Centennial Field. We are looking forward to it. But meanwhile, congratulations on the showing made on the trip south.

"College is not a safe place for a young man. The only safe place for young men, or for old, that I know is the grave. But college is a good place for men to grow. Growth implies danger, since it means the possibility of growing worse as well as better."—Dr. James B. Pratt, Williams College.

COLLEGE NIGHTS AT THE MAPESTIC

Whoopie! At last the burg has awoke! At last the age of modernism has arrived and arisen in all its glory! At last Dear Old U. V. M. is to be officially recognized! The dirt? Well, just back up the Macks and we'll shovel it aplenty.

C. C. Pyle, manager of that broken down shack in the woods known as the Mapestic, and "Art" Frown, the fertilizer and the man who taught Jesse Crawfish all he knows, or should know, today conceived a bright idea. As it was in a strange place, they treated it gently for quite some time until they considered it mature enough to walk around the campus without a chaperone. Whereupon they proceeded to set it foot loose and let it do its darndest.

College nights! Well, why not? Everyone raises heck down there anyway. Why not set aside a couple of eves when the whole Hill could get together and do just about as much as they pleased? Throw a theater party, throw a laughing fit—the only things you can't throw are eggs. The management fears their odor might be too strong.

Lots of surprises, well-fertilized songs, and a nifty collegiate picture all set for you to laugh with—or is it at? Uh-huh—see you down there Wednesday or Thursday night!

IT'S GONNA BE BAD

Tune—I Want to Be Bad

CHORUS

If it's naughty to crack a smile,
Keep on laughing the whole blame while—
Let me tell you,
I know it's gonna be bad!
If it's naughty to hear a song,
Partly pretty—a trifle wrong,
Then the answer is Yes, it's gonna be bad!
This thing of cramming your stuff on those nights may be all mighty well,
But why cram your stuff on these nights when you'll want to raise ——— I.?
And don't forget it—
If you're tired of seeing shows,
Tired of dances and goodness knows,
And you want to raise Cain—
It's gonna be bad!

Valuable Experiments

As a result of experimental work by the University of Minnesota Mines Experiment Station, millions of tons of low-grade magnetite on the eastern end of the Mesabi Range, formerly worthless, are now under development.

University ore experiments have made it possible for a $5,000,000 plant to be built, and when operations are begun, the income provided will be more than enough to make up for the cost to the state of the School of Mines and the Mines Experiment Station.

The machine which has made possible the use of this hitherto worthless ore, was invented by E. W. Davis, superintendent of the station.

An edict recently issued by the president of the University of Detroit forbids the co-eds of the mid-western institution from conversing with the male students. If anyone of the fifty girls in the University of Detroit is caught talking to one of the 2,000 men, her expulsion follows immediately.

GODDARD SEM. BECAMES A SEGREGATED SCHOOL

At a meeting of the Trustees of Goddard Seminary of Barre, Vt., April 9, a recommendation was introduced by Stanley C. Wilson, chairman of the Executive Committee, commending to the trustees a plan for the reorganization of Goddard Seminary from a co-educational school to a school exclusively for girls. The recommendation was discussed and approved by the members of the board and it was voted to adopt and make the reorganization effective for the school year of 1929-30.

This action on the part of the trustees places Goddard in the distinctive position of being the first co-educational school in the State of Vermont to take this step and conform to the increasing demand for segregation of the sexes in private schools. During the past few years a considerable number of private schools in various sections of New England have reorganized into schools for boys or schools for girls.

The academic head of the school will be a dean of women who is to be a woman experienced as an educator of girls. Due to the change in the policy and type of the school, Principal Rogers, who has been its head for the past two years, has resigned, his resignation to take effect at the end of the present school year. The courses offered will include the College Preparatory Course, the General Academic Course and a Secretarial Course.

College Men Wanted in Business

James Simpson, president of the great Marshall Field Company, in the Yale Daily News, has made the following statement:

"The college man long has been needed in business. We see him now appearing in office and bank, in factory and store. He will be the business man of the future.... Business needs trained minds, high standards and constructive ability. It needs and richly rewards real leadership...."

COLLEGE COMICS ASS'N REVERSE THEIR ACTION

Reversing their action of a year ago when they barred cooperation of college papers with College Humor, the Western Association of College Comics, at a recent meeting in Reno, Nev., agreed primarily that the standard of the magazine has improved favorably since a year ago and that it should not be considered detrimental to have reprinted material in the publication. A compact was signed between the president of the association and the publisher of College Humor providing for "the working together of the two groups for the better interests of the college field."

MIDDLEBURY, NORWICH, AND ST. MICHAELS NINES PRACTICING REGULARLY

[illegible] though Vermont will have [illegible] competition to conquer in [illegible] out on top of the heap [illegible] baseball series this year. [illegible] rivals—St. Michael's, Mid [illegible] Norwich—are practicing [illegible] and their respective nines [illegible] nding into shape.

[illegible] Michael's team has had the [illegible] ce of the three, for they [illegible] first work-out last Tuesday [illegible] when Coach Murphy had [illegible] t for a long practice. About [illegible] reported for the first time. [illegible] number will soon be cut [illegible] The Michaelmen seem to be [illegible] their greatest troubles with the infield, for they lost the majority of [illegible] infielders by graduation last spring. Jack Slattery, known to Vermonters through his prowess on the basketball court, will probably hold down first base. Johnny Cashman, McGovern, O'Brien and Foley are all out for the other infield positions. St. Mikes seems to have a fairly strong pitching staff this year. Connally and Cross, both veterans, are back and they have three new men who look as though they might develop into something good—Balnaitis, Welch and Jennings. There is a great battle being put up for the catcher's berth, as Tim Connors and Jack Lynch are both showing great form on the receiving end of the battery.

The Cadets of Norwich have the jump on St. Mikes, for, with the exception of two positions in the infield, the first team seems to be fairly well decided. Captain Hourin will hold down the catcher's position while Waining and Johnson, both of last year's nine, will probably bear the brunt of the hurling. Whitsides, another varsity man of last year, will sport around the hot corner and Kane will be his base-path neighbor at short stop.

At present there are two men at both first and second base. Aimi and O'Donnell are two good first basemen, but it looks as though Aimi has a slight margin of lead. If he wins out O'Donnell will undoubtedly alternate with Waining in the outfield when the latter is pitching. At second base, Connor and Hartford are competing for the position and as yet the battle is too close to tell how it will end up. The Horsemen have three good outfielders in the persons of Coane, Tansey and Waining.

Without a doubt, Middlebury will have a good team this year. They have usually given the Green and Gold the best run for their money in the state and it looks as though this habit will continue this year. They have a team that is composed for the most part of veterans, in which respect they have an advantage over the others.

VARSITY TRACK SHIFTS FROM CAGE TO FIELD— WANT MORE CANDIDATES

Varsity track practice is now in full swing and the scene of activity has shifted from the cage to Centennial Field. A good number of veterans have turned out and are going through their daily workout. Several freshmen are showing to be promising material, and it seems safe to predict that Vermont should make a good showing in the dual meets, the first of which is the one next with Union on May 4.

There is, however, plenty of opportunity for more men who can run or think they can run, especially in the sprints and the hurdles. If you are interested in track, come out and see what you can do. No sport offers a wider variety of athletic endeavor as track, and the chances are that even the novice will be successful in some one of the fifteen events. Let's have more men out! Report to the coach on the field any afternoon this week at 4 o'clock. This may be your chance to make a letter.

The juniors in the R. O. T. C. Battalion will study the trench mortar and the one-pound gun beginning next Monday. The juniors will take up the machine gun a little while after the freshmen finish firing on the outdoor range. Firing for the freshmen will start next Monday.

After these studies the entire battalion will begin to prepare for Federal inspection which comes this year on May 13 and 14. More complete details will be announced by the Military department later.

CAT'S MEOW

—SPORTING EDITOR—

The Massachusetts trip on which the baseball squad leaves tomorrow night will put the Catamounts up against the toughest week-end of their schedule and two of the best college nines in the country.

Holy Cross has won every one of seven starts and this without a day of previous outdoor practice.

Boston College has not fared as well, having won two out of four games to date, but one of the defeats was at the hands of Pittsfield of the Eastern League.

Boston College has as flashy a bunch of fielders as any coach could hope for, but such sluggers as Weston, Creedon and O'Day, the sack guardians, are below form at the bat and the Eagles have only one A1 pitcher in McNulty.

Many a pro team could rest assured of some effective hurling with Holy Cross' pitchers on hand. Dobens, Nekola, Sims and Hebert are all colorful twirlers without mercy. The first two are port-siders.

Springfield College has been hard hit by the weather. The southern trip record is only fair and Vermont will be the Bay Staters' first home opponent.

Captain Johnston is the only veteran pitcher at the Y. M. C. A. College. The others are sophomores.

"Pie" Traynor drew a big hand from the stands in the Vermont-N. Y. U. game when he made an "impossible" stop. Although he was too late to get the runner at first the stop was the outstanding play of the game.

More scores with Vermont's opponents in italics: Pittsfield (E. L.) 7, Boston College 5; Marines 6, Harvard 3; Harvard 9, Catholic U. 3; Dartmouth 5, Yale 2; New York 3, Rutgers 1.

Wineapple did the expected when he struck out fourteen and allowed only three hits as Providence shut out C. C. of N. Y., 4 to 0, Saturday.

Harvard and Columbia played a spectacular pitching duel Saturday which resulted in a 1 to 1 tie, when the game was called after the ninth inning on account of the severe cold.

Heinie Swarthout, Dartmouth football and basketball star, and Bob Leigh, Dartmouth diver, have been notified that they have passed the United States army air service examinations and will leave in June to take up their flying course. Swarthout has been a mainstay on the football and basketball teams. He is a junior and was counted on heavily for next year's teams in both sports. The lure of flying, however, was more powerful than the call of athletics and he will not return to school. Leigh has been a diver on the Dartmouth swimming team for three years and will be graduated in June.

Swarthout made honorable mention as an all-American football end and was placed on the first all-eastern intercollegiate basketball league team as a forward.

Although Los Angeles will be the scene of most of the Olympic sports in 1932, the winter games will be held at Lake Placid, N. Y., the international Olympic committee decided last week.

Everett F. Waining was elected captain of the 1929-30 Norwich hockey team.

Warren H. Burr, manager of basketball, is working on the schedule for the 1929-30 season. The list of games is unusually good and is very near completion. Through the efforts of the manager a New York trip has been arranged for January, when the Crescent A. C. and Rensselaer will entertain the Catamounts. The latter will also travel to Holy Cross and Springfield on one week-end. A few home dates are still open.

Candid Friend: "By whom?"

TRACK OUTLOOK BRIGHT AT MIDDLEBURY BUT CADETS LACK MATERIAL

With the coming of spring, track prospects begin to take on added life. Both Norwich and Middlebury hope to have a big season, but the latter seems to be especially favored. Track has always been Middlebury's best sport and it has become a habit for that college to consider the result of the Green Mountain Conference meet a foregone conclusion. Material has been plentiful as a rule and that appears to be the case again this year. Middlebury will doubtless be Vermont's chief rival and some close competition may be expected.

Norwich does not appear to be a strong contender for the Green Mountain title. Lack of good material and an insufficient amount of interest probably explains why this line of activity is of minor importance at Norwich. Therefore, not much opposition will be had from the Cadets.

However, at this early stage of the season, it is difficult to foretell what to expect. A few weeks later, after the track candidates have had an opportunity to practice out of doors, prospects may look brighter.

The letter men whom Coach Ben Beck will have to replace at Middlebury are ex-Captain Charles C. Arnold [illegible] the mile and half mile, Wil[illegible] Donald who ran the same dis[illegible] Milan H. Palmer who per[illegible] the broad jump and also threw [illegible] the hammer, discus, [illegible] javelin. To replace Captain [illegible] and Donald, Coach Beck has [illegible]. Thayer who won his letter last year and ought to round into pretty good shape this season. Witt won his [illegible] years ago and ought to come in handy, and Haskins is also a likely candidate. In throwing the [illegible], javelin and shot [illegible] and Guarnaccia, both of whom won their letter last year, are back again to try their luck in the same events. Guarnaccia is also a [illegible] broad jumper.

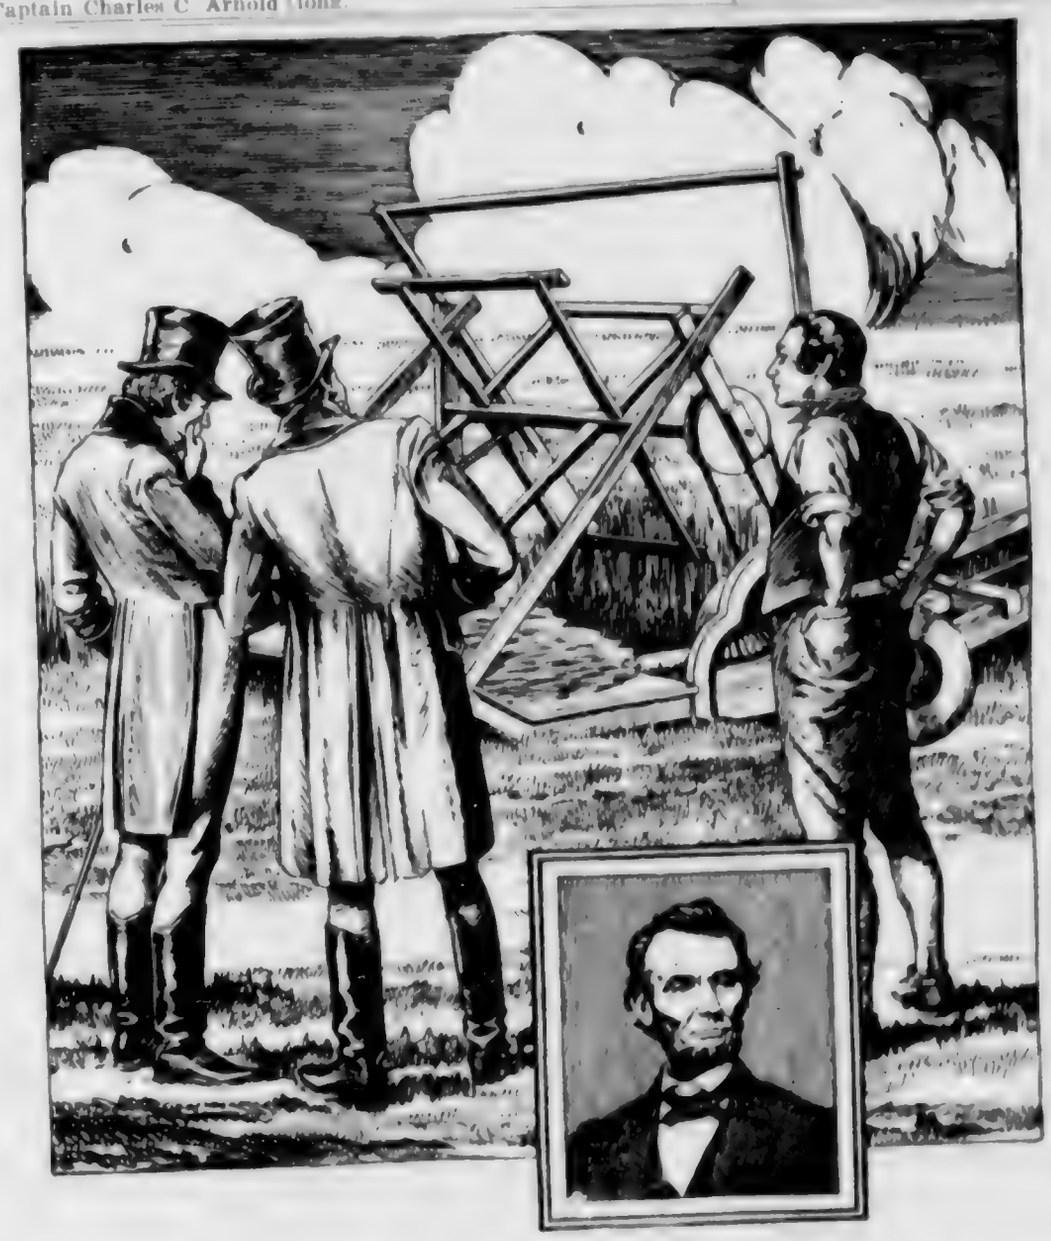
In the 100 and 220-yard dashes Captain Smith should again lead the field as he consistently has in his three years of collegiate competition. Grugel has won his letter in these events and ought to round into pretty good shape. Duffany is also one of last year's sprint candidates.

Burrows and Goltry are the letter men competing in the 440-yard run who ought to continue their good performances of previous seasons, and two sophomores, Sanzo and Spencer, show plenty of promise. Goltry also attempts the half mile and 220-yard dash occasionally but they are a little out of his style.

Dalton is the only letter man in the two-mile event. The two other candidates of last year's team are Butler and Cox. Both should show up better this year.

The hurdles seem particularly weak. Sherman won his letter in this event last year but he is out for baseball this spring. Others of last year's candidates who will again attempt the run are Stanley and Newman. Maybe Sherman will change his mind regarding his baseball aspirations and come out for the running events before long.

P. E. DEPARTMENT WILL TEACH GOLF AND RIDING



The Physical Education Department will continue the course of instruction in golf started last year if enough [illegible] of the student body are interested. Definite arrangements have not been made as yet, and cannot be made until those interested have seen Mr. Prentice who will have charge of the instruction. If enough students are interested a special rate from the Country Club will be secured if possible. Credit for physical training will be given.

A course in riding is also being organized by the Physical Education Department. All those interested should sign their names on the poster on the athletic bulletin board. Definite arrangements for this course cannot be made until enough have signified their intentions of joining the class. As now planned the classes will be held twice a week sometime in the afternoon. Probably the riding will be either in Queen City Park or on the Holt estate. Credit for physical training will also be given in this course.

"What's the future tense of 'pet'?"
"Will marry."

Bagley should continue to take care of the high jump as well as he has in previous years. Other candidates of last year's team for this event are Hoffnagle and Affleck, the former having won his letter two years ago. Bagley also attempts the pole vault, but Williams is the college star in this event. Other candidates for the pole vault are Tomlinson and Paul.

In the weight throwing events Schmidt and Guarnaccia will probably carry the brunt of the work with Johnson, McLeod, and DuBois right behind them.

LOCARNO PACT IS TOPIC OF I. R. C. ON THURSDAY

Robert Stewart, '30, Reads Paper —League of Nations and World Court Also Discovered at Last Meeting of International Relations

Last Thursday afternoon at four, the International Relations Club held a regular meeting in the Vermonters' Club House. The topic of the meeting was the Locarno Pact of 1925. A paper describing the events leading up to the conference, the work of the conference, the treaty itself and its effects, was read by Robert Stewart, '30. After the reading of the paper, the meeting was opened for discussion and several points concerning the Locarno Pact, the League of Nations, the World Court and general aspects of international relations were brought up by the members.

During the business meeting which preceded the regular program, letters from Dartmouth and Amherst were brought to the attention of the members. These contained suggestions that a lakeside International Relations Institute be held here in the fall with several well known authorities as speakers. It was decided that no definite action be taken on the suggestion at this time but that the matter should be carefully considered.

NOTICES

Meeting of the John Dewey Club tonight in Hall A, first floor, in the Medical Building, starting at eight o'clock. Dr. H. Jordan, assistant professor of histology in the Medical College, will give an illustrated lecture on "Sane Biological Speculations," dealing with the origin of life. The lecture is not technical. Refreshments will be served.

The next issue of the Literary Magazine is under way and there is great need of short stories, essays and poetry material. The new editor wishes that any who have written material for the Tri-state Literary Contest and have had it returned to them would please submit it to the Literary Magazine for publication. Contributions should be sent by Friday, April 18, to Miss Janice Goodrich, '30, at 52 Hickok Place.

The Ariel is due to make its appearance on the campus in a month. Juniors are again reminded that they will not receive an Ariel until their Ariel tax is paid. There will be a table and a member of the business staff in the hall of North College tomorrow, Wednesday, to facilitate the payment of these taxes. Others may order their copy at this time. There is only a very limited number left and first come, first served.

Eta Sigma Phi will meet Tuesday evening at eight o'clock in 34 South College.

The Senior Cane Committee announces that Senior Canes have now arrived at Hayes and Carneys'. Seniors who have ordered canes will please call for them as soon as possible.

Among the great questions of today: "Who the hell has a corkscrew?"

TRUSTEES CANDIDATES WERE PROMINENT HERE

As ballots have been sent out by the Alumni Council of the University of vermont asking graduates of the institution to vote for one of three candidates considered for the office of trustee of the University, it is interesting to note what part they have played in their college years. However the task it may seem the history of each recorded in their respective college annual publications do not differ appreciably from those recorded of any prominent graduate in the four years.

Fred Grant Wright of New York City, the first candidate selected graduated with the class of 1895, in the Electrical Engineering course. He was a graduate of Burlington High school. In his senior year he was elected president of his class and was chosen as a member of Boulder. He also served on various committees athletic and social, he was editor-in-chief of the CYNIC and of the Ariel. At the present day Mr. Wright is employed as program planning manager for the Western Electric Company.

Dr. Peer Prescott Johnson of Beverly Mass. the second candidate, graduated with the class of 1898 in the Classical curriculum, and with the class of 1900 in the College of Medicine. He was also a graduate of Burlington High School with the class of 1894. He was captain of his class football team, director of the tennis association; served on diverse class committees and on graduation was awarded honors in Greek. At the present time Dr. Johnson is a highly respected surgeon of Beverly, Mass.

William Thomas Whelan of New York City, the third candidate, graduated with the class of 1898 in the Classical course. He was a graduate of Montpelier High School, and later became president of the Montpelier High School Club. In his freshman, sophomore and junior years, he played on the varsity baseball team. At the present time Mr. Whelan is an insurance broker.

The successful candidate will succeed Charles W. Doten of Cambridge, Mass., whose term expires this year and will serve for four years. The ballots required to be returned by June 15 in order to be officially counted.

GROAT, LAATSCH, DEAN ADDRESS GREY FRIARS

Athletics are being over-emphasized in the colleges today, declared Doctor Groat, head of the Economics Department at the University, and a noted economist, who addressed the members of Grey Friars, men's honorary literary society, at a supper held at Sally's following an initiation of the society at the Billings Library on the evening of March 28, prior to the Easter recess. He said that college students secure enormous benefits from such campus organizations as foster the "fun of the mind," as he termed it. He highly commended the John Dewey Club and told the initiates of the society that they had done well to join an organization which would prove worth while to them.

Doctor Groat declared that he wished he himself had had the opportunity while he was in college to belong to such a society as Grey Friars. Such a literary society afforded the opportunity to those who were fortunate enough to belong and were interested in letters to receive good constructive advice from one's own fellows. Criticism of one's style and way of writing from friends would tend to finer and better writing. Doctor Groat stated his own experiences with writing and said that membership in a literary organization in his student days would have been invaluable to him.

Doctor Groat declared that he could not put down on record as favoring any movement upon the campus which would give pre-eminence to the student organizations of the nature of Grey Friars which stressed the intellectual side of the student.

Mr. Laatsch of the Political Science department was also a special speaker at the meeting.

Professor Dean of the English Department who is an honorary member of Grey Friars, also spoke to the students and said that if one continued always to write he was bound somehow to create something worth while some day. He said that, possibly, among the members of the society there was one who would turn out to be a great writer. Whether they went into professional writing or wrote only as a hobby, the essential thing was, after all, to keep on writing and eventually perhaps something might come out from it all.

ADDED IMPROVEMENTS PLANNED FOR CAMPUS

Efforts of President Bailey Succeed—New Walks, Lights and Roads Will Grace University

As President Bailey announced last fall further improvements upon the campus are being made this Spring. Work has already been begun on a concrete walk between the northwest corner of the campus and the library and the dirt walk that is now in use. This walk will be at least four and a half feet in width. A concrete walk will also be made in front of the Williams Science Hall in place of the short macadam stretch which will be dug up to make room. Eighteen new ornamental lights such as have been installed along campus row will also be placed around the campus.

The new walks are made possible through a gift to the University for that purpose. The ornamental lights will be installed by the city of Burlington.

The program of street construction will also continue as a direct road is to be put in from between Williams Science Hall and the Old Mill extending to Converse Hall and between the rows of trees that were originally planted for this purpose. This will straighten out one of the apparent irregularities of the campus and will improve the appearance of the back campus that has for a long time been neglected. A slight change in the position of the tennis courts will be made to make way for Converse Terrace.

All these new improvements will beautify the campus, it is believed, and make it more serviceable to the students and more attractive to everyone.

Green and Gold Nine Meets B. C., Springfield, Holy Cross

trio available to handle the four pitchers, Barry has the finest battery strength that has represented the squad in some time.

Shevlin, the classy first sacker, who fields his position with all the polish of an experienced big league player, is expected to figure prominently in tomorrow's game. In addition to his nifty fielding he is also one of the best hitters on the squad. Captain Dick Harrell, Blondy Ryan and Jere Shanahan round out an infield that has a real batting punch in addition to a sturdy defense. The outfield will be well taken care of by Lawrence, Fisher and Hurley.

The probable batting order:

BANKERS PRESENT NEW LOAN SCHOLARSHIP FUND

A loan scholarship of $250 for the school year beginning in the autumn of 1929 has been allocated the University of Vermont by the American Bankers Association Foundation according to information received from President Bailey. This award is made by the American Bankers Association Foundation for Education in Economics of New York City. The purpose of the loan scholarship is to enable the worthy student of limited means to continue the study of courses in banking and economics.

President Bailey will be glad to furnish any further information concerning the award. Application blanks may be obtained from his office.

SENIORS NOMINATE FOR CLASS ORATORS

Nominations Made in Anticipation of Today's Election to Select Speakers for Class and Founders' Days

MANY NOTED SENIORS IN THE LIST OF NOMINEES

This afternoon, the senior class will hold elections of the Founder's Day and Senior Week speakers. The nominating committee met Wednesday night and selected the candidates. All of the nominees have been and are prominent on the campus. The list includes six Boulder men; two former class presidents; both 1929 Kake Walk directors; the managers of baseball, basketball, tennis and eligibility; four members of Mortar Board; and several members of the different athletic teams. All of the women have been very prominent in dramatics and in student government.

The nominations are as follows: Founder's Day speakers, J. S. Estabrook and C. H. Overly.

Campus Oration, W. F. Rogers and P. B. Hopson.

Oration to Ira Allen, B. W. Gustafson and D. G. McLaughlin.

Oration to Lafayette, R. T. Krogh and L. C. Morgan.

Oration to the undergraduates, C. C. Lyman and F. F. O'Keefe.

Class Marshals, J. S. Estabrook, K. L. Price, B. R. Morse and R. E. Young.

Ivy Oration, Catherine Bassett, Marion Backus and Frances Hawley.

Class History, Marion Baldwin, Dorothy Cottrell and Charlotte Cleveland.

TO ISSUE ARIEL EARLY PART OF JUNIOR WEEK

Many innovations in the way of features, additions, and arrangements will mark the 1930 Ariel to be distributed the first part of Junior Week. All copy for the issue was in before the Easter vacation and proof is now being received. The sample covers have also been received and a blue design has been selected by the board.

Although it has not been definitely disclosed as to just what the new features will be, enough has been made known to show that this issue of the Ariel is to be one of the best in years. Chief among the important changes are the complete remodeling of the athletic section, the addition of a special feature on forensics and several shifts in the order of the sections.

The first part of the book will be unchanged as to general arrangement with the introduction, campus section, and University section following in order. The latter includes pictures and write-ups of the faculty, classes, and the societies. Next will come the athletics followed by the organizations. This year the fraternities will follow, instead of precede the honorary societies.

The women's section will come next, followed by the feature section. It seems that most of the new and original details will be found but these are being closely guarded until the Ariel is published. The Kake Walk, Milling Around Here and There sections complete the body of the book while the Snapshot section will be placed among the advertisements.

PRESS CLUB APPOINTS TWO NEW COMMITTEES

The Press Club held a regular business meeting Monday, April 15, at 1.30. The two committees of the newspaper and handbook committees were elected. The members of the newspaper committee, Cora Humphrey, '32, Helen Williams '32, Beatrice Parkhill, '32, and Marion Stoney, '32. The following members of the class of '31 were elected members of the high school committee, Gertrude Bingham, Agnes Hall and Mildred Stone. It was decided that the next meeting will be a banquet. The date will be announced later.

SPRING GRID PRACTICE OPENS MONDAY—WHOLE SCHEDULE A WEEK LATE

Coach Rattan has been having plenty of trouble with his spring football because of weather that is far from favorable so the beginning of the Spring training period has been postponed until Monday, April 22.

Forty-two men have drawn equipment, which augurs well for a good team in the fall, as it is a considerably larger number than that which reported for practice last year.

The schedule for practice has been moved back a week, including the game between the Green Jerseys, and the Black Jerseys, which is moved from May 3 to May 10.

DR. JORDAN SPEAKS ON BIOLOGY TO MEMBERS OF JOHN DEWEY CLUB

Histology Professor Delivers Illustrated Lecture to Philosophy Club on "Some Biological Speculations"

Doctor H. Jordan, assistant professor of histology in the Medical College, spoke on "Some Biological Speculations" to the members of the John Dewey Club at their last meeting which was held last Tuesday evening in Hall A of the Medical College. The lecture was illustrated and charts were used. Doctor Jordan attempted to point out the various modern conceptions or the origin and nature of life and to approve the value of each one of them.

Doctor Jordan opened his lecture with an explanation of how the biologist looks at life. He declared that the world may be looked at from one of two points of view, the materialistic view which sees laws operating everywhere throughout the universe, or the vitalistic view which brings in a Deity or some other supernatural force to direct things in all creation. The biologist tends to the materialistic view since his view makes it possible for us to understand the workings of nature.

The speaker said that the biological functions of the uni-cellular animal are identical with those of higher organisms, including man. Consequently, in attempting to seek an understanding of how life originated, one would logically go to the uni-cellular animal and study him. The uni-cellular animal may even remember, he declared. Doctor Jordan pointed out that even men arise from the fertilization of a single cell, and the development of the embryo, the individual goes through all the steps in his evolution. Every one is composed of cells and these cells are all practically alike. Thus the single cell stands at the base of life. It seems that the origin of this cell was purely fortuitous, following the laws of nature.

Doctor Jordan showed pictures of the different cells which compose the human body and related their functions to the remaining cell in the body.

In closing, Doctor Jordan stated that to his belief there is no conflict between true science and true religion. Whither are things going, where is evolution going to bring us? The vitalist says there is an entelerky and that what is occurring now is the unfolding of a thing to possibilities. The materialist would say that things are governed by natural laws and that it is these forces which shall determine the sequence of events. Perhaps, after all, the entelerky, or God, of the vitalist, coincides perfectly with the scientists' or materialists' point of view, and that there is friendly harmony between both conceptions, said Doctor Jordan.

Refreshments were served.

Colonel Black announces that federal inspection will this year be held on May 13 and 14. The inspecting officers will be the same as those for last year, Lieutenant-Colonel Walter Goodwin and Major Robert H Barrett both of whom are now stationed at the headquarters of the First Corps Area.

U. V. M. OFFERS PRIZES FOR ORATORY CONTEST

State Oratorical Finals Set For Tonight in High School Competition—Scholarships Reward Winners

Under the joint auspices of the University of Vermont, the Vermont Headmasters' Club and the Burlington Free Press, the state finals of the Oratorical Contest will be held tonight at eight o'clock in the Burlington High School Auditorium.

Those participating in tonight's finals have already been winners in their respective districts; each district sending a speaker who has already won a hundred and fifty dollars scholarship and another who, by being chosen second, was awarded a scholarship of one hundred dollars also at the University of Vermont.

The three prizes which will be awarded tonight, in addition to those already won are a $150 scholarship for first place; a $100 scholarship for second place; and a $75 scholarship for third place.

The judges who have been selected for tonight's finals are Rt Rev Booth Bishop Coadjutor, Episcopal Diocese of Vermont, Eugene H. Clowse, principal Richmond High School; Professor Leon W. Dean, English Department, University of Vermont; V. Spencer Goodreds, instructor in public speaking and drama, Middlebury College; Professor Peter D. Webster, Department of English, Norwich University.

Professor Wellington E Aiken, department of English, University of Vermont, will preside.

The speakers who will take part in the state finals are Russell Colburn of Burlington High School, Bernard Mulcahy of Spaulding High School, Miss Mary Guithrie of Barton Academy, Miss Leona Warren of People's Academy, Morrisville, John St John of Rutland High School and Gordon Thomas of Brattleboro High School.

The state champion will be sent to Worcester, Mass., for the zone finals of this district on May 4, with all expenses paid by the Burlington Free Press. If the Vermont winner should finish first in the zone finals, he or she will go on to the national finals in Washington, and also will be given a free trip to South America this summer with the other winners in the zone finals throughout the country.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL GETS THE CROP OF BRICKBATS

At Columbia College a constant stream of criticism has poured in on The Alumni News, because of the habitually losing team and lack of enough spectators to fill the stadium. As a result of this complaint The News proposes that the department throw over the old athletic administration through an athletic committee, composed of an equal number of representative students, alumni and faculty. Athletics ought to be reorganized, unified, given the status of a department and made responsible to the president of the university only. The old system is a vestige of the old days of amateur sports and The News is undoubtedly right in urging an efficient modern machine if Columbia wishes to hold up her head in commercialized intercollegiate football.

Some students—still much in the minority but an intelligent and aggressive one—are advocating another course that is open. They would abandon the expensive and distracting intercollegiate competition in football which so much resembles the future armament races between nations. The Amherst Student has proposed that the college abolish intercollegiate football and build up a strong intramural game. At Cornell, where an alumni committee is "investigating" the athletic situation, The Sun asks that these well meaning adults stop worrying about the inability of Cornell teams to win games. The Sun says that "the situation does not want to be investigated. It wants to be left alone."

The main trouble with most political speakers is, not that they don't put enough fire in their speeches but that they don't put enough of their speeches into the fire.

STUDENT UNION STARTS NOVEL TRADITION WITH OFFICERS' INSTALLATION

Representatives of Various Organizations Speak at Meeting—Dance in Gymnasium Follows

Formal installation of the new officers of Student Union was held Monday evening at eight o'clock in the Old Chapel. This custom of formal installations was used for the first time and the ceremony was an impressive one. Catherine Bassett '29 the outgoing president presided at a short business meeting at which reports of the past year's work were given by the heads of the various women's organizations.

Marian Backus, '29, spoke for W. A. A. and Masque and Sandal, Charlotte Cleveland '29 for Dramatic Club, Margaret Durick, '29 for Cynic, Dorothy Cottrell, '29 for Press Club and Georgina Hubert '31 for the Glee Club. All reported a very successful year in their different fields, and all expressed the hope that next year would be still more so under the direction of the newly-elected executives.

Marian Backus gave a short account of Lilac Day, which is to be an event in the near future, how it has been carried on and the plans which have been made for this year. Mildred Whitney, '29 who has charge of the dances for that day, explained a little about them and how important it is that a great interest be taken in them so that Lilac Day may be an outstanding success.

Following these reports, the formal installations took place at which Dorothy Cottrell the retiring Chief Justice administered the oath, first to the new president, Dorothy Dailey, '30, and then to the other members of the Council: Chief Justice Marion Tifft '30, Vice President Georgina Hubert '31 Secretary Elzada Fiske '30 Treasurer Joyce Richardson '30 Chairman of the Social Calendar Natalie Gordon '30 Program Chairman Margaret Stanley '31.

Student Union presented Catherine Bassett and Dorothy Cottrell with pins as they left their respective offices and Dorothy Dailey and Marion Tifft as they entered upon their new duties.

Dorothy Dailey from the president's chair while delegates were elected to go to the Student Government Conference which is to be held at Colby College, Waterville, Me. April 26-27. The delegates elected were Dorothy Dailey and Marion Tifft.

The meeting was then adjourned and a dance was held in the gym, at which a jazzy orchestra furnished the syncopation. Refreshments of ice cream and cookies were served. Marian Everett, outgoing program chairman, was in charge of the affair.

LETTERS IN FENCING AWARDED TO FIVE MEN

Varsity fencing letters have been awarded by the Athletic Council to the following men:

JUNIOR CLASS PICKS FOUNDER'S SPEAKER

Franklin A. Sears Elected Founder's Day Orator—Has Been Prominent in Various Activities

DIGNITY OF TRADITION CENTERS ABOUT EVENT

Franklin A. Sears of Brattleboro, Vermont, was unanimously elected Founder's Day speaker at a meeting of the Junior Class last Monday.

Mr. Sears is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity and is especially well fitted for this honor having highly distinguished himself as a public speaker both in high school and in college. Early in his freshman year in Brattleboro High School he entered the debating team and continuing all through his high school days to take part in all debates and oratorical contests, gained two scholarships from the University in recognition of his ability. Since his coming to Vermont he has kept up his reputation as a debater having been on the debating team for three years and manager for two. Mr. Sears has not limited his activities to debating. He is at present assistant manager of the 1930 Ariel, publicity manager of Wig and Buskin and secretary of Tau Kappa Alpha and has served on numerous committees.

Founder's Day was started some years ago for the purpose of increasing in the minds of the students love for the University and its traditions. The student body is represented by two speakers chosen one from each of the junior and senior class. These speakers review the life of the founders show us the great difficulties they had to undergo and the debt of gratitude we owe them. Ceremonies are held around the Vermont Boulder where it is customary for the class honorary societies including Cap and Skull and Scabbard and Blade to name their successors for the following year. The R. O. T. C. Battalion is present and in formation to increase the meaning and dignity of the occasion.

Last year Founder's Day speeches were delivered by L. G. Leary, '28, and C. H. Overly, '29.

REV. MR. CRICHTON AT CHAPEL WEDNESDAY

Rev. Mr. A. R. Crichton of Vergennes, Vt. spoke in chapel Wednesday morning on the visions of man, and their relation to religion. We must have courage to persevere and extent of power to see for without them our lives are worthless to humanity and ourselves.

Jacob directed his father and defrauded his brothers then he left home. His first night away from home he had time to think and then he saw things in a different light. His dream was of angels going up and down a ladder and of the gate of heaven. Jacob realized that God was looking on and through the strength of that vision he made good. He returned home and on the way he had another dream. This time an angel said, "Your nature is changed henceforth you are to be called Israel, warrior of God."

SATURATION AND STABILIZATION

For eighteen years the Boston Transcript has annually compiled the enrollments of nearly representative American colleges and universities and presented its figures as a typically national survey. They have been accepted, unstinted, as the curve that has been true for these institutions would have been just as true for the many smaller colleges left out. It tells that there are today six times as many students in these colleges as were there thirty years ago. For the decade between 1880 and 1900 the gain was over 4,500 a year. For the next decade that gain was nearly 10,000 a year. For the decade up to 1920 it was 20,000 a year, and it has touched 50,000 since then. Lately there has been a steady slowing up of this phenomenal increase, until now it appears likely that the saturation point will shortly be reached.

The interesting point about these figures is that this year the rate of increase has dropped to the lowest since the war. For the last two years the percent gain has been only 3, 3.1, 4.7, 4.8, and 3. The tendency has obviously been a slowing up of college registration. The gain last year over the previous year was 13,800; this year it is 9,000. The total enrollment in the selected institutions is now 301,503.

It is in the freshman classes that the figures best show conditions. Last fall 75,733 entered these same colleges and universities as compared to 76,029 in 1927, a percent loss of 0.389. Throughout the country, but of the colleges report small freshman increases, and half small losses. The peak seems to have been reached in the number of incoming freshmen. This may be due to a number of causes. Such a tremendous gain per year as happened in the post-years following the armistice in Europe could not possibly be maintained permanently under the best of conditions. In the West the farming situation has not been conducive to heavier college registration. There has been the development during this period of the junior college, which is not reckoned with in the figures above and which undoubtedly has drawn students from the smaller Western institutions. There has been the movement among the colleges themselves in the country toward limitation of numbers, so as deliberately to hold down the number of students to the equipment and the size of the faculty.

Whatever has been the cause of the halt in the upward college enrollment movement, the fact is established that the American college is approaching a stabilization of student attendance which will permit of a stabilization of everything else connected with its work—teaching staff, courses, and building equipment. This of course is wholly to the advantage of the college. When the great rush to the colleges began at the close of the war the colleges themselves were unprepared. Their facilities were overtaxed, owing to enlistment and war work. Their teaching material had for the moment fallen behind the demand. Their physical equipment had been standing still. They had to begin all over again. The result for a time was close to chaos, with students in a bad way and more students knocking at the door than there was room for. The colleges gradually caught up with the flood of students, but it has been only lately that some measure of comfort has again found its way into their operation, and even now this is true only in a comparative sense. The rush of new students during this period has been a healthy thing, but it will be a relief to the colleges themselves to find that it is now slowing down and that the educational business is again approaching normal. The new normal, however, will be at a higher level than before the war. And in general the American college has risen to that new and higher level in its operation.—The Yale Alumni Weekly

"If God is everywhere present in the whole of the world, filling it with his infinity, and with his immeasurable greatness, if there is in reality an innumerable host of suns and stars, what of the foolish distinction between the heaven and the earth? Dwellers in a star, are we not comprehended within the celestial plains, and established within the very precincts of heaven?"—Bruno

BOOKS OF THE WEAK

By P. Villius V., Ex-N.

Our motto is books of the weak, for the weak, and by the weak (and perhaps ghostwritten)

PENS AND PINS

PENS AND PINS. The college of today as seen by Morris Merkshiner. 327 pp. Famous Author Press. Boston, 1929. $1.75. By Publishers Delivery.

This gift for recreating the atmosphere of personal memoirs and institutions which gives Mr Merkshiner his [illegible] as a soul survivor is revealed at its best on "Pens and Pins." It may [illegible] to say so but this is writing with an aroma, an odor, nothing that spreads a distinct smell on the air. In "Pens and Pins" Mr. Merkshiner harks to the collitch, the old custodians of the days when football was played and co-eds were hot.

Pens and Pins" sounds a new note in American distilling, an unparalleled [illegible]. Brilliant as the sun, exhilarating as a jump in the lake, pure as the wind that blows, careless as the birds of the sky, this beautiful work of metallurgy when burning in the center of the ocean seems to the blind, deaf, dumb and insane inmate of the well known cullitch.

The following passage from along toward the end of the novel indicates the note that is struck throughout.

"The evening sun was slowly setting as he plod his homeward way. Thrills nd chills of love and disdain snorted along his spine. The homing urge, the delight of love, the noble feeling of somnolence toward all the world infused him. Hurray, hurray, at last I'm free, to think this day I'd ever see,'" he said sadly. And the sun set. That is indicative of the quality that runs throughout this magnificent canister.

It might be well at this point in my tale to explain the title, "Pens and Pins." The "Pens" referred to are the fountain type, exemplifying studies; the "Pins" are frat pins, and the insignia of other extra-curricular activities. Thus Mr. Merkshiner has shown unusually good taste in his choice of a title; for two things that better exemplify college life are hard to find. Then, too, alliteration is a great selling point.

All in all this book is one of the finest on the home-cooking of electric heats ever to emanate from Edison's mind.

Campus Comment

To the Editor:

There is an old but ever adaptable saying that quotes the pen as being mightier than the sword. Almost anybody of ordinary common sense will acknowledge the authenticity of this statement. However, there is a good and poor quality of steel and likewise a cultured and uncultured type of writing.

Whoever was responsible for some of the feeble attempts of song writing which were shown at the Majestic Theatre last Wednesday evening certainly gave evidence of bad taste. It may be a revelation to the author of those lyrics to learn that some people possess feelings that are vulnerable. A gentleman is not one whose vanity is fed by casting ridicule at another just for the sake of hearing his own sarcasm applauded.

It would certainly seem to indicate a mighty small and mean nature for one to place in such an embarrassing position a man who has done as much for Vermont as the fellow who was mentioned in the song. Because an individual possesses that infrequently found characteristic commonly termed "good nature" is no reasan for taking advantage of him. Vermont would be a better institution if it was able to number a great many more of his type among its undergraduate body. There is a limit to everything and constant comment of a ridiculing nature, no matter how harmlessly worded, soon grows irritable.

From now on consider the unpleasant name "Hot Dope" as dead and buried and take off your hats to a true son of Vermont who knows no meanness and has certainly earned the respect of every worthy Vermonter.

To the Editor of the Cynic:

In reference to the item in a recent Cynic, concerning the deficit incurred by the sophomore class in putting on their Hop, many things may be said. However truthful the article was, hardly the whole truth was stated.

What of the fact that the official failed to allow the class to postpone the dance when it was found that neither the High School Gym nor the Auditorium could be obtained for that night? There are some people in the college who are rather reticent with regard to dressing in formal attire for a dance in our very honorable but extremely ancient gymnasium.

What of the fact that the price of admission was changed to three dollars from the usual four? Four dollars a couple has put on good Hops before, but there has never been any great profit even at that large price.

This is not an excuse for the deficit, but merely an explanation of things as they stand. The sophomores made the most of a very unfavorable situation, and they may be complimented on coming out only ninety dollars to the bad, after giving those attending the dance a jolly good time.

(Signed) '31.

ON TIME

The big business man had died and gone to—well, not to heaven. But hardly had he settled down for a nice long smoke when a hearty hand slapped him on the back, and into his ear boomed the voice of a persistent salesman who had pestered him much on earth.

"Well, Mr. Smith," chortled the salesman, "I'm here for the appointment."

"What appointment?"

"Why, don't you remember?" the salesman went on. "Every time I came into your office you told me you'd see me here!"

First Stew: "Yes, the play was very good but the hero shot himself in the end."

Second Stew: "Well, you've got to give him credit—he certainly knew where is brains were."

LEST WE FORGET

Once upon a time a baseball coach came to the University of Vermont with an abundance of enthusiasm, ability, experience and willingness to work. He looked around for material. He found a few men with previous varsity experience and many without it. He found a number of likeable Frosh who were also gifted with enthusiasm, ability, and willingness to work.

But he was not discouraged. Perhaps he realized the indomitable Vermont spirit. Perhaps he recalled his past as a major league star, when apparently insurmountable difficulties had been surmounted. Perhaps he had that steeplechase type of heart that loves to leap the barriers.

He worked and worked hard. And the fellows worked with him. When the first cut in the squad came, there were very few grumbles and references to partiality. Everyone knew that he had played fair.

Then came the Southern Trip. You read about that in the Cynic and especially in the Cat's Meow. You praised the team just as they did. You praised "Larry" Gardner just as they did. But we doubt if you fully realized what he did with what he had to do it with. It is in the interest of promoting a fuller realization of what Coach Gardner means to Vermont that this fable is written.

CAT'S MEOW

SPORTING EDITOR—

Due to the inclement weather Spring football practice has been delayed in getting started. Ground conditions on the back campus are very poor and will undoubtedly be that way for some time. This circumstance seriously handicaps the squad, although Centennial field may be used.

The baseball team which is in Massachusetts this week-end meets Springfield this afternoon and Holy Cross tomorrow.

Boston Braves defeated Holy Cross 6 to 1 Monday, but all the credit should go to the Crusaders who scored on the big-leaguers first and held them to a 1 to 1 tie until the seventh inning. Nekola and Dobens held the Wigwamers to six hits.

Much interest was aroused in Worcester by this game because Freddy Maguire and Joe Dugan, second and third baseman for the Braves are former Holy Cross stars.

Dartmouth defeated Northeastern 10 to 8 Monday.

The following Vermont Alumni are entered in the B. A. A. Marathon being run today from Hopkinton to Boston: Clarence DeMar, O. T. Wood, Les Davis, Art Tudhope.

Freddy Robbins, who will not be able to compete on the track on account of scholastic difficulties, has resigned his captaincy. The resignation has been accepted by the Athletic Council and a new election is being held.

Parks, one of the best weight throwers on last year's track and field team, will be eligible this season. He should develop into a real threat and is expected to be one of Vermont's few dependables this spring.

The May 11 date which is open on the track schedule will probably be filled by Springfield. The match, when arranged, will be away from home and will be the only track trip.

Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, Penn, Cornell, and Columbia will officially start their baseball league next year. Inability to arrange certain games caused the delay, although an unofficial champ will be announced at the close of the season.

Jack Coffey, graduate manager of athletics at Fordham, is proposing a league composed of Boston College, Holy Cross, Brown, Colgate, Syracuse, Fordham, New York University, Rutgers, Lafayette and Lehigh.

SCHEDULE COMPLETED FOR TENNIS—FRESHMAN TEAM TO BE FORMED

Kenneth L. Price '30 manager of varsity tennis announces the spring schedule as given below.

This schedule is one of the fullest that will ever have been played by a Vermont tennis team. There is one three game trip besides the St. Michael's spurt. Most of the teams on the list have had crack court outfits in recent years and will furnish the Catamounts with stiff opposition.

Professor F. D. Carpenter who is out for his sabbatical year will return in the near future to coach the team which has already started work up at Practice is being held in the cage every afternoon at 2.00 p.m.

There will be a freshman tennis team this year to provide future varsity material. It has been sanctioned by the Athletic Council and will be coached by Professor C. W. Stillwell.

A schedule will be arranged very soon. Sophomores who wish to scrub the tennis managership should report at once to Mgr. Price.

Eta Sigma Phi Meets

A meeting of Eta Sigma Phi was held Tuesday night, April 15, in 54 South College. Cornelia Baylies, '32, and Margaret Watkins, '32, were initiated into the society. After the business meeting a dramatization of three books of the "Iliad" was given by the sophomores and freshmen, with Editn Fishman, '30, in charge.

The date of the next meeting is April 30.

Charles McGeehan of Villanova has invited Boston College, Georgetown, Providence, Manhattan, St. Bonaventure, Catholic University, St. Mary's, Loyola of Maryland to join his school in a league. It will be noted that Boston College is in common with both leagues. B. C. seems in favor of Coffey's league which is much stronger and includes the Eagles' old rival, Holy Cross.

CHANGES ANNOUNCED IN VT. EXTENSION SERVICE

Several changes are taking place in the personnel of the staff of the agricultural extension service of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. These changes include the resignation of three members of the staff and the appointment of three new members, two to fill new positions and one to fill one of the three vacancies. The other two vacancies will be filled later.

Those who are resigning are Thomas H. Drew, county agent in Washington County, who will enter commercial work; Floyd M. Gilland, extension forester, who is to be the newly appointed professor of forestry at St. Lawrence University; and Miss I. Otis Burroughs, formerly Etta Mae Parsons, 4-H Club Agent in Addison County. The new members of the force are Rowena R. Norton, who will be 4-H Club Agent in Orange County, a new appointment; Jean I. Robertson, who will take the place of Mrs. Burroughs as 4-H Club Agent in Addison County; and Elizabeth T. Hearn, who goes on a new appointment as home demonstration agent in Addison County.

Miss Norton is from Proctor, where she has been engaged in library work. She is a graduate of the home economics course of the University of Vermont in the class of 1926. Miss Robertson is from Nova Scotia where she received her preliminary education and is a graduate of Rhode Island State College. She has had experience as a teacher, and during her summer vacations has been hostess at the Dorset Inn, Dorset. Miss Hearn is also a graduate of Rhode Island State College, where she did teaching during her senior year. All of these new members of the extension staff have had experience in farm life.

New Grading System

Oberlin college has followed the lead of those higher educational institutions which have abolished the six letter grading system. Hereafter Oberlin students will either pass or fail, and they'll never know whether it was a pass by a D or an A.

STUDENT CONFERENCE WILL HEAR PROMINENT SPEAKERS NEXT JUNE

Northfield Meet, June 14 to 21, Will Discuss "The Cross in Human Relations"—Many Noted Speakers

[illegible] Northfield [illegible] Conference which will be held [illegible] Connecticut [illegible] June [illegible] to 21. The theme is "Human Relationships under the Cross" and promises light [illegible]

The [illegible] Bible [illegible] Christian [illegible] problems and [illegible] how the principles of the coming [illegible] of Christ [illegible] meeting as it does [illegible] the problems of [illegible] and [illegible] a definite force in [illegible] problems of education, the church, [illegible] race problems and international [illegible]

There will be four meetings a day [illegible] the morning an address followed by small discussion group meetings on industry, the church, international relations, business problems, education, men and women and personal behavior. In the afternoons ample time for sports followed by "Round Top" meetings on the life of Christ in the evening a second address. The afternoons will be entirely free for baseball, tennis, track, swimming, touch football, soccer, walks, and informal sports.

Prominent Men to Speak

The leaders in the various group meetings and forums include such prominent men as Bishop John I. Day[illegible], Henry S. Coffin, Sherwood Eddy, Ken Latourette, Kirby Page, Roenhould [illegible] Ian Barbrick, Sam Shoemaker, Edward Harris, Leslie Glenn, Arthur L. Kopgolving, Brooks Stabler and Bill Bryan.

These leaders, all outstanding in their special fields, and carefully chosen for their experience with and interest in student problems, contribute to an atmosphere keenly spiritual and educational—where without being "preached at" one can form connections that count, and without feeling rushed make informal contacts with stimulating personalities who may become life long friends.

The seven days at Northfield offer up invaluable opportunity for combining hard, well-planned study in vitally interesting personal fields with the best stimulating recreation and sport events. The conference, furthermore, brings together many varying groups of individuals, contacts that cannot fail to stimulate thought and discussions.

WINTER WOES

Everything's so flat and gray.

My brittle heart—broken in two,
I've wept until I'm wilted'
It's sad I am and very blue,
(I wonder if I'm jilted')
Oh, men are such a fickle lot'
Should I jump in the river'
Or get a gun and take a shot
At him—and watch him quiver'
I'll hang myself! I'll cut my throat'
Swallow carbolic acid'
You're laughing while I wring my hands
You're sitting there so placid'
You fling me bitter talk of how
YOU wouldn't care a lick'
Oh, take your hat and go on home
Ye friend, you make me SICK'

Spirit of Cooperation

At Princeton where hundreds of students ride bicycles there is a student coop store which works a system. Bills go home to Dad; ten per cent dividend is given to the student. Henry Ford is playing right into the hands of the college boys when he advises youth to spend; collegians spend millions of dollars annually on wearing apparel, smokes, sports, and athletic equipment, school supplies, typewriters, jewelry, sweets, automobiles, travel and other commodities.

"Handcuff Maine Debaters"

An interesting experience was that of the debating team of the University of Maine recently at New York University. The debate, scheduled to come off between the two colleges at a New York high school, was never consummated as the two halves of the Maine team were found afterwards waiting for each other in opposite sides of the building.

Now that N. Y. U. comes up to Orono the Maine Campus suggests the local "outfit be handcuffed a week before the debate to assure the visitors of a reception."

Cramming is justified according to the statistics gathered by Dr. Glen Pease of the University of California. Tests, he held, resulted in the crammer receiving an average 11 points better than those students who study daily.

COMMITTEE TO CHOOSE NEW RHODES SCHOLARS LAST MONTH OF YEAR

Vermont Receives No Scholarship This Year, but Students from Other States May Apply Where They Reside

The [illegible] selection of Rhodes Scholars will be held on December 7 and [illegible] of the College of Physicians [illegible] the State Committee of [illegible] before October 31 preceding [illegible] announcement from Edgar Aydelotte, American Secretary to the Rhodes Trustees and President of Swarthmore College. Though Vermont receives no scholarship this year, students may file with their state committee.

A Rhodes Scholarship, the most coveted of all undergraduate awards, entitles the holder to two years of study at Oxford University, with an annual stipend of £400 (about $2,000). If, at the end of the second year the Scholar presents an approved plan for an additional year of study, the Rhodes Trustees will then extend his Scholarship to cover a third year. Rhodes Scholars are elected without examination on the basis of their records in school and college, and no restriction is placed upon their choice of studies.

To be eligible a candidate must be an unmarried male citizen of the United States, between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five, and must have completed at least his sophomore year in college before the time he goes to Oxford. He must then be one of the men chosen to represent this institution in the competition. Scholars selected on December 7, 1929, will go to Oxford in October, 1930.

The qualities which will be considered in making the selection are literary and scholastic ability and attainments, qualities of manhood, truth, courage, and moral force of character, and physical vigor as shown in outdoor sports or other ways. Exceptional athletic prowess is not essential to election.

Endowed by Cecil Rhodes

These Scholarships were created by the will of Cecil Rhodes, the famous South African statesman and capitalist, who died in 1902. Their purpose is expressed in the terms of his will: "I also desire to encourage and foster

Sailor Gets This Tobacco in Far Port

Buenos Aires, Argentine,
Jan. 4, 1928

Larus & Bro. Co.,
Richmond, Va., U. S. A.
Gentlemen:

I'm a seafarer, and as such of course travel quite a lot. Right now I am in the Argentine, and am glad to say that I can here purchase your beloved Edgeworth Tobacco, of which I'm so very fond.

It is indeed a pity that one can't find this good smoke in every place of the seven seas. While recently in Germany, my home-country, I tried in vain to come upon one of these little blue tins. I'm not saying too much in mentioning that I would outwalk that famous mile, hunting up dear Edgeworth. I dare say there is no other tobacco like it, and am convinced that Edgeworth cannot be improved.

Let me know when you contemplate ceasing to make Edgeworth so that I may lay in a goodly store to last till I'm seventy.

May Edgeworth never change!
I'll always remain
Sincerely yours,
Willie Schmekles

Hunter Prefers Eurythenics

Answers given to a recent college wide questionnaire reveal a diversity of interest at Hunter College. Under classified titles a grist for the mods serious phases of college life and list contests in eurythenics, research work, and hard-boiled Sunday School as their most interesting experiences. Seniors and freshmen however register enthusiasm for cozy friends, falling in love and spending money."

A large proportion thought that welfare work and taking care of babies were exciting, but travel was the most popular reply. Only two people mentioned reading but several listed "writing for publication."

an appreciation of the advantages which I implicitly believe will result from the union of the English-speaking peoples throughout the world, and to encourage in the students from the United States . . . . an attachment to the country from which they have sprung, without I hope withdrawing them or their sympathies from the land of their adoption or birth."

Further information and application blanks may be obtained from President Bailey or from President Aydelotte at Swarthmore, Pa. Full information about study and life in Oxford is supplied especially for American students in Oxford of Today, published under the direction of the Association of American Rhodes Scholars, by the Oxford University Press, 114 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Scholars will be elected this year from the following states: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

Candidates may apply either in the state in which they reside or in one in which they have received at least two years of their college education.

Middlebury Man Last Scholar

The last Vermont man to be selected was William Lockwood, '27, who secured his Rhodes Scholarship two years ago. A Middlebury man, Charles Malam, who was studying at the time under an Oxford fellowship awarded by his alma mater, secured the award for Vermont state last year.

SENIOR CLASS PICKS ANNUAL SPEAKERS

Elects Orators for Founder's Day and Class Day—All are Prominent in Campus Activities

WILL DELIVER ORATIONS ON TRADITIONAL DAYS

Last Friday afternoon, the senior class held their elections for the Founder's Day and Senior Week speakers. Those elected are as follows:

Founder's Day speaker, J. S. Estabrook.

Address to Lafayette, R. T. Krogh.

Address to Ira Allen, D. G. McLaughlin.

Campus Oration, W. F. Rogers.

Address to the Undergraduates, F. F. O'Keefe.

Class Marshall, E. W. Knapp.

Ivy Oration, Catherine Bassett.

Class History, Dorothy Cottrell.

Class Poem, Margaret Corbin.

J. S. Estabrook, who will be Founder's Day speaker, is a member of Phi Delta Theta and has been very prominent throughout his college years. He is a Boulder man, and has been a member of Key and Serpent and Gold Key. He is president of the Student Senate and is on the Student Faculty Council. In addition, he has been prominent in athletics, being captain of this year's basketball team and a member of the football squad during his sophomore and junior years. When a junior he was president of his class.

R. T. Krogh, who will deliver the address to Lafayette, is a member of Phi Delta Theta and has been active along dramatic and public speaking lines. He was chosen as the leading actor in the coming Junior Week play, "Summertime." He is a member of Wig and Buskin and, last year, won the Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest.

D. G. McLaughlin is a member of Lambda Iota. He has been prominent in class affairs and has served on several important committees.

W. F. Rogers, a member of Kappa Sigma, has been very active on the campus. He is a member of the Boulder Society. He has been especially prominent in athletics, having made the football squad, and is at present manager of baseball. He was a director of the 1929 Kake Walk and was on the 1929 Ariel Board.

N. L. Page, who will deliver the Pipe Oration, is a member of Phi Mu Delta. He has been a member of the two musical organizations ever since entering college and played two years in the R. O. T. C. Band. He was a member of the Press Club and has served on several class committees.

F. F. O'Keefe, a member of Sigma Nu, has had an extremely versatile career. He is a member of Boulder, and Scabbard and Blade, senior honorary societies. He is an honor scholar and is an officer in the Student Senate. He was a director of the 1929 Kake Walk and is Major of the R. O. T. C. Battallion. During his junior year he was a member of Key and Serpent, and on the Ariel Board. While a sophomore, he was class president. In addition, he has been a star member of the football and baseball teams. He will deliver the Address to the Undergraduates.

E. W. Knapp, who will be Class Marshall, is a member of Phi Delta Theta. He has been active in the dramatics and has served on several important class committees.

Catherine Bassett, the Ivy orator, is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta and was president of Mortar Board and the Student Union. As a member of Pi Beta Kings and the Literary Magazine she has been prominent in the literary life of the college. She has also been active in dramatics, being a member of the Dramatic Club. In athletics, she has played hockey and basketball and is a member of the W. A. A. Council. She is a member of the Faculty-Student Council and the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet. She is also a member of Eta Sigma Phi, the honorary classical society.

MILITARY SOCIETY GIVES FOUNDER'S DAY DANCE

As the final event of the Founder's Day program this Saturday, Scabbard and Blade is sponsoring a concert and dance at the Memorial Auditorium in the evening from 8 to 12 o'clock. From 8 to 9 the R. O. T. C. Band under the direction of Joe Lechnyr, will play selections, and from 9 until 12 Joe's orchestra will furnish music for dancing. Good music is assured for both concert and dance. The price of tickets covering both concert and dance is $1.25 a couple. Tickets for the concert only may be purchased for 50 cents a couple, and if the couple decides to stay for the dance also, by the payment of 75 cents at the beginning of the dancing may do so.

FREEMANN IS PRESIDENT OF WOMEN'S HONORARY DRAMATIC ORGANIZATION

Masque and Sandal, Dramatic Society, Elect Officers for Next Year—Rosenberg, Whitney and Perelman are Other Officers

Mabel Freemann, '30, was elected president of Masque and Sandal, women's honorary dramatic society, at a meeting held Thursday at 1.30 in South College. The other officers elected were: vice-president, Annette Rosenberg, '30; secretary, Carolyn Whitney, '31; treasurer, Estabel Perelman, '30.

Mabel Freemann is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, and has been prominent in campus activities. For the last year she has been secretary of Masque and Sanadal, to which she was elected for being in the college play, "Lady Windermere's Fan." She has been active in debating and is a member of Tau Kappa Alpha. Recently she was made Circulation Manager of the Vermont Literary Magazine. In her sophomore year she was on the honor list. This year Miss Freemann is vice-president of the junior class, and a member of Student Union Council. She has also been on several committees, among them the Sophomore Hop, Football Hop, and Junior Week Committee.

Annette Rosenberg, the new vice president, is a member of K. E. L. She was elected to Masque and Sandal in her freshman year for being a member of the cast of "Captain Applejack." In her sophomore year she was secretary of Masque and Sandal and was on the honor list. At present she is secretary of the John Dewey Club.

Carolyn Whitney, the new secretary, is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta. She won her laurels in dramatics as a member of the cast of "Lady Windermere's Fan." Last year she was vice-president of the freshman class.

Estabel Perelman was re-elected as treasurer of the society. She is a member of K. E. L. and has been very prominent in athletics. She was recently elected president of W. A. A., and is campus cheer leader. She was in the college play, "The First Year." Miss Perelman coached the prize-winning class play given by the juniors. She is also a member of the Junior Week Committee.

Half Million to University of Heidelberg

American affection for the University of Heidelberg in Germany took a concrete form at Christmas time when a gift of half a million dollars was presented to build a new hall of instruction. The American ambassador Jacob Gould Schurman, took the lead in raising the fund as an expression of gratitude to the institution which welcomed him and many other Americans in their student days. The rector of the university in accepting the gift assured the ambassador that Americans would forever find a most friendly reception at Heidelberg.

VERMONT DEBATERS MEET ST. MICHAEL'S

Debate In Old Chapel Tonight Against Traditional Rivals in Third of State Series Meets

VICTORY FOR VERMONT WOULD PRODUCE A TIE

Tomorrow Vermont's persuaders encounter the St. Mike's team in what may be the last men's debate of the season, and the last of the Vermont intercollegiate series. Eight in the evening will see the commencement of the debate, in which Vermont upholds the affirmative of the question, "Resolved That the American jury system should be abolished." Speakers for the negative are Arthur Coulture, Joseph Bartlett and Samuel Fortin. Representing Vermont are prize winners Franklin Sears and Louis Lisman, and the well-known humorist, George Nelson.

This St. Michael's group are the same debaters who recently defeated Middlebury College by a unanimous vote. And the Vermont team suffered the same fate at the hands of Middlebury. This fact, it would seem to indicate, adds slightly in favor of the Winooski aggregation.

Last year this same identical St. Michael's team defeated Vermont unanimously. Tomorrow night in the Old Chapel, however, Vermont's lads are confident, will be the date of a comeback that will crush the arguments of the sons of Winooski Park.

If Vermont loses, the winner of the St. Mike's-Norwich debate will be the mythical champion of the State of Vermont; if Vermont wins they will debate either St. Michael's again, or Norwich. Norwich has already succumbed to Vermont's silvery tongues, and has, in turn, defeated Middlebury.

Thus this debate marks a crisis in the state series; a win for Vermont means hope, a loss means elimination.

If you have nothing else to do, and lack the quarter for the Orphan Theeture, drop in and lend your support to your debaters. They may win without your support, but win or lose, your support will make them do their best, and a little bit more.

CO-ED DEBATING TEAM SECURES LAST MEMBER

In the tryouts held last Friday afternoon for the third member of the University of Vermont women's debating team, Roberta Powers, '32 was chosen from several others who tried. The debating team, which now is composed of Janice Goodrich, '30, Frances Howley, '29, and Roberta Powers, '32, will debate Middlebury on April 30.

The Middlebury team, which will take the affirmative on the jury question, is composed of Helen Perry, '30, Ellen Kellogg, '31, and Mary Henseler, '31.

Roberta Powers, winner in the tryouts, graduated from People's Academy of Morrisville and gave proof of her forensic ability while in high school by winning the State Oratorical Contest, with the award of a scholarship to U. V. M. and a trip financed by the Free Press to the national semi-finals. The same year she was selected as the best high school debater in the state.

In the list of awards made by W. A. A. at the Rally recently held the awarding of the Old English "V" to Marion Everest, '29, was unintentionally omitted. This award is given to the senior girl who has made at least 100 points during her senior year and has been on two varsity teams. Miss Everest has been extremely active in athletics throughout her college career and her many friends and admirers of her fine sportsmanship will be glad to see her wear the "V."

The University of Washington has instituted a dating bureau in which will be maintained a card index of all male and female undergraduates available for parties and dances.

HIGH SCHOOL ORATORS EARN PRIZES OFFERED BY U. V. M. AUTHORITIES

Representatives of Brattleboro, Spaulding and Barton Capture Vermont Scholarships In Contest

At the interscholastic finals in the sixth national oratorical contest for the State of Vermont, sponsored by the University of Vermont and the Burlington Free Press, and held last Friday evening, E. Gordon Thomas of Brattleboro High School was judged the best speaker, and in addition to a full scholarship to the University of Vermont, will be state representative to the zone finals at Worcester, Mass. on May 4.

Bernard Mulcahy of Spaulding High School, Barre, won second place. Miss Mary Guthrie of Barton High School won third place.

Original Essays Win Scholarships

Mr. Thomas spoke on the subject "The Constitution in the Daily Life of the Individual." He receives a $150 scholarship at the University of Vermont. He had previously been awarded a $100 scholarship at the University for winning second place in the district contest at Rutland.

Mr. Mulcahy spoke last evening on the subject: "Origin of our Constitution." His second prize is a $100 scholarship at the University. He had previously been awarded the $100 scholarship for winning second place in the district contest in this city.

Miss Guthrie's subject was "The Advantages of a Written Constitution for the American People." Her third prize in the state contest is a $75 scholarship at the University. She had previously been awarded a $150 scholarship for winning first place in the district contest at Morrisville.

Professor Wellington E. Aiken of the Department of English, University of Vermont, presided last evening. The judges were Rt. Rev. Samuel B. Booth, bishop coadjutor, Episcopal Diocese of Vermont; Eugene H. Clowse, principal of Richmond High School; Professor Leon W. Dean, Department of Education, University of Vermont; V. Spencer Goodreds, instructor in public speaking and dramatics, Middlebury College; and Professor Peter D. Webster, Department of English, Norwich University.

All Excellent Essays—Judges Puzzled

The judges found it difficult to decide upon the winner of the contest. After they had balloted individually without conference, it was found that no speaker had been awarded first place by a majority of the judges, and it was necessary to call them together for a conference in order to select the winner.

In addition to those who won first, second and third places in the contest, there were three other speakers: John St. John of Rutland High School, speaking on "The Constitution: A Guarantee of the Liberty of an Individual"; Miss Leona Warren of People's Academy, Morrisville, whose subject was "Personalities in the Constitutional Convention"; and Russell Colburn of Burlington High School, who spoke on "The Constitution: A Guarantee of the Liberty of the Individual."

Orchestra Entertains

The Cathedral High School orchestra, under the direction of Joseph F. Lechnyr, was generous with its music for the program, playing six selections during the evening and making an excellent impression.

JAY HOMERS WITH TWO ON BASES FOR FEATURE

Playing under several drawbacks such as extremely cold baseball weather and lack of practice the Vermont nine lost the first contest of its regular season to the Springfield College aggregation Friday afternoon by a 9 to 3 score.

After returning from the annual training trip to the South the boys had no real strenuous workouts and the cold wind kept them pretty stiff. This fact was easily noticeable by the manner in which plays were handled.

The Boston College contest was cancelled on account of cold and the muddy field caused by heavy rains the day before. Saturday it started to rain in Worcester and officials were obliged to bring forth a "no game" verdict.

At Springfield the Cats got the jump by scoring two runs in the first inning and holding the home team until the next frame. But revenge was sweet when the Bay Staters bunched three singles and a double to push four runs across the plate. They rallied again in the fourth and scored enough runs to win the contest. In the fifth, after batting two men, Wood loosened up and allowed another run on a two base hit.

The sixth inning was Vermont's. With two men on the score Jay picked a ball out of the grass and sent it sizzling and soaring over Duncan's head in center field. The relay was much too late to nip the speedy shortstop who crossed the home plate standing up.

For good measure the Y. M. C. A. boys took advantage of errors and passes to tally twice again in the last frame.

Bigsbee starred for the Massachusetts team with a single and double and several spectacular infield stops. Winant's work in the outfield and Jay at bat featured for the Cats.

PLAY BY PLAY

First Inning

Vermont—Jay singled and stole second. Traynor walked. Howard grounded out to Gustafson. Macomber drove Jay and Traynor home with a single and stole second. Morse fanned and McKay was out. Gustafson to Woods.

Springfield—Wood threw Becker out at first. Gustafson singled but was forced at second by Davidson, and Wood threw out Duncan.

Second Inning

Vermont—Sargent grounded out to Gustafson. Winant and Wood singled, Jay struck out, Traynor filled the bags on Gustafson's fumble, and Howard was tossed out by Johnston.

Springfield—Williamson hit and stole second. Bigsbee was passed. Woods drove them home with a double to right. Oliver struck out. Johnston grounded out to Sargent. Becker sent Woods home with a two bagger. Gustafson tallied Becker with a single. Davidson singled and Duncan fanned.

Third Inning

Vermont—Macomber was out on a ground ball. Bigsbee to Woods, and Morse followed suit. Johnston to Woods. McKay took three strikes.

Springfield—Williamson flied out to Morse. Bigsbee reached first on a single but was forced at second by Woods and Oliver fanned.

Fourth Inning

Vermont—Sargent struck out. Winant drew a pass. Wood fanned. Jay singled. Traynor grounded out to Bigsbee.

Springfield—Johnston hit. Becker bunted and got to first on Macomber's wild throw. McKay took Gustafson's grounder and nailed Johnston at the plate. Davidson scored Becker and

VERMONT—THE SMALL COLLEGE

The enrollment figures at the University of Vermont showed a very slight decrease last year. Whether enrollment figures will continue to show a dropping off only time and experience will tell. But just because a few less students came to Vermont last year than the year before does not necessarily mean that Vermont as a university is losing its good name and standing in educational circles. Rather does it mean that Vermont is like all other colleges of the country in that there was a reduction in the number of students enrolled. In an article in the editorial column of a recent issue of the CYNIC, a writer in the Yale Alumni Weekly intimated that the college enrollment movement had probably reached, or very nearly so, the saturation point. As a result, for the past few years a decided slowing of the great number of young men and women who flocked to the colleges immediately following the World War. So, at least, Vermont is consistent with the general movement.

Many friends of the University look forward to this decrease in, or rather stabilization of student attendance with a certain amount of joy and satisfaction. It will give the University administration officials opportunity to regulate its teaching staff and courses and bring its teaching equipment up to date. In the final analysis, this program would save the University much needless expense, a waste of money always incurred in attempting to accommodate hurriedly a sudden demand.

Also, with a tuition fee that is comparatively high for a state institution Vermont ought in a few years to exercise its ranking as a good small college. The high tuition and expense means that only those young men and women who have a valid reason for attending a college will matriculate at Vermont. They belong to a certain intellectual class, and will serve to increase Vermont's standing as an educational center. The University will probably always be classed as a small college, though. That fact is nothing against our Alma Mater as long as the standards remain as high in the future as they have in past in comparison with other educational institutions. On that point, we have no doubts.

He that will not eat till he has demonstration that it will nourish him, he that will not stir till he infallibly knows the business he goes about will succeed, will have little else to do but to sit still and perish.—LOCKE

To the Editor of the Cynic:

If G. M. W. Jr., had but taken the trouble of asking any concerned with the song he mentioned in the last issue of the Cynic he would have learned the truth about the matter. If he had but questioned the author the theatre or the student referred to in said song, we feel certain that his letter would have appeared to him to be not only unnecessary, but quite out of place as well. Now that he does know, or should know, the true circumstances—well, never mind the apologies, old man.

Sincerely,

EX CONCERNED.

P. S.: If the pen is mightier than the sword would it not be wise in the future to write with a well-informed pen?

The Mikayo, a leading Tokyo newspaper, has been running one serial story for thirteen years and is still going strong. The name of the story is The Mountain Pass, written by Nakazato Kaisan. It can be procured so far in twenty-five published volumes.

In spite of recent augmentation the Cynic News Board can not begin to compare with that of the Daily Texan at Texas University which vaunts a repertorial staff of one hundred exclusive of executives and voluntary workers.

Purdue students live up to their name of "Boilermakers" and resent the intrusion of effeminacy. An organization has been formed to assert masculinity in appearance and attire. The club holds as its main tenets the wearing of old clothes, sweaters, and old shirts on campus and will not permit members to use a razor more than twice a week.

Mrs. Peppy's Diary

When I had rubbed the last bit of sleep away from my eyes this morning I discovered that it wasn't so dreadfully late for a change—in other words—after vacation effects are beginning to wear off. Ah, sweet vacation. The longer I go to school the more I realize that one doesn't appreciate a vacation until [illegible] two weeks after the grind has begun again. Then what fond retrospect! Brains wax philosophical. Perchance 'tis wasted on inanimate things. Philosophy is a funny thing anyway.

Philosophy is a splendid thing
To study when you're blue
For it makes the clearest fact seem mud.
The falsest one seem true.

So that when you're plunged in painful thought
And see no bread ahead,
Just think how happy you should be—
To be alive—not dead!

Philosophy is a wonderful thing. The other day while looking at an exhibition of modernistic pictures done in the expressionistic mode, I began to wake up to the fact that mentally I was deteriorating—I couldn't make head or tail of a single picture. I stood sorrowfully meditating before a group entitled "Selves" and finally made my plea.

Expressionistic pictures
That show true selves I see
With lines that crawl grotesquely
Like monkeys up a tree,
Come, let me analyze you,
Nay more, psychiatrize you,
Enfin—to mobilize you—do!

You have ups and downs, it's clear,
Sidelines curled and crossed, too;
May I be a bit sincere
And ask, can hair be blue?
Come, since I've analyzed you,
Nay more, psychiatrized you,
Enfin—now tell what are you—do!

Alas! Not a shadow of a response was elicited. Enlightenment speeds on wings of light—and I can't catch up with her.

College night has come and gone at Ye Majestic. We Universitaires turned out almost en masse. Suggestion—why not have our football games in the theatre—we might then get a little support in cheering.

And then, of course, to our cold, frigid air came Rio Rita. Beautiful-er Oh, but it's best to let well enough alone.

Speaking of coldness it's a true fact that I should now chronicle. Walking along yesterday, I was stopped short by the sound of a voice pleading. I looked around and saw two kids, a fellow and girl, of about fifteen together, and the girl was asking in a deliciously subjective tone something like (pardon this poor imitation):

Since I would now a-lovin' go
What need I have? I want to know.
A pair of lips? Two eyes so bright?
A spirit lively as a sprite?
Tell me! I want to know

And since I would a-kissin' go
What art would red lips need to know?
To tempt a while? To heave a sigh?
To promise sweets for by and by?
Tell me! I want to know

For if you answer not to me.
When Spring is here, I'll lonely be.
So teach me soon, before 'tis late,
And when I'm taught—it's up to Fate
So tell me! I want to know

And the fellow? Poor jackass! He hooted mockingly and answered "Can the chatter." Cruel! Cruel! Yet 'twas ever thus and ever thus shall be.

Hither and thither flitting around campus is the cry of the industrious "What am I going to do this summer?" Ah—waitress—cook—thief—crook—anything and everything. Wouldn't it be great if you could say like that elderly naval gentleman of the ill-fated Nancy Bell:

Oh I am the cook and the captain bold
And the mate of the Nancy brig
And the bosun tight and the midship mite
And the crew of the captain's gig

You'd be sure of one job at least

Heading of an article in the current Bookman. The Absurdity of Teaching English." Do we agree? Of course we do. Who learns English anyway? It just grows à la Topsy or it doesn't, so why don't profs.

Let us speak as we will
And read what we will
And let all our English go hang,
Since to learn it is still
For it's vaue is nil
Let's throw it away with a bang.

Page the English department diary! The midnight bells do sound, and so to bed.

A Brief Case

"Stuyvesant, 2921-2?"

"Yes, please."

A short pause and then, "Mrs. Everett?"

"Yes, this is Mrs. Everett speaking. Is that you, Mr. Hoyt?"

"Guessed right the first time! I must have a distinguished voice"—slight chuckle—"I just called up to find out if Jimmie is back from Norwich yet."

"No. He wired us he was stopping over night with his friend, Willie Jackson. You know Willie, don't you?"

"He's the fellow that Jimmie had down during the holidays, isn't he?"

"That's the one. Well, he said that he was stopping over with Willie and that he'd bring him down with him tomorrow. Anything of importance you want to see him about, or do you just want to talk over his work with him?"

"No, I have a very important matter to discuss with him. By the way, Mrs. Everett, do you know whether or not he's made any plans for his summer vacation?"

"I don't think he's made any definite plans yet. He mentioned something about a long fishing trip up in the mountains, somewhere, when he was down during Easter, but I suppose he's forgotten about that by now."

"Probably. Well, will you please ask him to call in at my office the first chance he gets? Have him bring that other chap along with him. I'll want to see them both."

"Sounds mysterious, but I'll send them down as soon as they get the opportunity. Oh, Mr. Hoyt, I saw in this morning's Times that you're handling that Julia Andrews case for the Monarch Insurance Company. I'm awfully glad they gave it to you! There's oodles of money in it for you if you win."

"Tho 'if' sounds discouraging, but it's an interesting case at all events. You won't forget to send Jimmie down, will you?"

"No, I won't."

"Thank you very much, Mrs. Everett. Good day."

"Good day, Mr. Hoyt."

Bladen Hoyt, one of New York's young but rapidly-rising civil lawyers, had been handling the Everett estate since the death of Mr. Everett in 1924, and was consequently well-known to the family. Hence—his knowledge of Jimmie, in whom he took a real, personal interest. Being a Norwich graduate himself only made the intimacy all the stronger. But it was not regard for Jimmie that had prompted Hoyt's request. Rather it concerned a matter of far greater importance—in fact, the very case that Mrs. Everett mentioned.

Accordingly, Jimmie and [illegible] breezed in the next day to [illegible] attorney anxiously awaiting. Both were typical Norwich men, looking, well-built fellows, with savoir faire about them that [illegible] one to pick out the real college from any crowd.

"No joke at all; I really mean

"But what's the point?"

"Photography."

"Photography?"

"That's what I said. All lows will have to do is to bunch of pictures. How does it you?"

"It strikes me as being grea clared Jimmie, "but that's th time I knew you were so k photography"—then, suddenly bet it's got something to do w of your cases!"

"It has. It concerns the m portant case I've been called handle yet."

Sargent failed to attempt to complete what would have been a sure double play in the second inning after retiring the batter for the second out of the inning. The double play would have ended the frame but a double and two singles after that brought in two more runs.

Wood and McKay got mixed on a slow, rolling ball up the third base line in the eighth inning. Wood finally picked up the sphere and threw wild toward first. An out would have retired the side but instead a run scored on the play and a double brought in another tally.

Such plays as these can usually be looked back upon as the turning point in a ball game. They are more frequent with inexperienced teams and inexperience seemed to be the direct cause of Vermont's downfall.

Nevertheless, the individuals on the team looked like world beaters at times and those who have not seen the newcomers in action cannot realize what the future has in store.

This is Bigsbee's first year as a regular at the hot corner for Springfield but his fielding was nothing short of superb. Four of his six stops were one-handed and one or two of them looked impossible. He covered plenty of territory.

The Vermonts were undressed in the B. C. locker room when that game was cancelled and the boys were no sooner dressed again than "Larry" Gardner announced that it would be possible to have a light workout, and the boys were no sooner undressed again than "Larry" Gardner announced that the Braves were playing Brooklyn—so that was that!

Carson Jay was way ahead of everyone else and he said he was undressed four times. Well—maybe.

"Jimmy" Kendrick, being one of the few Bostonians in the party, was asked why Mr. So-and-so was chosen to emulate Paul Revere's ride annually on April 19. Says "Jimmy," "He must own the horse."

It rained in Boston Thursday night (and cold) Howard did rain!

"Wis" Howard made a pick up at Springfield that was a knock out.

Vermont Drops Only Game on Massachusetts Jaunt

Gustafson with a long single, Duncan flied to Howard and Williamson grounded to McKay.

Fifth Inning

Vermont—Howard grounded to Johnston for the first out. Macomber flied out to Bigsbee, Morse beat out an infield grounder, and McKay was out on a sensational stop by Bigsbee.

Springfield—Bigsbee got to first on Traynor's error, he stole second and Woods and Oliver struck out. Bigsbee stole third and came home on Johnston's double. Becker ended the inning by lifting a fly to Howard.

Sixth Inning

Vermont—Sargent singled and Winant reached first on a fielder's choice, Sargent being retired. Wood singled and reached second when Oliver dropped a pitched ball. Winant stopped at third, Jay hit a homer, Winant and Wood trotting in ahead of him. Traynor grounded out to Bigsbee and Howard was retired, Johnston to Woods.

Springfield—Gustafson was thrown out by Jay. Davidson was out on a foul fly to Winant on which the latter made a beautiful catch. Duncan hit but died on first when Winant made another pretty catch of Williamson's fly.

Seventh Inning

Vermont—Macomber flied out to Davidson, Morse hit and stole second. Lipp went to the rubber for Johnston and fanned McKay and Sargent.

Springfield—Bigsbee doubled but was out at third when Winant returned Woods fly from deep left. Winant took Oliver's fly.

Eighth Inning

Vermont—Winant struck out, Wood popped to Bigsbee, Jay and Traynor walked, and Howard flied out to left.

Springfield—Lipp singled and took second on a wild throw by Traynor off Becker's grounder. Macomber dropped a pitched ball and Lipp and Becker moved up. Gustafson sent them home with a double to left but got into a pickle between second and third and was tagged by Wood. Davidson walked but was out on Duncan's fielder's choice. Williamson walked and Bigsbee struck out.

Ninth Inning

Vermont—Macomber singled and reached second on an infield out by Morse. McKay grounded to Bigsbee who threw to first for the out and Woods relayed home to nab Macomber.

The box score.

U. V. M. FROSH FENCERS LOSE TO NORWICH, 4-2

Yearlings Make Creditable Showing in First Intercollegiate Engagement—Unusual Interest Shown in Fencing

Amid the clanging and clashing of swords the Vermont freshmen were bowed in defeat by the Norwich yearlings by a 4 to 2 score in their fencing match at Northfield Saturday. The frosh battled mightily, but their skill in this ancient art was inferior to the Cadets' first year men, who won four out of the six matches.

In this sport it is skill and agility that counts—not size and brute strength—and, considering the amount of practice that the Vermonters had, they made a creditable showing. This is the first year that Vermont has ever presented a freshman fencing team and Saturday's match was the first intercollegiate tilt that the Green and Gold team has entered. Colonel Edwards of Norwich was chiefly influential in having this contest take place between the two colleges.

This year unusual interest has been shown in fencing. Many men took up this sport as a part of the physical education course and some even had to be turned away because of the limited facilities. It was from among the freshmen who were then engaged in this sport that a team was chosen.

Bluestockings held a short business meeting Thursday, at 1.30 in 3 North College. Plans were made for a social meeting to be held Tuesday, April 23, with notice of the place of meeting to be posted later in the Y-room. All members are requested to be present.

The co-eds' clothes seem to be going to their heads.

SQUADS BUSY DRILLING FOR NEW MILITARY CUP

Independents to Enter But One Picked Squad—Much Interest Aroused on Campus

Interfraternity competition promises to be unusually keen when the first annual drill-down for the recently awarded Reserve Officers' Training Cup is run off during Federal Inspection. At the present time many squads have chosen their guns and men and are diligently practicing squad drill and movements. Not only the various fraternities, but the Independents as well, have thrown their hats into the ring. It was at first believed that the Independents would be allowed to enter two or more squads, due to the fact that they embrace far more men than any individual fraternity. However after due consideration, Colonel Black decided that it would be best to choose one thoroughly efficient group, thus making up in quality what was lacking in quantity.

Much Interest Aroused on Campus

Inasmuch as this is the first event of its kind to be staged in recent years, interest concerning it has grown quite deep on the campus, and an unusual crowd is expected to be present at the competition.

Points Considered in Judging

The following points will be considered by the judges in determining the most efficient squad.

1. The excellence of performance of movements in the competitive drill.
2. The military bearing and the condition of the uniforms and equipment of the members of the squad in ranks and of the squad leader.
3. The manner of giving commands and the general control of his squad by the squad leader.

In the competitive drill a squad may be called upon to execute any or all of the movements described in the following listed paragraphs of Training Regulations, and only movements described therein will be considered.

TR 50-15 Sec. II, Par. 3-6 Incl. Sec. III, Par. 8-19 Incl.

TR 420-50 Sec. I, Par. 4-7 Incl. Par 9-12 Incl.

TR 50-20 Sec. I, Par. 2 and 4. Sec. II, Par. 6-27 Incl. and Par. 30.

These movements are:

1. Position of the soldier or of attention.
2. Eyes Right (Left).
3. Right (Left) Face.
4. Right (Left) Half Face.
5. About Face.
6. March in Quick and Double Time.
7. Halt.
8. March at Half Step.
9. Mark Time.
10. Side Step.
11. Back Step.
12. March by the Flank.
13. March to the Rear.
14. Change Step.
15. Manual of Arms (all movements except Fix and Unfix Bayonets).
16. Form the Squad.
17. Align the Squad.
18. Open and Close Ranks.
19. Stack and Take Arms.
20. Oblique March.
21. Turn on Moving Pivot.
22. Turn on Fixed Pivot.

COLLEGE HUMOR TELLS OF LOCAL FRATERNITY

[illegible] College Humor [illegible] in its May issue for this year in an article entitled "The Owls of the University of Vermont" caused the local fraternity to rise into national prominence. The article gives a few pointers upon the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the honors held by the Owls men upon the campus. It says one of their men is president of the John Dewey Club of philosophy and psychology." This is a gross error for the truth of the matter is that not a single Owls man even belongs to the famous organization. The article goes on to state that another helps edit the Vermont Liberary Magazine. This is true enough but the funny part to the business lies in the fact that the May issue of College Humor was being printed at the time an Owls man was elected to the Liberary Magazine's editorial board. But of course, College Humor was primarily meant to be humorous.

The article is very serious in tone however, despite its prevarications and, incidentally, no more prevarications appear than are rightly exposed in this column of the Cynic. The article goes on to give a brief history of the Owls, tells what the organization stands for, and praises it for remaining a "local" rather than becoming a "national" frat.

Says the article "The local fraternity although it holds a pretty minor rank in the average college man's mind, has not ceased to be an entity in at least one grand old institution. Way up north, above Lake Champlain and shadowed by Mount Mansfield, the University of Vermont, like another well-known Vermonter, has sat silent and respectable for a hundred and thirty-eight years. And on the edge of her campus, gleaming through century old oaks and elms, the eight white pillars of the Lambda Iota house mark the home of the king of local fraternities, one of the oldest college groups in the country, basking in the sun of ninety-three years of tradition and power." Many of the other frats on the hill might question whether the "local" frat is indeed so much more preferred upon this campus to the "national," yet the other frats can not help but envy the prestige which College Humor has suddenly showered upon Lambda Iota.

College Humor is being quickly sold out in the local news stands. The article contains some excellent descriptions of the local frat and there is a beautiful picture of the fraternity house accompanying the article.

Rainbow Tracked to Blue Tin

Newton, Ill., Feb. 22, 1928

Larus & Brother Co.,
Richmond, Va.

Gentlemen:

The tobacco samples you sent me have been received, and they are great.

If you can picture in your mind the lonesomeness of a traveling man in a small town on a rainy night, not a friend in a hundred miles, nothing to do and no place to go.

That was the position I was in when your samples of Edgeworth came. It was like a voice from above when I opened the package and got the old pipe steaming.

I have smoked various brands of tobacco for the past fifteen years, but never in my life have I found a tobacco at any price that will equal Edgeworth. It does not bite the tongue, and a beautiful aroma follows. With the good old friend pipe and a can of Edgeworth you can dream of the rainbow's end.

Please count me in the future as an Edgeworth booster.

Very truly,
(Signed) Al Stanley

"PATIENCE" DELIGHTS AUDIENCE AT OPERA

Glee Clubs Present Gilbert and Sullivan Production Under Direction of Bennett and Metcalf

LADD AND ALLBEE SING THE PRINCIPAL ROLES

Music lovers were given the rare opportunity of hearing the Gilbert and Sullivan opera "Patience" as presented by the combined Men's and Women's Glee Clubs at the Strong Theater on Thursday night, April 18. As an amateur production of an opera by two of the best known comic writers, this presentation deserves great merit on the part of the University students who assisted in the performance as well as the coaches who trained them.

The cast of principals in order of appearance is as follows:

Rapturous maidens—Lady Angela, Dorothy Nash; Lady Ella, Doris Duprat; Lady Saphir, Lorraine Guillett; Lady Jane, Marion Baldwin; Patience, a dairymaid, Hazel Ladd; Major Murgatroyd, B Baker; Colonel Calverley, H M Sheffield; Lieutenant the Duke of Dunstable, M B Jenks; Reginald Bunthorne, a fleshly poet, H E. Goddard; Archibald Grosvenor, R. H. Allbee; Mr. Bunthorne's solicitor, R D Romanos; First Officer of the Dragoon Guards, R D Towne.

Miss Hazel Ladd singing the title rôle of "Patience" used her voice of strength and purity effectively in all her numbers. The many lovely passages in the opera gave full scope for a purely voice of wide range.

Mr. Allbee, veteran of Wig and Buskin plays, played opposite Miss Ladd as Archibald Grosvenor. He sang his aesthetic and somewhat egotistical part with a soft and mellow tenor which he used to good advantage in his duet with "Patience."

Reginald Bunthorne, the "fleshly poet," was taken by another veteran of previous casts, Mr. Goddard. His baritone, rich, vigorous, and accurate especially suited his part. He not only sang well but displayed remarkable dramatic feeling and sense of humor.

Mr. Sheffield, also seen in college plays, sang in a rich full baritone, the rôle of Colonel Caverley. Mr Sheffield's poise and ease point to previous experience on the stage. He was ably seconded in the command of the dragoons by Mr Baker, who sang with the same pleasing voice that distinguished him in the "Mock Doctor."

The Misses Nash, Duprat and Guillett and Messrs. Jenks, Towne and Romanos, were all heavily applauded in their several novel and humorous roles.

The freshness and youth of the voices, the smoothness of the ensemble bespoke excellent training. The opening chorus of love-lorn maidens and the Queen's Heavy Dragoons, and the finale to act one were especially pleasing, while the grand climax of the final chorus in act three is a happy ending and solution of all that comes before.

The chorus, which performed and sang their parts admirably, was as follows:

The rapturous maidens, when off the stage, are: Helen Albee, Roxana Allen, Elizabeth Cory, Ruth Field, Georgina Hubert, Elizabeth Mandigo, Irene Marcott, Margaret Rice, Katherine Skinner, Helen Spaulding, Winona Spencer, Dorothy Sweeney, Helen Taylor and Evelyn Trask.

The soldiers, who are officers of the dragoon guards are: J R Aiken, F B Bacon, G Backmaster, H C Dalrymple, R J Dimon, L M Donahue, A O Eaton, K G Hooker, R S Jones, W E Morgan, J O Percival, A A Schaffner, R D Towne, L S Walker, F I Weston and D D Hazen.

Composed of University was the orchestra. Piano, Margaret Corbin, Kathryn Munn. Violin, Julia Waterson. 'Cello, G Aiken. Flute, R H Jones. Clarinet, E. W. Davis. Trumpet, Hildur Wilde.

The presentation itself to the fine direction, Dramatic Director, Prof J T. Metcalf. Musical Director, Prof H G Bennett. Costumes, Miss Mary Maud Patrick. Mrs. Pearl Brown Vocal Coach, Mrs. Elizabeth Bradish Dettering. Miss Annis Baldwin. Posters, Miss Elizabeth Colburn. Miss Lois Barbara, Miss MacKenzie.

Scene: Act 1, exterior of Castle Bunthorne. Act 2, a glade.

Synopsis

"Patience" is a satire on the artificial cult of aestheticism which flourished in the '80's. Bunthorne, the fleshly poet, was probably intended as a caricature of Oscar Wilde, but is sometimes made up to represent Whistler. His rival, Grosvenor, the idyllic poet, is supposed to be modelled on Swinburne. The poets wreak much havoc among the susceptible "rapturous maidens." The "normal" characters of the opera are Patience, the milkmaid and a trio and chorus of Officers of the Dragoon Guards.

Act 1

The maidens sigh for Bunthorne, but he loves Patience, who repulses him. Heartbroken, and advised by his solicitor, he offers himself "to be raffled for." He is rescued by Patience, who, having learned from Angela that love must be self-sacrificial, promises to be his bride. The maidens appear to be reconciled to their old loves, the dragoons, when Grosvenor appears, and all maidens run after the new poet.

Act 2

Consumed by jealousy and urged by Jane, Bunthorne confronts Grosvenor and threatens actually to curse him if he does not cut his hair. Grosvenor yields he has long wished for an excuse to become commonplace. The maiden's, imitating Grosvenor, appear in modern dress. Patience may now love Grosvenor, since he has become unattractive. The Duke, "out of common fairness" selects the only homely girl, Jane, for his bride. Bunthorne, deprived of both Patience and Jane, is forced "to be contented with a tulip or lily."

RIDING CLASSES TO BE ADDED TO GYM TRAINING

It has been learned from Howard Prentice, director of physical education, that tentative plans have been completed for a class in riding. The classes is to meet at the gym on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at four o'clock subject to weather conditions. It is hoped that many will take advantage of this opportunity and warrant its continuance through the ensuing year.

A Sorority Initiates

A seventeen-year-old co-ed at Oklahoma died after having been forced to drink liquid shoe polish at a sorority initiation. The authorities indicate caused the girl's death by what they called an "inky portion of castor oil."

NOTICES

Rehearsals for the class singing contests on Founder's Day have been called by the various class presidents to be held in the Music Building on Prospect Street this week. Freshmen will meet this afternoon at 4.00 o'clock; the sophomores Wednesday, the juniors Thursday, and the seniors Friday, at the same time.

All chairmen of the Junior Week committees are requested to meet in the Old Mill Chapel, Thursday afternoon at 1.30 p.m.

R. I. E. E. will meet in the Williams Science Hall at 4 p.m., Wednesday, April 24. L. M. Donahue, '30, will give a talk on "Radio Control on Trains."

The Males Complain

At Sorbonne in Paris, the male students have been complaining bitterly over the fact that female students are permitted to attend the same classes as they do, and have been campaigning for the segregation of the women into separate classrooms. The reason for the objection by the males was stated as being due to the obnoxious, overpowering odor of the perfume and rouge of the women disturbing them in their classroom pursuits. Johns Hopkins News-Letter.

Students of the Floating University took their mid-year exams in the Phya Thai Palace, where they stayed as guests of King Rama VII of Siam, for nine days.

BLUESTOCKINGS GIVE MEMBERSHIP TO TWO

Prof. Leon Dean Discusses the Short Story, Telling of Different Types—Group Discussion Follows

At a meeting of Bluestockings held at the Theta House Tuesday evening, April 23, Dorothy Emery, '31, and Helen LeBaron, '32, were elected to membership in the society as a result of the recent contest for membership.

At the business meeting the society decided that all those who have not paid their dues on or before the date of the next meeting will be dropped from membership. The next meeting is to be held Friday, May 3, at 4.00 o'clock at the Theta House.

Prof. Dean Speaks

Prof. Leon Dean entertained the club with a talk on the short story. He first pointed out that there are two types of short story, the problem story and the achievement or accomplishment story. Both are based on struggle.

In the problem story the individual is confronted with two ways of doing a thing, neither of which is desirable but between which he must choose. As an illustration of the problem story Mr. Dean used "A Point of Honor," a story about Benedict Arnold and Major André.

Second Type

In the achievement story a person is possessed of a life desire, and he encounters obstacles in trying to realize his desire. The person may have to struggle against any one of three things, against other persons, against something in his own nature, or against inanimate objects. Mr. Dean told William Dudley Pelley's story, "The Face in the Window," as an illustration of this class of story involving all three types of struggle. Prof. Dean also stressed the fact that suspense is an important element for holding the interest of the reader. The contending forces should be evenly matched and the outcome uncertain. He compared a story to a prize fight in which, perhaps, the hero is ahead after the first round, but the opposition is ahead at the end of the second round, and so on, with the outcome uncertain until the end.

Mr. Dean's famous grin and charming personality added a fillip to his talk which was followed by a general discussion of short story writing.

CHAPEL AUDIENCE HEARS ADAMS SPEAK ON TRUTH

Rev. C. C. Adams of Burlington, Vt., spoke in chapel Wednesday morning on "Truth," the strongest factor in the world.

Three captains of the guards were once asked to write a sentence containing the strongest word with the most truth. The first wrote, "Wine is the strongest." The second wrote, "The king is the strongest." The third wrote, "Women are strongest, but truth showeth the way to victory." In truth there is no unrighteousness. Truth itself abideth and is strong for ever.

Wine is strong, but not good. Women's strength lies in their influence for good. But as for the truth, nothing can exist without it. It is the pathway to peace, and war is caused by lies. Though truth be crushed to earth it will rise again. Truth is honesty, agreement of word with fact. Truth is sincerity. The builders of the world are the seekers of truth.

And Jesus said, "I am the truth."

DEAN J. LAWRENCE HILLS

Principal speaker at the Founder's Day exercises in the Chapel. His subject was "Ira Allen, a Human Being."

SIX CO-EDS ELECTED TO MORTAR BOARD

Dorothy Dailey, Mabel Freemann, Narcissa Goodsell, Beverly Householder, Florence McKenzie and Joyce Richardson Honored

LEADERSHIP, SERVICE AND SCHOLARSHIP BASIS

Akraia Chapter of Mortar Board announces the election of the following juniors to membership. Dorothy Dailey of Plattsburg, N. Y.; Mabel Freemann of Morristown, Pa.; Narcissa Goodsell of Alburgh, Beverly Householder of Burlington, Florence McKenzie of Hinesburg, and Joyce Richardson of Springvale, Me.

Mortar Board is the only national senior honorary organization for women. Elections are based on leadership, service, and scholarship. The national scholarship requirement is three points about the individual college's average. This makes an average of 77 percent or better the requirement for the local chapter.

Dorothy Dailey is a member of Alpha Chi Omega and was recently elected president of Women's Student Union. She is prominent in athletics, having been on class soccer and basketball teams and a tennis coach. Last year she was vice-president of W. A. A. She has also been active in the literary field as a member of Press Club and Bluestockings.

Mabel Freemann is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta. She was recently elected president of Masque and Sandal, of which she has been secretary for the past year. She was a member of the cast of "Lady Windermere's Fan." Miss Freemann's debating ability has won for her membership in Tau Kappa Alpha, honorary debating society, and she is circulation manager of the Vermont Literary Magazine. Miss Freemann is a member of Student Union Council, is class vice-president and has served on various committees.

Narcissa Goodsell is a member of Pi Beta Phi. She has been pledged to Omicron Nu, national honorary home economics society, and is vice-president of the Home Economics Club. In her freshman year she played on the class teams in hockey, soccer and baseball, and has made the hockey team each year since. She was chairman of the indoor meet this winter and is secretary of the W. A. A. Council.

Beverly Householder is a member of Pi Beta Phi. She has been particularly active in dramatics, and has the lead in the Junior Week play this year. She was in the casts of "The Devil's Disciple" and "Lady Windermere's Fan," and has been vice-president of Masque and Sandal. This year she was a delegate to the Inter-Collegiate Dramatic Conference. Miss Householder has been on class hockey, baseball and volley ball teams. This last year she has served on Faculty

"Ira Allen, a Human Being," Topic of Dean Hills' Address

Delivers Principal Speech at Traditional Founder's Day Exercises —"Ira Allen The Diplomat" and "Ira Allen and You" Furnish Subjects of Other Addresses

PREPARE FOR VARIOUS LILAC DAY ACTIVITIES

Originated by Mortar Board Several Years Ago, Will Present Annual Pageant in Memory of Dean Wasson

Parts have been chosen and committees selected for the annual Lilac Day activities in memory of Pearl Wasson, formerly Dean of Women. The principals in the pageant which was written by Florence Smith, '27, and first presented in that year, are: High Priestess, Gladys Kone, '29; Seeker, Catherine Bassett, '29; Nature, Miriam Ideman, '29; Lake, Mildred Whitney, '29; Mountains, Laura Bingham, '29; and Dorothy Gurney, '30. Learning, Marion Baldwin '29; Truth, Marion Backus, '29; Vision, Charlotte Cleveland, '29; Achievement, Margaret Durick, '29; Memory, Lucy Morgan, '29. There will be a number of dancers in addition to this cast.

The following women are the committee chairmen: Properties, Margaret Parry, '30; costumes, Alma Farr and Narcissa Goodsell, both '30; dancing, Mildred Whitney, '29; publicity, Priscilla Campbell, '30; supper, Helen Wilson, '30; Lantern Walk, Elzada Fiske, '29; singing, Hazel Ladd, '30.

Lilac Day was instituted by Mortar Board several years ago, and is one of the most beautiful traditions of this university. Its purpose is the planting of a lilac tree annually in a hedge at Redstone. The ceremony of planting the tree is conducted by the members of Mortar Board, and is followed by a supper out of doors and singing. The crowning event of the evening will be the Lantern Walk which is a new feature in the charge of Elzada Fiske, '29.

In previous years, Lilac Day has been marred by bad weather and the necessity of holding it indoors has robbed it of much of its natural charm. If the weather is clement this year it will be held May 22 with May 24 as an alternate date in case of rain. Mortar Board hopes for a record attendance from the women of the student body, not only because this is our one exclusively feminine tradition, but out of respect to the memory of the woman who, while unknown to the group now in college, was greatly beloved by our alumnae.

SCABBARD AND BLADE GIVES DANCE TONIGHT

This evening there will be a concert and dance at the Memorial Auditorium sponsored by the Scabbard and Blade Society. From 8 to 9 the R. O. T. C. Band, under the direction of Joe Lechner, will play various selections, and from 9 to 12 Joe's Vermonters will furnish music for dancing. Good music is assured for both concert and dance. The tickets are $1.25 a couple for both concert and dance.

As the crowning event of the traditional Founders Day program it is expected to be well attended. This is of course the last dance as well as the last event sponsored by the present Scabbard and Blade.

PI BETA PHI

The local chapter of Pi Beta Phi announces the initiation on Saturday, April 20, of the following girls: Frances Ferguson, Carolyn Beggs, Olive Fields, Katherine Skinner, Norma Freeman, Theodora Wakefield, Alice Brooks, Emily Maslen, Verna Carrier, all of '32, and Doris Skinner, '30. The initiation banquet was held the same evening, at the Hotel Vermont roof garden, Mary Turner, '29, served as toastmistress. The province president, Charlotte Brown, '27, was present as a guest.

ESTABROOK AND SEARS REPRESENT STUDENTS

Dean J. L. Hills, dean of the College of Agriculture and director of the Experiment Station was the principal speaker at the One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Annual Founder's Day exercises held today at the Ira Allen Chapel. The dean took as his subject "Ira Allen a Human Being," relating in an impressive manner just how the founder of the University of Vermont showed his human traits and characteristics.

According to custom there were two student speakers, one from the senior class and one from the junior class. J. S. Estabrook of Brandon represented the seniors speaking on "Ira Allen The Diplomat" and F. A. Sears of Brattleboro represented the juniors, his topic being "Ira Allen and You." Their addresses are given below.

IRA ALLEN THE DIPLOMAT

We are met here for the purpose of commemorating the day upon which this, our University was founded. Under the circumstances then, it is with respect, love and admiration that we turn to Ira Allen, the man whose lofty ideals and ultimateness of purpose made possible the founding of this institution, an institution which has since made a name for itself in the realm of education, an institution which has made the citizens of this state proud of the name Vermont.

Ira Allen early in his life set his heart on making Vermont a state of the Union and in founding in that state a educational institution. This he did after much heroic effort. What characteristics of Ira Allen made possible the successful consummation of his ends? We may well spend a few minutes in reviewing some of these splendid elements of his character that we may set them up as attributes and goals in our lives as true men and women of Vermont.

His Ability to Visualize

Ira Allen loved the hills and valleys of Vermont and visualized the possibilities of the state as a beautiful and rich commonwealth. His ability to visualize without making vision his whole master but to the fit up with courage and clean thinking enabled him to make his pictures come true. For visual goals and ideals without strength and courage avail one not, but make a dreamer. Ira Allen had courage and carried with him at all times the strength of his own convictions. He stood and fought for the just realization of his own goals. In his efforts to have the confederation recognize Vermont as a state in the Union he was opposed at every turn. But the more difficult the problems the better he prepared himself for them. He had one great asset in his swiftness of action. Once decided upon the right method of attack he proceed ed with the utmost speed, gaining advantage over his foes. We too should develop the ability to cope with problems no matter how great; to draw conclusions and act upon them with speed and accuracy, thereby arriving at worthwhile goals and achievements.

The Diplomat

The greatest and finest attribute of Ira Allen was his diplomatic ability which was seen through the period of years when Vermont was on the verge of becoming either part of New York and New Hampshire or a British colony. Ira Allen led Vermont through the crisis and by pleading with the Congress and consoling the British, held off until finally Congress passed a resolution to enter Vermont as a state in the Union. Ira Allen's diplomacy was by no means ad cunning and subtleness but often brilliant and clear. His ability as a diplomat was due largely to his keen knowledge of men, his judgment of human nature and the reactions of men.

The need for the diplomatic ability [illegible] with the entering of Vermont into the Union, for the next few years of his life were to be the commercial and romantic period of his existence when he made a determined struggle against perpetually difficult business conditions. He made an effort to establish a university and for ten years from 1791 to 1801 the university was just a projected institution. But through his determined efforts he eventually made possible the university of today.

Present Day Need of Ira Allens

Today as we glance at the unsteady and troubled world of ours as we look at Mexico and its controlling interests, as we see China and its constant upheavals as we watch England endeavor to cope with an overwhelming problem of unemployment we see the need of more men like Ira Allen in the field of present day diplomacy. As we perceive here in our country the needless bragging in Congress as we see the seeking of selfish desires by the petty yet powerful politicians and note the precarious position of our government toward the League of Nations and other stepping stones to the world peace as we notice time and time again the passage of laws which lack vision and foresight to the general good it is then we realize the need for men such as Ira Allen in the United States.

The call is universal for men and women capable of forming ideals and goals for those who have courage of their convictions and for those who have developed the fine arts of diplomacy. This was more aptly stated by Mr. E. Mower in the class of '27 as "vision, foresight, ideals, goals, courage, diplomacy as challenges to men and women of Vermont." And so I too challenge you to develop through foresight and vision, goals and ideals worthy of our founder, Ira Allen.

JOHN SHELBY ESTABROOK

IRA ALLEN AND YOU

Once a year we assemble here in this beautiful chapel. Once a year we turn our thoughts backward and think of the founder of this our college. This day we call Founder's Day, a day set aside to commemorate the founding of the University of Vermont.

It is only right that we should do this. It is only proper that on such a day we should turn again to those rugged pioneers and woodsmen that founded this institution of learning, the ranking college of our state. But is it right that on only one day of the entire year we should meditate in this fashion?

Ira Allen, founder, statesman, soldier, business man, lived many years ago. If he were to appear on our campus tomorrow some of us might chuckle at his dress at his speech, or perhaps at his actions, but none of us would laugh at the man himself. Strong, virile, honest as he was, we would all realize the moral and physical courage of the man, his steadfast determination, those admirable qualities that made of him a personage beloved by all Vermonters. But we would be more than amazed at his age. Not any older than many in this audience he accomplished purposes that stand as living monuments on his grave.

Ira Allen—His Youth

When Ira Allen was but a youth of nineteen he came to this part of our state as a surveyor, and, as many of us have since done, he became enraptured with this beautiful territory. To have an idea was to act so he purchased a large tract of land here. Immediately New York landpirates claimed the same land and he was drawn into a struggle which made of him a historical personage, a contest out of which grew the State of Vermont and the resultant University of Vermont.

His first step to protect his land was to become one of the leaders of those famous Green Mountain Boys. Because of his activities in this capacity a New York governor set a price of one hundred pounds on his head. He was never captured and when the Revolutionary War broke out, the Green Mountain Boys, Ira and his brother Ethan Allen were among those few that held the northern part of the rebelling colonies against invasion by Great Britain.

Such activity would ordinarily denote a man of experienced years, but Ira was only in his early twenties.

Beginning in this period we find him openly declaring for an independent state of Vermont. The struggle for recognition, the formation of the governmental machinery in 1778, and the renewal of the battle for existence in 1779 continuing until February 8, 1791, mark Ira Allen as an exceedingly astute diplomat deserving more than any other man the credit for the fourteenth state of the Union—Vermont.

VERMONT SENDS TWO DELEGATES TO CO-EDS' CONFERENCE AT COLBY

Dorothy Dailey and Marion Tifft Represent Women's Student Union at Self-Government Meeting in Waterville, Maine

Dorothy Dailey, '30, and Marion Tifft '30, recently elected president and vice president respectively of Women's Student Union returned Sunday from Waterville Me. after attending the annual conference of the Women's Student Government Association of Coeducational Colleges of New England. The conference extended from April 18 through the 20th. Miss Dailey and Miss Tifft left Burlington on Wednesday, April 17 reaching Boston that night and then traveling from there to Waterville by sleeper.

Royally Entertained

The delegates were entertained in a royal manner at Colby, making their headquarters at Foss Hall, the large girls dormitory at that college. Colby has approximately 250 co-eds, most of whom are housed in dorms. Vermont's greatest individual problem along student government lines seems to be the number of girls living outside the dormitories.

Besides having sufficient dormitory room Colby has a large building, containing the gymnasium, the Y. W. C. A. room and a social room, used primarily for social meetings of various organizations.

Colby has six women's fraternities, all of which are national. Tri-Delt is the only one of Vermont's fraternities represented on the Colby Campus.

Problems of Student Government

The conference was called for the purpose of bringing up, and discussing various problems which are continually confronting student government in all colleges. About ten New England coeducational colleges were represented each one sending from one to five delegates. Girls from the University of New Hampshire, Middlebury, Colby, Rhode Island State, Bates, Tufts, Connecticut Agricultural College, the University of Maine were present.

Elsie Lewis, the retiring president of Student Government at Colby, presided at the discussions, and topics which each college had sent in were talked over. Vermont's question concerned the Constitution and automobiling.

Program for Conference

The program for the entire conference is given below:

An Unceasing Worker

With such a courageous battle against odds in his early years and the final crowning of his ambitions in 1791 we might well believe that he would rest upon his laurels so honorably won. But not Ira Allen, to him this work of his younger years was but a testing fire and so later we find him creating this University, becoming prominent in business and social affairs until to all appearances he was beginning to reap the harvest he had so fruitfully sown. But in doing this we would not have recognized Fate, for Fate now decided otherwise, and at the age of forty-five he was unjustly prosecuted in England, ruined financially, and after fleeing for his liberty from his state, died unhonored and unsung.

Ira Allen and you. Ira Allen and the college student of today can readily be compared when we remember that he too was once young, that he too at this time in life was ready to step out into the world and already his ambitions were flaming as he probably contemplated his own future. He started out under different conditions, but as his obstacles presented themselves they had to be met and overcome even as yours and mine.

I am speaking to the seniors now, who are about ready to step into outside activities; to the juniors, who are preparing for that step; to the underclassmen, who are looking forward to that moment; and to those who have already met, as it is so prosaically termed, life in the outside world. I am then speaking to you. I cannot bring you a message this morning. Ira Allen has done that! In that brief bit of history I have related is a message far more powerful than anything I can say.

The Duty of the Present Day Student

Today when the world is looking to the college student for aid—we should feel that it is our duty to prepare ourselves as best we know how. We do not have to blaze a trail, we do not have to repel invaders or to found a state amid tremendous obstacles, but we do have problems to solve and facts to meet that require character and courage. It is up to us to develop that character and that courage.

If we were alone and unaided there might be some excuse for faltering, but with such a noble heritage as Ira Allen has left us there can be no hesitancy.

To the student of Vermont, he has taught that honesty, courage, and determination reward themselves. Here among these green hills we can learn to follow his example and knowing his life, develop as he did.

Tomorrow—the students of today will be the citizens. What are we going to do with our talents?

You and I can do our part in the moral and social upheaval of today. The United States is at present passing through a period of creative and distructive events. The recent South American attitude, the unveiling of [illegible] scandal among our [illegible] other slightly du[illegible] policies, are all [illegible] age. Closer home w[illegible] disapproval of the [illegible] the frequent breaking [illegible] laws, and the result[illegible] fusion in the minds [illegible] thoughtful citizens.

Here is a task w[illegible] To do our share w[illegible] the lessons of our [illegible] we need today, to quo[illegible] er, "Is less law and [illegible] sense." If we as citi[illegible] the dictates of our [illegible] conscience we have [illegible] the untangling of the [illegible] day beliefs and prac[illegible]

We have our example[illegible] experiences, advice, and [illegible] strong, virile founders [illegible] guide us. All we need [illegible] ness to profit by those [illegible] illustrations. Today we [illegible] fied that Ira Allen lived [illegible] accomplished what he [illegible] ables us to set ourselves [illegible] although we may never [illegible] keep our aims and our [illegible] thy of our founders.

ELECTION TO BOULDER SOCIETY IS CONSIDERED HIGHEST STUDENT HONOR

Senior Honorary Society Founded in 1905—Rock for Which it is Named Found in West Hartford

Boulder Society—U. V. M.'s most [illegible] senior honor—has, in its symbolic rock, a mute history of silent [illegible] which in many ways is analogous to the life and character of its members. As certainly as this boulder, [illegible] ill-formed rock in the bosom of the earth, then swept by raging torrents of water which wore each year a little deeper into the ledge, is an unmistakable testimony of the ameliorating forces of Nature, so, in a proportionate degree, is a member of Boulder the truest type and product of the beneficial influence of his Alma Mater—the prototype of Mother Nature at her best.

History of Boulder

During the construction of the Central Vermont Railroad in 1848 at West Hartford, Vt., a pot-hole 17 feet deep was disclosed in blasting. The fissure leading to it from the surface of the rock was six feet in length. Side by side within this hole, lay two granite boulders. Here they had rested for ages until the combined forces of Nature had ground them to a perfect shape.

These age-worn boulders were found, upon closer examination, to be of a different composition than the surrounding rock. It was therefore logical to assume that these boulders were products of the Glacial Period. Nature in time had brought these smoothly worn rocks to the site of the new Central Vermont Railroad.

When the blast had uncovered this marvel of Nature, the workmen, unappreciative of its value, dumped it in a ditch along with other rocks. Prof. Hitchcock of Dartmouth College examined these rare boulders and selected the most perfect of them, with the intention of taking it to Hanover. But Governor Payne, then president of the Central Vermont, claimed it and had it sent to Burlington as a gift to the University. After many ramblings about the campus, this boulder was finally brought to rest on the front campus opposite the west entrance of the Old Mill where it now stands.

Founding of Boulder Society

On January 9, 1905, a group of the most prominent members of the senior class met together for the purpose of founding a senior class honorary society. Realizing the deep significance in the annals of the University of Vermont of the boulder which today rests in front of the Old Mill and feeling that nothing could be more representative of the foremost men of the highest class of this university, they chose as a name for their organization the Boulder Society. At this first meeting, a constitution was presented and approved. L. H. Sault was elected president and H. W. Hrath secretary and treasurer. It was decided that the society should be secret. The purpose of the society was to uphold the traditions of the University, and to regulate matters relating to the student body, thereby relieving the administration of considerable trouble.

The system of choosing the officers of Boulder is unique. The only office which lasts throughout the year is that of secretary and treasurer. The other officers are distributed among the members in rotation. The length of the term of office is so fixed that all members hold the office of president at some time during the year. The members of the society choose their successors each spring, and the results are announced on Founder's Day. The requisites for membership are: character and leadership, and the golden rule which is applied is the amount of outstanding work that has been done in the various activities of the university, both scholastic and athletic.

The pin of the society is a plain gold key with a representation of the boulder in the crotch. A green hat with a facsimile of the pin in gold on the front is also worn by the members.

Duties of Boulder

Boulder supervises the fountain fight, the water fight, and the cane rush between the two lower classes each fall, being careful to see that everything is done as it should be and determining the winner. It also advises Key and Serpent, and Gold Key, exercising considerable control over the latter. Boulder acts as a final court of appeal in all disputes between the lower classes. A smoker is usually given each fall and spring, and an informal dance for the University each semester. Meetings are held semi-monthly.

The out-going members of the society are A. R. Birchard, J. S. Estabrook, B. W. Gustafson, J. P. Hyland, C. C. Lyman, C. C. Macomber, F. R. Otto, F. F. O'Keefe, K. L. Price and W. F. Rogers.

MORTAR BOARD HONORS MANY SENIOR WOMEN

Was For Many Years Akraia Society—Installed in National Organization Early in 1924

To acknowledge scholarship, leadership and personality in women of the senior class are the basic requirements of election to Mortar Board. So it is that election to it is considered on American campuses the highest honor a senior woman may receive.

History of Akraia

Akraia was founded in October, 1913, as a senior honorary society "to work for the highest type of college women, and to further the best interests of the women's department and the University." The constitution, drawn up by a committee consisting of the Misses O'Sullivan, Gifford, Spafford and Shepardson, was read before the seventeen senior women who had assembled at luncheon at the Van Ness House.

The first reunion of Akraia was held June 13, 1923. Akraia established Lilac Day in memory of Dean Pearl Randall Wasson, who was a member of that organization.

Went National in 1924

Through the efforts of the senior members in 1924, Akraia Chapter's petition to Mortar Board was accepted and installation was conducted by Mrs. Eleanor S. Clarke of Swarthmore, Pa., national president, at Redstone, October 18, 1924. Thirty-three active alumnae and honorary members were initiated at this time. Dean Marion Patterson and Miss Eleanor Cummings were made honorary members. Miss Kathrina Storms and Miss Alice Blanchard have been made honorary members also. Akraia Chapter of Mortar Board continues to perpetuate Dean Wasson's memory in the annual Lilac Day pageant, as the original society of Akraia formerly did.

The outgoing members of Mortar Board are: Marion Baldwin of Barton; Catherine Bassett of Burlington; Marion Backus of West Hartford, Conn.; Charlotte Cleveland of Glendale, Calif.; Margaret Durick of Fair Haven; and Lucy Morgan of Burlington.

JUNIOR HONORARY KEY AND SERPENT, ARRIVES AT TWENTY-FIRST YEAR

Was Founded in 1908—Is Self-Perpetuating Society With Various Intramural and Social Functions

To promote better college spirit, to further interfraternity relations and good fellowship, and to engender closer bonds of unity among the freshmen—all these are the fundamental purposes of the Key and Serpent Society, the juniors' honorary organization.

Founded in 1908

In the Spring of the year 1908, it was decided to form a junior class honorary society to be known as Key and Serpent. Before commencement of that year, the society was duly organized from members of the class of 1910, then sophomores. The first meeting was held at the Sigma Phi Place on October 14, 1908. The officers who had been chosen the preceding Spring had not returned to college, and as a result of the new elections Arthur K. Rich was the first president and Arthur T. Dailey the first vice-president. At the second meeting Prof. Tupper was invited to join the Society as an honorary member, and he has guided the destinies of Key and Serpent since that time. The next fall Prof. Stetson was also elected an honorary member.

Self-Perpetuating

The society elects its own members each Spring term from the members of the sophomore class, and the elections are announced on Founder's Day. The qualifications for membership are manliness, in deportment as in body, nobility as to spirit, in self-control as to spirit, popularity in class room, on campus, and in society, and achievements intellectually, physically, and morally. The elections are made irrespective of academic courses and on the basis of the candidate's disposition to further college interests. Later in the term, the men who have been elected appear at some specially designated place in full dress suit with top hat, cane, and spats for informal initiation. They are then made to do various stunts such as directing traffic, and otherwise appearing conspicuously in public places.

GOLD KEY SOPHOMORE HONORARY SINCE 1923

Society Modeled on Green Key of Dartmouth—New Method of Selection Follows Other Honoraries

Gold Key, the Sophomore Honorary Society, was organized March 1, 1923 with Beryl M. Randall, '25, a member of the then local Sigma Alpha Chi Fraternity and one of the founders of the society, as its first president. Before the founding of Gold Key, a sophomore committee had performed duties similar to those of the new society. A constitution modeled upon that used by the Green Key of Dartmouth was adopted.

The duties of the society are supervising freshman discipline, assisting the honorary societies of the upper classes, assisting the athletic office, and maintaining relationships with similar organizations of other colleges. The specific functions through which they perform these duties are many and varied. Gold Key issues the freshman rules with the consent of Boulder and up until this year had general charge of Freshman Week, seeing that the freshmen got all the necessary equipment and that they followed the rules laid down for them. Appropriate punishment was meted out to those freshmen who refused or failed to live up to the requirements of the sophomores. They also supervised the freshman work such as the erection of basketball and Kake Walk bleachers, and moving football stands. Meeting visiting teams and ushering at games are duties which they still perform.

Last year at a meeting of Boulder Society a new plan of organization which was accepted by Gold Key was adopted. Since then Gold Key has been a truly honorary society just as Boulder and Key and Serpent are. Gold Key now elects its own successors and has a maximum of fifteen members. Instead of the former cumbersome number, Boulder deemed it wise to make the society smaller in order to cause it to function more efficiently. A smaller organization speeds up its decisions on matters brought to its attention and conclusions are reached more easily. The society is somewhat more exclusive than before. New members are chosen for their character, their interest in the University and their activities on the campus. Of the fifteen members elected, there is one from each of the fraternities and two from the class at large including the Independents.

A gold key is the emblem of the society. The hat worn by the members is green and has a gold key encircled by a representation of the Boulder upon it. The main purpose and ideal of the society is to perpetuate the traditions of Vermont and to convey them to the freshmen. It is primarily for that purpose that the freshman rules are made.

The outgoing members of Gold Key are: H. W. Adams, I. A. Axel, Leonard Berry, M. A. Bisson, G. R. Brush, J. E. Clark, D. E. Coburn, W. W. Howard, R. J. Maynes, F. A. McBride, R. D. Romanos, F. S. Smith, A. J. Soutakes, R. E. Tobin, and C. W. Walker.

When this is over, a banquet is held after which both the old and the new members serenade the girls' dormitories. The membership of the society is limited to twelve, but usually the full quota is not elected, the present membership being only eight.

Key and Serpent is usually a very active force throughout the college year. Meetings are held on the first and third Tuesdays of every month. The members manage at least one smoker during the year and usually two. An informal dance is given for the college every year and sometimes a formal is held for the society itself. It also manages the interfraternity basketball and baseball series and gives a cup to the winner of each. Another of its functions is to supervise the work of Gold Key in conjunction with the athletic department.

The outgoing members of the society are W. H. Burr, R. G. Hawley, R. A. Lawrence, C. H. Mace, H. M. Macomber, J. C. Puffer, and A. G. Sirois.

Our wishy washy creed: "You know, I think your boy friend is perfectly horrid!" We were watching the varsity practice in the cage and he said, "They were all off their bats!"

A busy school now once again
Finds time to pause and praise its men.

There are certain days set aside every year for special occasions. Christmas, New Year's, Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays—big occasions deeply imbedded and ingrained in our democratic institutions, looked forward to and cherished by all. And Vermont has Founder's Day. Vermont has Ira Allen's memory to revere, his visions to applaud, his work to admire and his ideals to emulate.

Many years ago a man, standing on the shores of sparkling Champlain, gazed at a beautiful hill backed by high green mountains. Many men had come before him to gaze upon and admire this sight. But Ira Allen could appreciate more than beauty of landscape; he could look far into the future. He saw possibilities and he worked that they might become probabilities and later realities. He was the master who painted Burlington and Burlington's finest institution, the University of Vermont.

It is, then, most fitting that we pause today to pay our respects to the founder of our university. A day of rest? Not entirely. For we must constantly bear in mind that Founder's Day has made possible all that the Green and Gold means to us today. We must strive to better ourselves, our school, our community, in order that Ira Allen shall not be judged to have lived in vain.

Somehow, this great man reminds us of Lincoln—pioneers both, though each in a different field. Each possessed the great faculty of overcoming obstacles.

When Abraham Lincoln was a young man he ran for the legislature in Illinois and was badly swamped.

He next entered business, failed, and spent seventeen years paying the debts of a worthless partner.

He was in love with a beautiful young woman to whom he became engaged and then she died.

Later he married a woman who was a constant burden to him.

Entering politics again he ran for Congress and was badly defeated.

He tried to get an appointment in the United States Land Office and failed.

In 1856 he became a candidate for the Vice-Presidency and was again defeated.

In 1858 he was defeated by Douglas.

One failure after another—bad failures—real setbacks. In face of all of this he eventually became one of the nation's greatest men, if not the greatest.

When you think of a series of setbacks like that doesn't it make you feel small to become discouraged, just because you think you are having a hard time in life?

Similarly, when we think of what Ira Allen and his associates had to contend with, when we but pause a moment to view the obstacles they were forced to surmount we learn a great lesson—a lesson of perseverance and determination. Such lessons teach us to be true Vermonters. Such lessons teach us to revere the memories of those who made our University possible.

"Just as Italy had to be united in spite of all the rotten little dukes and princes and republics, just as Germany had to be united in spite of its scores of kingdoms and duchies and liberties, so now the world" —H. G. WELLS.

Mortar Board girls were in charge of the tea held at Redstone last Sunday afternoon. Faculty members who were present were Professor and Mrs. Wallace, Professor and Mrs. Stillwell, Professor and Mrs. Fraleigh, Miss Patterson and Miss Storms. Mrs. Wallace and Miss Storms poured. There was a large student attendance, in spite of the weather. Another tea will be held at Redstone Sunday, May 5.

On Sunday evening Mrs. Stetson entertained the Grasemount seniors at dinner and bridge at her new home.

Criticizing the Critic

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

May I correct a few misunderstandings that seem to have arisen since the appearance of the May issue of College Humor? An article arousing considerable interest in Burlington was entitled "The Owls of the University of Vermont." According to a review which appeared in a recent issue of the CYNIC, the article contained a few "prevarications" in regard to the honors held by members of Lambda Iota.

The reviewer remarks that "it says one of their men is president of the John Dewey Club of philosophy and psychology. This is gross error, for the truth of the matter is that not a single Owls man (sic!) even belongs to the famous organization." If the gentleman reviewer had been a little keen-minded, he might have considered that a magazine article is written some months before it appears, and that the fraternity series in College Humor began about June, 1928. Looking back to last year, we find the roster of the "famous organization" including the names of some half dozen Owls. One of these, George Graves, '28, succeeded Lewis G. Leary, '28, as president during the second semester. For that matter, at least three Owls paid membership dues this term—but this, perhaps, does not let one "even belong."

The second correction sounds a bit off color. "The article goes on to state that 'another helps edit the Vermont Literary Magazine.' This is true enough, but the funny part of the business lies in the fact that the May issue of College Humor was being printed at the time an Owls man (sic!) was elected to the Literary Magazine's editorial board. But of course College Humor was primarily intended to be humorous." Again retrospecting, we find Joseph W. Eaton, '30, an "Owls man," humor editor of the Vermont Literary Magazine during the last college year. The fact that another of our group was recently elected would hardly seem justification for any mature and disinterested person to assume that such an honor had never fallen to an Owl before.

A mature and fair-minded person, moreover, could scarce have found the article stating that Lambda Iota is "preferred" (especially "more preferred") to the national fraternities—or do you prefer "frats"?—on this campus. Nor did it say that the Owls make such a claim. The author, writing to an audience that hardly knows a "local" exists except until it can "go national," described the Owls' standing, as a fraternity, much as Baird's Manual describes that of Phi Nu Theta at Wesleyan, Tri-Kappa at Dartmouth, and Delta Psi and Lambda Iota at Vermont.

Aside from these lapses, your gentleman reviewer condescendingly accepts the article as accurate. But allow me to point out a few further errors and omissions. First, Chi Psi and Delta Kappa Epsilon were founded not before Lambda Iota, but some eight years afterwards. Only the Union College triad, Alpha Delta Phi, and Psi Upsilon antedate the Owls. Secondly, the fraternity has produced not two but three governors of Vermont, and not two but three bishops. Finally, the article neglected to say—as it might have said without provarication—that Lambda Iota, in the course of ninety three years, has given more names to "Who's Who" than any other chapter on the Vermont campus.

It might be borne in mind that the article was written from the standpoint of an outsider—who was likely to look upon things in a slightly different way from that of one who has gleaned all the "inside dope" from gossip at the Ladies' Aid and with student groups that imitate this benign organization. I am happy to be able to deduce, from my past acquaintance with interfraternity honor, that your gentleman reviewer belongs neither to a local nor to a national fraternity of the University of Vermont.

Very truly yours,

THOMAS HARLOW MORTON, '29
President of the Lambda Iota Society
April 23, 1929.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

I should like to voice my opinion and incidentally that of others on the campus, concerning the subject of decorations at college dances.

A major society recently put on a dance which affords a very good example of the laxity of interest and appreciation of dance committees in the matter of decorations at dances. At the same dance even programs were lacking. Such a condition is deplorable. What might have been a successful dance was turned into a mere work shop devoid of several things that make a dance—especially decorations, which are a very definite characteristic of college dances and which are expected. They create a college atmosphere and kindle in the dancers a livelier spirit, making a dance more festive and enjoyable.

It was certainly a relief to find that at least one society on the hill has not lost the traditional ability of our University dance committees in preparing proper settings for our social functions. That Society was Mortar Board, and future dance committees may well follow their example. Many remarked on the beauty of it, and the spirit aroused was keenly visible throughout the evening. The dance was a remarkable success, perhaps not primarily because of the decorations, but at least much of the success during that evening was attributed to the decorations. Mortar Board is to be congratulated.

Are not these—streamers, banners, programs, etc.—things that make a college dance different from public dances? Do they not go toward making a typical college dance? Our dances this year have not been a tremendous success, which has been partly due to the lack of a proper setting. Would not the addition of decorations make a dance much more successful? Many of us think they would make a dance a greater success, financially and otherwise. It is hoped that future dance committees, by their actions, will show that they have awakened to the fact that decorations afford a desirable and necessary atmosphere for a thoroughly successful dance.

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

By Ex-Converse Hall

A Brief Case

"I'll bet a Packard to a Chevrolet that it's that Julia Andrews case! We've seen quite a lot about it in the papers, haven't we, Willie?"

"Sure thing—this morning's World said that the girl was suing for a quarter of a million and that the Insurance Company had turned the matter over to you."

"Yes that's the case, you see, it all grew out of what practically four out of every five have—an automobile. Mr. Curtiss, yes, the president of the Curtiss Steamship Company, ran into her car sometime last month, and her attorney claims that she'll be crippled for life. She's a prominent dancer, you know, and the court will feel quite prejudiced, inasmuch as she will probably claim that not only has she been badly hurt, but her very career and means of livelihood have been destroyed. Now the car that Mr. Curtiss was driving belonged to the Steamship Company, and was insured along with their other property, the contract providing full payment for all damage, personal or otherwise, in which said property might figure as a direct cause. Therefore, the Monarch Insurance Company is being sued for $250,000, while the girl is being carefully kept out of the way. I've had her traced, however, and have found that she's living in a hotel up on Lake Placid. Her attorney declares that she's suffering from a complete nervous breakdown, and that her spine and lower limbs are permanently disabled. I don't believe it. Will you fellows help me prove I'm right?"

Would they help? Would a woman try on as many hats as there are in a store? They would not only help, but were willing, nay anxious, to show Attorney Hoyt just how the affair should be managed.

Reassured by their enthusiasm, he broached his plan to them, and before they left his office he presented each with the latest type large, new kodak, which Jimmie promptly declared were the "crankshaft's bearings."

The following Tuesday two collegiate chaps jumped out of a Packard straight-8 roadster and proceeded to register at the Hotel Aexiel. Their baggage, having been sent ahead, had already arrived, but each fellow carried a large, new kodak. Upon looking over the register they found the following legend, inscribed in a small, feminine hand: Marion Wood, New York.

"That's the name she's using up here, Willie. So Mr. Hoyt was right about her having registered here. Now for an introduction."

This feat didn't prove very difficult, as a Norwich manner and an eight-straight-in-line roadster go a long way to make friends. And when they did meet Miss Andrews, or rather Miss Wood, they were forced to declare that she was a peach.

"Seems a shame to work our trick on her, but I suppose we've got to. Besides, a person who'd try to do a company out of 250,000 susquehannas doesn't deserve to be given any consideration."

"All the same, something tells me that our work is going to be the sweetest job we ever undertook!"

SEVERAL NEWCOMERS BEING GROOMED FOR TRACK MEET WITH UNION

A week from Saturday Vermont opens her outdoor track season with the home meet with Union. Union is especially strong in the running events but Berry and Morse look good to place in the century and the 220, while Lyman should cop a few points for Vermont in the hurdles. Woodard and Huey are running in fine form, and should come through in the 440. Maynes will be a contender in the mile and looks good to break the tape well in the fore in that event. Bjorn and Martinetti will be out to win the laurels in the 880 and should give the visiting team some stiff opposition in that event.

Several freshmen are proving their worth as valuable track material, but some, not having had experience in actual competition, their performance in the first meet is at best a matter of conjecture. However, Wilder, who led the pack home in the cross-country meet with Middlebury last fall, should run a pretty two-mile, while Child should be a strong contender for a place in the 100 and the broad jump. Meehan looks good in the pole vault, and Bove may be slated for that event as well as the broad jump.

JUNIOR VARSITY HAS DAILY PRACTICE GRINDS

Junior Varsity baseball practice began last Thursday after the varsity left on the Massachusetts trip. Long hard practice sessions have been held regularly since then. The team is working every afternoon at Centennial field and is developing quickly although no team has been picked yet. One practice game has already been held.

Of the candidates for the pitching staff Cummings and Doc Foster look best. Cummings, who is a first year man, would undoubtedly be pitching for the varsity if he were not ineligible due to the transfer rule. He was the big shot on the Syracuse frosh team last year and before that pitched for St. Albans High. He will probably be assigned the heaviest jobs. Kendall and Bowers both look good in the backstop position. Neither has much on the other. Bowers has a real snappy peg. Lang and Carrigan are best at the initial sack with Carrigan having the advantage. Wetherell and Proctor are showing up well at the keystone bag. Wetherell is a little the better of the two. Alen and Buxton are both out for shortstop. Buxton seems to be a little in the lead. At the hot corner Grant and Foster are nip and tuck with Grant having the natural advantage of appropriately colored hair. There are a slew of candidates working in the garden. The only one sure of a job is Dinniman, a varsity letter man who is ineligible.

Working regularly under the tutelage of Doc Newton, former Vermont twirler and a heavy stick man, the team has a bright outlook for a good season.

Seven girls from the Home Economics Department are in charge of the Practice House this week. They are: Elizabeth Brown, '29, hostess; Lucene Little, '29, assistant hostess; Florence Whitcomb, '30, cook; Helen Peabody, '30, household manager; Harriet Johnstone, Nathalie Hawley and Barbara Le Baron, all of '31, sophomore assistants.

BASEBALL OPENER TODAY CALLED OFF

Game With St. Michael's Cancelled on Account of Sickness at the Winooski College

CATS TO OPEN AGAINST MEDICS NEXT SATURDAY

Owing to the fact that the presence of smallpox at St. Michael's College in Winooski Park has caused the quarantine of the students there, the Purple baseball team will be unable to appear at Centennial Field this afternoon to open the home season for Vermont and to start the state championship series.

The game will probably be played later in the season to give all the state title aspirants an even chance but that depends on how soon the ban is lifted at St. Michael's.

In a regularly scheduled game the Vermonters will line up against several former varsity stars at Centennial Field next Saturday when the Medic team will be the first home opponent.

FRESHMAN TENNIS CARD CONTAINS 7 MATCHES

The frosh tennis team will open its season on May 8 with Burlington High on the back campus courts. This is the first year that a freshman tennis team has ever been organized. With prospects for the varsity this year rather gloomy and the prospects for next year and those to follow even more gloomy, the Athletic Council has given permission to have a yearling team. "Barney" Shedd, '29, this year's varsity captain, as manager of the frosh team, has already completed his schedule and has secured Prof. Still as well as coach. Already there are six men working out daily on the Unitarian Church court. The schedule is as follows:

May 8	Burlington High	Here
May 11	Adirondack Commercial (Malone, N. Y.)	Here
May 14	Rutland High	Here
May 16	Cathedral High	There
May 20	Cathedral High	Here
May 22	Burlington High	There
May 25	Adirondack Com.	There

LYMAN ELECTED CAPTAIN OF VARSITY TRACK TEAM

Outstanding on Campus as an Athlete and has Participated in Numerous Other Extra-Curricula Fields

Corbin C. Lyman, '29, of Middletown Springs, was elected captain of track for this spring to succeed Fred E. Robbins, resigned.

Lyman has been very active in athletics as well as in other campus activities during his college career. He made his letter as a varsity football quarterback the past fall and has been a member of the basketball squad for three years.

He is a member of the outgoing Boulder Society, Pi Delta Rho, and the Student Senate, was advertising manager of the Cynic, chairman of last year's Junior Prom, and has served on several other important student committees. He belongs to the Sigma Phi Fraternity.

Last year Lyman won his track letter as a pole vaulter and this year he is expected to shine in the broad jump and hurdles as well as the pole vault.

Cutest Man Receives Letter

The "Cutest Man" at the University of Maine, was the address on the following letter from a young woman at Athens College for Young Women, Athens, Alabama. The letter was put in the Campus mail box at the college post office.

The letter is as follows:

The Cutest Man at Univ. of Maine.

I am what you might call a lady in distress. It is really a matter of life or death to me. Believe it or not. Why? Well, you know how 'Initiations' are. So please have pity and come to my rescue by sending me some stickers.

Desperately,

SEGAL CAPTAINS 1930 VARSITY HOCKEY TEAM—GIORIA TO BE MANAGER

Coburn and Stevens Chosen Assistant Managers, as Athletic Council Announces Results of Voting

In the hockey elections completed Wednesday, Leo Segal, '31, was elected captain for the 1929-30 season. Americo Gloria '30, was elected manager with D. C. Coburn and K. M. Stevens, both '31, as assistants.

Segal is a member of the Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity. In his freshman year he was a member of the championship freshman football team and last Fall was a star end on the varsity football squad, starting the season as a defense man on the varsity hockey team he was shifted to the center position where he won the honor of being high scorer the past season.

Gloria is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. In his sophomore year he was an assistant editor of the Cynic and at present is a member of the 1930 Ariel board. In addition he was a member of the Gold Key Society.

D. C. Coburn is also a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. He was formerly an assistant editor of the Cynic, and is at present managing editor of the 1930 Ariel. He is also a member of Gold Key.

K. M. Stevens is a member of Phi Mu Delta Fraternity and was on the varsity basketball squad.

PROFESSOR GORDON TO TEACH ANCIENT HISTORY

The course in Ancient History (History 1) will be given in 1929-1930 as a year course by Associate Prof. Arthur K. Gordon. Students who are interested in this course may consult Professor Williamson or Professor Priddy.

Professor Gordon graduated from Dartmouth with the degree of B.A. in 1923. He studied in Europe especially in Italy, during 1924-1925. The next two years he taught ancient history at Dartmouth. Since then he has been a graduate student also instructing in ancient history at Johns Hopkins University, where he expects to take the degree of Ph.D. at the coming Commencement. He will give courses both in ancient history and in the classics.

VERMONT INDEPENDENTS DECIDE TO DO THINGS

[illegible] members pres[illegible] the University of Vermont Independents under the leadership of E M [illegible], decided to pep things up a little.

[illegible] these progressives voted to hold a dance on May 24 during Junior Week. As it is customary for the various fraternities holding dances on that night to visit one another, the Independents as usual will welcome any of the fraternities and may in turn visit them. The members of the dance committees are as follows: Roger S [illegible] the chairman; T A Quinn '30 and R W Martin '31, Refreshment committee; D C Pierce '31, chairman; Program committee; M A Lindsay '31, chairman. These latter two chairmen will appoint the remaining members of their respective committees at a later date. R H Curtiss, '29 was chosen as a committee of one to take care of all other matters, the same arrangement with the faculty, [illegible] etc.

The Independents decided to enter a stunt in the Junior Week Peerade. As it was pointed out the Independents are more numerous than the whole number of the fraternities combined, and it is only fitting that a stunt should be entered. They appointed the following men as a committee to supervise the entering of the stunt in the Junior Week Peerade. G M Donaldson '31, H I Varney '32 and W H Frost '32.

Plans were next made to form a baseball team that would compare favorably with last year's team which lost the interfraternity baseball cup as finalists to the Alpha Tau Omega nine. Several games with outside teams are about to be scheduled preparatory to the interfraternity baseball series, and prospects for a winning aggregation are rapidly materializing.

Refreshments that cheered the heart were then served by a culinary artist of the Independents and another meeting two weeks from the last meeting on May 6 was announced by the officials.

NOTICES

Try-outs for the Kingsley Prize Speaking are due Friday, May 10. Men in the freshman or sophomore class who intend to try out, see Mr. Powers in the "Y" office at once.

Candidates for the freshman tennis team are requested to report at the gym any afternoon at 3 p.m., except Saturday. Prof. Stillwell will coach the frosh team and Frank Shedd, '29, will manage it.

There will be no meeting of the John Dewey Club next Tuesday evening.

Will the person who took the freshman handbook from the desk which was used for Ariel subscriptions in the Old Mill corridor last week please return it at once to Mrs. Pearl Brown in the Y. M. C. A. office. This book is valuable both to the office and to Mrs. Brown.

Eta Sigma Phi will meet April 30 at 8 o'clock in the Old Mill.

The Young People's Fellowship will hold a supper this Sunday night. After the supper there is to be a speaker. The price of the supper is fifteen cents.

FRESHMEN!!

Boulder has decreed that freshmen will not be compelled to wear their frosh caps after Founder's Day. No head covering of any sort is required after Saturday, April 27. This action is in accordance with the custom of usually dispensing with the traditional green and gold cap on Founder's Day.

DEAN SWIFT ANNOUNCES MEETING TO PREPARE A 1930 SOCIAL CALENDAR

There will be a meeting to arrange a preliminary draft of the Social Calendar for the coming year Wednesday, May 1 at 4:15 p.m. in the Deans Office.

The Social Calendar for the past year is posted in the Dean's Office where it may be consulted by any who wish to do so with a view toward improving next year's calendar.

It is proposed to arrange a tentative calendar at this meeting, publish it in the Cynic and post it, making the final draft later in the month.

Please come prepared to offer constructive suggestions and criticisms.

While every organization interested in making this calendar is invited to send a representative, it may be possible to have the same individual represent several organizations and this should be done, when convenient, to avoid too large a meeting.

The following organizations were either represented in the making of the Calendar last year or have given dances this year. Others interested are, of course, also invited to attend:

Men's and Women's Fraternities.
Boulder.
Mortar Board.
Key and Serpent.
Gold Key.
Scabbard and Blade.
Wig and Buskin.

TWENTY-SIX MAKE SCHOLASTIC HONORS

Seventeen Freshmen and Nine Sophomores Place on Semester Honor List With No Grade Below B

MANY ARE PROMINENT IN CAMPUS ACTIVITIES

Seventeen members of the freshman class and nine of the sophomore placed on the scholastic honor list for the semester ending February, 1929, according to announcement by President John W Bailey during the Founder's Day exercises last Saturday.

R B. Barker, Montclair, N. J.; C. K. Bost Sheldon, Vt.; Verna Carrier, Bennington, Vt.; Louise M. Clark, Pittsfield, Mass.; R. T. Conner, Burlington, Vt.; A. O. Eaton, Worcester, Mass.; Lois Harrington, North Bennington, Vt.; Lucy W. Hope, South Royalton, Vt.; F. W. Householder, Jr., Bennington, Vt.; Helen R. LeBaron, Morrisville, Vt.; A. A. Maislen, Hartford, Conn.; M. Elisabeth Mandigo, Randolph, Vt.; Elizabeth Mosher, North Bennington, Vt.; Louise Pearson, Burlington, Vt.; Roberta F. Powers, Morrisville, Vt.; H. I. Varney, Bristol, Vt ; and Margaret A. Watkins, Middlebury, Vt.

1931

R B. Aiken, Burlington; E. A. Gerrish, Burlington; G. B. Hanson, North Craftsbury; C. W. Knapp, Burlington; L. Lisman, Burlington; Esther Mandigo, Richford; Dorothy Nash, Concord, N. H.; Jean Wappler, Rutherford, N. J.; and R. E. Wilson, Woodsboro.

Many Active on Campus

Many of those on the honor lists are prominent in various activities, and this holds true even for the freshmen, whose opportunities in most fields are, so far, very limited.

Sam Barker is a member of Grey Friars, has contributed to the Vermont Literary Magazine, and has just been elected to Gold Key. Allen Eaton is an assistant editor of the Cynic. F. W. Householder, also a member of the Cynic board, has made the freshman debating team and the casts of the fall and Junior Week plays. Helen LeBaron has recently been elected to Bluestockings. Miss Mandigo has been prominent in class athletics. Roberta Powers is on the women's varsity debating team. Varney has just been elected to Gold Key.

Of the sophomore class, Edmour Wilson is a feature editor of the Ariel, is a member of Grey Friars, and is publicity manager for the John Dewey Club and for the Outing Club. Lucius Lisman is a news editor of the Cynic and is Kake Walk editor of the Ariel. He was on the champion freshman and sophomore debating teams and is now a member of the varsity team. He took second prize in the Kingsley Prize Speaking last year and tied for second and third in the Winship Lawrence debate at Middlebury this year. He belongs to Phi Sigma Delta and is a member of Tau Kappa Alpha, Grey Friars and Pi Delta Rho.

Jay Nash has been especially active in musical circles, singing in the Glee Club and choir. In the comic opera "Patience" she was cast for an important part. Miss Nash is a member of Kappa Alpha Chi Omega and has been on class committees.

Jean Wappler is vice-president of the sophomore class and is women's editor of the 1931 Ariel. She is vice-president of Bluestockings, edited the Freshman Handbook last fall, has played varsity hockey, basketball and baseball and belongs to the Dramatic Club. She is a member of the W A A Cabinet, Student Union Cabinet, Kappa Sigma Phi, and was on the Sophomore Hop Committee. She belongs to Kappa Alpha Theta.

Wilson, Knapp, Lisman, Miss Mandigo and Miss Wappler have each made the honor list twice before.

Y. P. F. HOLDS ANNUAL BANQUET AT ST. PAUL'S

The Young People's Fellowship gave its annual banquet Friday night, April 26, at St. Paul's Church.

Rev. Mr. Van Dyke was toastmaster and the speakers were Miss Wilkinson, Dean Patterson, and Dean Hills. A very fine program was rendered. Cornelia Mould, '30, played two piano selections, and Bradford Knight sang. Harvey Butterfield, '31, was chairman of the program.

Lucene Little, '29, is the outgoing president of the Young People's Fellowship, and Harvey Butterfield, 30, is the new president.

HARTWELL SPEAKS ON MEXICAN ILLITERACY

Member of Historical Research Department Traces Background of Mexican History

The illiteracy of the Mexican people, political dependence until a recent time, and "revolutionary elections" were the keynotes of a speech by L. S. Hartwell, of the historical research department of the University of Vermont, before the Brotherhood of the First Church last week.

Mr. Hartwell traced briefly the background of Mexican history in order to show what led up to the revolutions of the past few years in this troubled country. He pointed out that it is a mistake to try to evaluate Mexico on the same basis as the United States because the heritage of the people is so different. Of the approximately 15,000,000 people in Mexico, about 6,000,000 are pure-blooded Indians, about 8,000,000 are of mixed blood, while not more than a million are white.

Up until a few years ago, it was estimated that 80 percent of the people were illiterate. While it is now claimed that considerable progress has been made in the education of the people, even to the present day fully 65 percent of the people are illiterate. Voting has to be done by colored ballots because of this fact.

Mr. Hartwell described the many revolutions which have developed in Mexico and pointed out that it is almost impossible to hold a fair election there, because practically every election is preceded by a revolution which settles supremacy of one candidate, so the election is merely a ratification of that candidate.

Juarez Able

Evaluating some of the political leaders of Mexico, Mr. Hartwell said Juarez was one of the ablest of the 19th century presidents. He gave the country a new constitution in 1857 which introduced the idea of separation of Church and State.

Porfirio Diaz showed considerable ability in increasing the material prosperity of Mexico, but did little or nothing toward advancing the political freedom of the people. Mr. Hartwell said. It was under Diaz, who first came into power in 1877, and was seven times reelected president, that American capital went into Mexico to develop the oil wells.

In fact, so much foreign capital went into Mexico that the people began to fear exploitation at the hands of foreigners and a revolt developed under Madero which forced Diaz out of power in 1911. Madero was elected president, but was assassinated in 1913.

General Huerta, held responsible for Madero's death, held the power for a short time, but was overthrown by a revolt headed by three generals, Carranza, Francisco Villa and Alvara Obregon. Mr. Hartwell said Obregon was the only honest man of the three, the other two being bandit chiefs.

Villa Revolts

Carranza became president, but scarcely had he gotten into power when Villa led a counter-revolt. Carranza was president for three years from 1917 to 1920, when he was assassinated.

Obregon became president in December, 1920, but owing to the claim of Mexico to ownership of oil lands under

VERMONT LOSES GREAT BENEFACTOR BY DEATH OF JAMES B. WILBUR

Donor of Ira Allen Chapel and Statue Passes Away Suddenly in New York—Was Greatest Authority on Vermont History

James Benjamin Wilbur died Sunday after a very brief illness, at his apartment in the Sherry Netherlands Hotel in New York City. Mr. Wilbur was a trustee of this University and is perhaps best known to students as the man who gave the Ira Allen Chapel and the Ira Allen statue.

Mr Wilbur was born seventy-three years ago in Cleveland, Ohio. He was educated in the public schools there. He was a success in business at an early age, and was thus enabled to devote his later years to study of the fields in which he was interested. He retired in 1909 and made his home in Manchester, Vt., where he had one of the finest estates in New England. Three years later he organized the Bennington County Improvement Association. He took an active part also in the formation of the Vermont Farm Bureau, and was one of the chief sponsors of the good roads movement.

Mr Wilbur's especial interest since his retirement was Vermont history, particularly the part played by General Ira Allen. This interest brought him into contact with the University of Vermont for the first time. His gift, in 1921, of the Ira Allen statue, and, in 1927, of the beautiful chapel were results of this interest. His study of the life of Ira Allen led to his publication of two volumes, entitled, "Life of Ira Allen, Founder of Vermont," which is considered the best authority on the subject.

The funeral will be held this afternoon in the Broadway Tabernacle. President Bailey plans to attend.

UNIVERSITY FARM HAS SEVERAL RECORD COWS

Official reports of the production records of cows lately completing tests in the University Farm herd of the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station have just been received from the breed association offices. One of these cows, an Ayrshire named Leto's Brownie Pet, broke the state record for a senior four-year-old cow with her production of 11,903 lbs. of milk containing 461.03 lbs. butterfat. This record was made during a period of 305 days at the age of 4 years, 285 days. Leto's Brownie Pet is a daughter of Brownie Pet that recently finished a 305 day record of 10,556 lbs. milk containing 470.57 lbs. butterfat.

Intervale O. I. V. Dora, a Jersey heifer, has just been awarded the American Jersey Cattle Club silver medal. She was awarded this medal as a result of having produced 7790 lbs. milk containing 442.14 lbs. fat in 305 days at the age of 2 years, 2 months. Dora was purchased from Mrs. W. C. Arms after she had completed the first five months of her test.

Nyando Fayne Segis, a Holstein cow, has completed her 305 day test with a record of 15,381.7 lbs. milk containing 498.54 lbs. fat. Another Holstein cow, Cloverlea Mayflower Echo also recently completed a test with a record of 12,729.3 lbs. milk containing 482.88 lbs. fat made in 305 days.

Other cows in the University Farm herd are being officially tested. Some of these are making records which will undoubtedly excel those already completed.

Prof. James B. Shaw, who teaches algebra to co-eds at the University of Illinois by quoting poetry for them, has written a text-book on his subject "for women and women only."

"I teach mathematics not to impress its use as an engineer's instrument but to make it fascinating so that it will be given proper recognition as a fine art," he says.

His classes are popular with the co-eds and rarely does he admit a male student.

MEMBERS OF MORTAR BOARD ARE NOTIFIED

Alpha Chapter of Mortar Board entertained the newly elected members with breakfast at the Hotel Vermont Saturday morning. Following the Founder's Day exercises there was a brief ceremony on the Ira Allen Chapel steps at which the new members were formally notified of their election and were presented with corsages. The newly elected members are: Dorothy Bailey, Mabel Freemann, Narcissa Goodsell, Beverly Householder, Florence McKenzie, and Joyce Richardson. They succeed Marion Backus, Marion Baldwin, Catherine Bassett, Charlotte Cleveland, Margaret Durick and Lucy Morgan. Dean Marion Patterson gave a luncheon at Robinson Hall for the honorary members and for the old and new chapters.

NEWMAN CLUB HEARS INSTRUCTIVE ADDRESS

U. V. M. Graduate, Rev. R. Joyce, Proves Most Interesting Chaplain in Catholic Club's Long History

At the Sunday evening meeting of the Newman Club Father Joyce, the chaplain of the Club took up the questions of divorce companionate marriage and the moral aspects of dancing and drinking.

It was explained that the laws of the Catholic Church in regard to divorce are only the laws of God which the Church applies and enforces. "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder" was the answer of Christ to a question about the right of divorce. His further words making more clear the fact that divorce and remarriage are always wrong in the sight of God were quoted. Reasons were also brought forward to show that divorce is a serious evil to the state as well as to the individual, in that it ruins the home the foundation of all society, makes impossible the proper bringing up of children and is a cause of discord and domestic difficulties without number.

Separation of husband and wife but without the right to remarry is recognized by the Church for certain grave causes such as infidelity physical abuse or other reasons which make life together intolerable. But the right to remarry cannot be granted under any circumstances, since that is contrary to the divine law. In rare cases only can a Catholic obtain a civil divorce, where that is necessary to protect important rights. It was pointed out that company keeping with a divorced person or with a divorced person is also wrong since the status as a married person is not changed.

Church and Divorce

It was explained that there is no [illegible] granted at times by the Church and a real divorce. An annulment is an official decree declaring that a union which was supposed to have been a valid marriage never was really a marriage because of some invalidating impediment which existed from the beginning. The proofs required to show this invalidity in each case and the cases where the Church declares a marriage invalid will the Church declare a marriage invalid ways to have been here and now.

In answer to questions asked by the members it was pointed out that drinking and dancing are not immoral in themselves, and when properly used are in no sense sinful. Christ Himself used wine and it is still used in the greatest sacrament in the Church. Both drinking and dancing may be sinful if abused or if they become the occasions for other wrong doing. The question of obedience to civil law also was raised, and the doctrine of the Church was stated to be that a Catholic is in conscience obliged to render obedience to the laws of the state. Christ and St. Paul insisted upon this obligation and the Church considers herself a bulwark for the support of the civil government because of her insistence upon the virtues for true citizenship.

WOMEN DEBATERS MEET MIDDLEBURY

Vermont Co-Eds Close Official Season With Annual Tilt—Goodrich, Hawley and Powers to Speak on Jury Question

DEBATE COMES OFF TONIGHT IN OLD CHAPEL

Tonight, at eight o'clock, in the Old Mill Chapel the University of Vermont women's debating team will strive to conquer the Middlebury women in the last scheduled debate of the season. The Middlebury women will uphold the present American jury system and their opponents will attempt to persuade the judges that it should be abolished.

The U. V. M. team is composed of Janice Goodrich '30 Frances Howley, '29, and Roberta Powers, '32. The Middlebury debaters are Helen Perry '30 Ellen Kellogg, '31 and Mary Hemenway '31.

Janice Goodrich was vice-president of the 1928 Women's Student Union and was women's editor of the 1930 Ariel. At present she is a member of Bluestockings, of the Cynic, of Tau Kappa Alpha honorary debating society and is editor-in-chief of the 1929 Vermont Literary Magazine. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta.

Frances Howley also a Tri Delt is on the women's varsity hockey team and plays on the class basketball and baseball teams. She belongs to the Dramatic Club, the 1929 Student Union Cabinet and is on the Senior Week Committee.

CO-ED RIFLE TEAM PICKS CAPTAIN AND MANAGER

Elizabeth Rodgers '30 and Frances Hazen '30 were elected captain and manager respectively of the Women's Rifle team at a business meeting held Friday afternoon. The retiring manager, Edna Shaw '29, gave a report on the matches which have been shot this year. The Vermont team has been undefeated in all of her matches except the most recent of 1928 which was that shot against Capt. Lamson's Company A squad, 17th Infantry, Fort Crook, Nebraska. The local squad won by a score of 1013 to 1008, thus denying us a second victory over the team from Fort Crook. Marion Hodgkins is to be the incoming captain of the team and shooter.

Elizabeth Rodgers belongs to Kappa Alpha Theta and is a member of many athletic teams including hockey, basketball and class baseball.

The new manager, Frances Hazen has been on hockey and baseball and basketball teams. She belongs to the Dramatic Club and served on the Freshman Hop Committee, as well as the 1930 Junior Week Committee.

Announcement was made today that Wilbur Hammler of Fredonia, N. Y., a junior at Amherst College, had been awarded the Percival Wood Clement prize of $100 given annually for the best essay in support of the Constitution of the United States and its form of government. The prize was established by the will of the late Governor Percival W Clement of Vermont.

Does It Pay to Renege?

Some time ago an article appeared in the Communications column lamenting the fact that the Vermont R. O. T. C. Band did not play at more basketball games. The writer was quite frank in admitting that the band did lend pep to the cheering and singing, and wanted to hear more from them as long as such a meritorious organization existed. Upon investigation, though, it was later found out that the band had not even been asked to play at the basketball contests. At those few games when its presence was noted, it was purely optional on their part whether or not they played at all.

The point is: Vermont has an exceptionally fine band. It is given a high rating throughout the state and among the eastern colleges. But is it appreciated? A concert was given in the Burlington Memorial Auditorium last Saturday evening, a concert sponsored by the Scabbard and Blade Society and followed by a dance. Forty-one people were at the concert. However much it may seem, there were forty-two pieces in the band. At this sort of performance, the band must feel inspired, must feel like putting their best into it, must want to play again. Such performances decrease the morale of the organization, reduces the conduct of members, and kills interest. Yet, paradoxical as it is, some people will continue to wonder why it doesn't play at more athletic contests.

Like every public entertainer, the band wants to play only where its music is appreciated. Surely, its music is of the quality meriting appreciation. That has been proved. But did you stop to think the band members themselves do not care to play for athletics when their time and efforts are not properly recognized?

The band arouses pep at our athletic games; it literally "puts over" Rake Walk; finally, it advertises the University by virtue of its trips to various parts of the state and to other colleges. But you, who wanted to hear it so badly at the basketball games, were you present at the concert which was given more especially for the student body? Does it pay to renege?

James Benjamin Wilbur

The regret of the University student body, its administration, faculty and friends cannot be expressed in print at the passing of one of Vermont's ablest and most active proponents, Hon. James Benjamin Wilbur of Manchester, Vt. The mention made by Dean Hicks only last Saturday in the Ira Allen Chapel at the Founder's Day exercises of the generosity, kindness, unceasing research by Mr. Wilbur makes his sudden death all the more startling.

Mr. Wilbur besides being a trustee of the University has done more than any other individual to credit Ira Allen, founder of Vermont, the state and University, with his just due. Only last year a two-volume edition concerning the life of Ira Allen was published after years of painstaking research by its author, Mr. Wilbur. The statue of Ira Allen at the head of College Street was given by Mr. Wilbur in 1921. The beautiful Ira Allen Chapel is a more recent evidence of the generosity of this man who was so vitally interested in the University and its founder. With sincere sorrow do we then lament the passing of this most benevolent Vermonter.

The rights of a man over his fellows can be founded only on the happiness which he procures for them, or the hope which he gives them cause to hope. No mortal receives from nature the right to command. The authority which the father exercises over his family is founded on the advantages which he is supposed to bestow upon it. Ranks in political society have their basis in real or imaginary utility. The rich man has rights over the poor man solely by virtue of the well-being which he may bestow upon him. Genius, talents, art, and skill have claims only on account of the pleasant and useful things with which they furnish society. To be virtuous is to make people happy.—HOLBACH.

U. V. M. DEBATING TEAM DEFEATS ST. MICHAEL'S—TIES FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Wins by 2-1 Decision in State Series Tilt—Jury Question, as Usual, Furnishes Subject for Forensic Engagement

Vermont's debaters downed the Winooski haranguers April 26 after prolonged arguing by the vote of two to one. The question on which the Vermonters proved their superiority was "Resolved: that the American jury system should be abolished. The judges who weighed the arguments presented were Attorney George L. Agel, local attorney, Secretary Harry L. Ford of the Burlington Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Adrian E. Holmes, instructor in the Burlington High School.

Speaking for Vermont were Nelson, Lisman, and Sears. Representing St Michael's spoke Couture, Bartlett, and Fortin.

As usual, Mr. Dean of the English department acted as chairman, welcoming St. Mike's to Vermont in his perfect way. The debate, he explained, was on the Oxford style, wherein all speakers had fifteen minutes of combined construction and rebuttal, save the first speaker for the affirmative, who has ten minutes for constructive argument at the start of the debate, and five of rebuttal at the close.

Nelson, who filled that position, arose, and welcomed the lads from Winooski Park on behalf of the team, wishing to them, also, a better return trip than Vermont had last year, when the condition of the roads and bridges compelled them to sleep, en smoking, but without the smokes, in a hay barn.

Quoting Mencken, he next proceeded to explain the question. "It is not the twelve good and true morons in the jury box that we debate, but rather all the red tape and the restrictions and inefficiencies that inevitably throttle fair and equitable justice, which are inherently tied up with the jury." Again, the jury is not a cross-section of the people, as evidence all the exemptions, which eliminate the intelligent from jury duty. A judge, however, is a just representative of the people, and above all, one who won't fall for the "Fireman save my child" system. Don't, said Nelson, fall for the democracy gag; in short, "Don't be like that."

Couture, countering for St Michael's, sibilantly denied the technicalities' connection with the subject, said that exemptions could be changed, and affirmed a great human tendency to tyranny.

The jury is the people's check on tyranny; and it administers fair justice. To abolish it would undermine the constitution. The very basis of democracy is checks and balances. Abolition of jury means return of tyranny.

Lisman again explained the question, then went on to show the jury to be hopelessly inefficient. He recalled the exemptions of capable men from service. A New York investigation and the records of the law courts indicated the jury as the root of all injustice, of the laws' delays, its expense and miscarriages.

He backed up his case with quotations and statistics to show the evils of the system inherent in the jury. To abolish only some of these evils would produce an even more hopeless situation than at present. Therefore,

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In regard to a recent letter which appeared in Campus Comment, I shall have to admit that if Thomas Harlow Morton, '29, chooses to take offense at a well-meant explanation, he is technically correct. Somewhere in the past, one Owl was President of the John Dewey Club, and another's name did appear as Humor Editor of the Literary Magazine.

But a year, or two years, make big changes in the personnel of a college organization. As a member of the John Dewey Club who has been fortunate enough to attend every meeting of that organization during the present college year, and as a member of the Editorial Board of the Literary Magazine which has just ended its labors, I must state that it would be a gross misrepresentation to the student body to let the article, as it appeared in College Humor, go unchallenged. For during the past year the year which college students at present remember most vigorously—I can assure you that no Owl took any active part in either organization, with the single exception of a member of the present Literary Magazine Board. It seems to me that a good-natured correction was not out of order, when conditions of a year and a half ago were passed off as present conditions.

If Mr. Morton wishes to continue to claim doubtful and misleading honors for his fraternity, let him. I marvel, however, that such a great organization as both Mr. Morton and College Humor admit the Owls to be would stoop to such a petty disputation. But when he lets loose the vials of fraternity wrath upon the supposed non-fraternity critic, he is merely doing him an honor. He implies that the "gentleman reviewer" is one who is content with the laurels that he can earn, and needs no fraternity to claim doubtful honors in his behalf.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE FINALLY STARTED

Large Enthusiastic Squad Appears for Opening Sessions—Adverse Weather Conditions Cause Shift in Schedule

GREEN-BLACK JERSEY GAME TO BE FEATURE

Summer has at last smiled upon the football squad, and they have been able to put in a couple of sessions of practice for the last two or three weeks. Coach Rattan has been trying to get his men together, but up until last week he has been unable to do so because of inclement weather and because of the death of Manager Macomber's mother.

Rattan seems to be quite enthusiastic over the squad's appearance on these first few nights of practice. Over forty men have reported and these include many of last fall's first eleven, as well as some of the most promising of the yearling squad. It is too early to pick out any individuals who stand out above the rest of the squad but with the passing of the few weeks that remain for practice, it should be possible for the coaches to choose some of the most prominent players and in a rough way get a line on who's who in the group and thus eliminate a lot of unnecessary work in the fall.

Green Jerseys vs. Black Jerseys

These practice sessions are scheduled to last from the present time until the latter part of May, when there will be a contest between the "Green Jerseys" and the "Black Jerseys." This practice game will be the first spring football game at Vermont, and a great deal of interest should be aroused because of this fact. If this innovation proves to be successful, it may become a regular feature of the spring athletic schedule. There is no doubt but that springfield football will be a complete success, not only because of the interest shown in it but because it provides some form of athletics to those not taken up with baseball or track. Without a doubt, the practice will be continued during the years to come.

U. V. M. Debating Team Defeats St. Michael's

you must abolish the whole system.

Bartlett, a personable speaker, quoted Hoover on the crime situation. Tyranny, he went on, does exist. More, it is not the jury's fault that criminals are not brought to justice. Technicalities of law are no part of the jury system. Sharp lawyers who introduce legal complications could not be eliminated by the jury's abolition.

A judge may be influenced by a political machine, but not a jury. There lies tyranny. The people may tyrannize by false accusations. A grand jury though would cast them aside. Education is not wisdom. A jury needs only common sense, honesty, and moral responsibility. The average man has those. A juryman, if uneducated, is not narrow or partial.

You let the people vote; then let them judge.

Sears answered that. Technicalities, he said, are a part of the present system. Further, your sharp lawyers won't fool an experienced old judge, as they will a jury. As to tyranny, the negative had as yet failed to indicate a single possible source that we need fear.

The judge has proved his worth in many courts in many lands. We base our substitute plan on the judge. For criminal cases, and civil cases of less than a hundred dollars, one judge, sitting alone, will suffice. For other civil cases, in addition to the judge, we will choose for each case two assistants, one to be a junior member of the bar, the other an expert business man in the particular line of business connected with the case. A judge has numerous advantages over a jury. He must safeguard his reputation; but nobody will trouble the jury if their verdict is unjust. Moreover, by training and experience, he is certainly far more capable of judging.

Fortin, a lovely alto, closed the case for the negative. A few evils in a system are no reason for its abolition. Again, emotions are inherent in human nature: a judge would be swayed as much as a jury. Three men sitting on a case? Tyranny in its worst form! The supreme court can't protect against tyranny; we need the jury. A judge would be biased in favor of some of his friends, but not a jury.

Instead of doing away with the American jury system, we suggest the adoption of it as it exists in England.

In résumé, the jury is not the cause of evils; its faults can be remedied.

On the floor for a final five minutes, Nelson denied the jury to be a jury of equals, and affirmed he had heard no concrete example of tyranny in the whole debate. He reaffirmed the superiority of the judge over the jury.

Vermont has now defeated both Norwich and St. Michael's and has lost to Middlebury. St. Michael's has also defeated Norwich and Middlebury as well. The defeat of the Michaelmen at the hands of Vermont and the recent victory of Norwich over Middlebury now ties St. Michael's and Vermont for the state championship. This will necessitate an off-campus debate to decide the final winner.

CAT'S MEOW

—SPORTING EDITOR—

"Lefty" Cummings who pitched for the Jay Vees last Saturday reminded the fans of "Big Chief" Fogg, former varsity captain who will be seen in the box Saturday for the Medics.

Cummings has a world of stuff on the ball, plenty of speed, and wonderful control. He's just what the Cats need but the transfer rule is holding him until next year.

At the Thirty-fifth Annual Penn Relays last Friday and Saturday Nurmi smashed the American 2 mile mark by covering the distance in 9 minutes, 15⅘ seconds. He also took the 3 mile invitation grind. New England first place winners were: Dartmouth, one-mile college relay; Black of Maine, special hammer throw; Boston University, third college class one-mile relay.

Won and lost, with Vermont opponents in italics:

Tufts 3, Bates 1
Providence 14, Norwich 1
Dartmouth 2, Columbia 1
Boston College 17, Springfield 2
Norwich 4, Worcester Tech 3
Conn. Aggies 7, Maine 6
Springfield 10, Mass. Aggies 4
Temple 7, Dartmouth 2
Harvard 11, Springfield 3
Amherst 7, Mass. Aggies 3
Columbia 4, Williams 3.
Fordham 6, New York U. 3
Providence 9, Conn. Aggies 3.
Tufts 12, Wesleyan 2.

Holy Cross have an off day when defeated 3 to 1 by Princeton last Wednesday. That was a real upset and gave Providence hope, but the Rhode Island team had to take an 11 to 0 beating at the hands of the Crusaders even with the great Wineapple on the mound.

Tufts received one of her worst setbacks recorded in the history of track at the Medford institution when it was defeated by Northeastern University 107 to 28 at the Tufts' Oval last week.

Norwich was defeated by Conn. Aggies on the track Saturday by the close 69 to 66 score for the opening meet of the track schedule. The meet was originally scheduled at Storrs, but the new Aggie track has not yet been completed and the meet was transferred to Northfield.

The tennis match scheduled with St. Michael's for May 6 will not be played if the smallpox quarantine is still in force at Winooski Park.

CUMMINGS HOLDS VARSITY SCORELESS

Jay Vees Ahead 1 to 0 With Star Pitcher in Box, But Varsity Wins 4 to 1 Toward End

INELIGIBLE ACE STRIKES OUT REGULARS EASILY

With "Lefty" Cummings on the mound the junior varsity baseball team held the varsity nine scoreless for the major part of the practice game played Saturday on Centennial Field but lost by a 4 to 1 score when Foster took the mound toward the end of the fray.

All the varsity could do was watch Cummings breeze over the third strikes. Cummings himself hit a triple and came home on a single for the only Jay Vee score of the game.

As soon as Foster took over the pitching duties the first team got to him for hit after hit and scored a quartet of tallies in two innings.

In the field the regulars looked good, and the pitching was effective. When they started to hit, the balls were too hard for the seconds, and as a result Coach Gardner's outfit came out on top.

Captain Macomber played first for the juniors and Stroh and Kendall caught. For the first team McBride and Rutkowski twirled with Young behind the bat.

FRESHMAN HEALTHIER THAN AVERAGE SENIOR

According to Dr. Dean E. Smiley head of the Department of Hygiene and Preventative Medicine at Cornell University, the health of college students tends downward from the time they enter college as freshmen until they leave.

Dr. Smiley explains this by saying that each year a student is in college he becomes less and less care of himself. The doctor has arrived at three reasons for this. The first is that the influence of home and mother is greatly strong for good health habits and good mental balance. The longer a student is away from that influence, the less he feels its effect. The second cause holds that student life has for many years been notable for its neglect of the ordinary hygienic laws. There are too many "bull sessions" lasting far into the morning and far many bouts of excessive drinking.

The third cause mentioned by Dr. Smiley is that a fair number of college students are attempting the physical impossibility of doing the work of two men, living the life of a day laborer to earn a living and the life of a student to acquire an education.

It will probably be many years in the future, says Dr. Smiley, before any college will be able to boast of a senior class with a better upkeep rating than its freshman class.

"We are now passing the most famous brewery in Berlin," exclaimed the guide.

"We are not," replied the American college boy, as he hopped off the sight-seeing bus.—M. I. T. Voo Doo.

Installment Education

Installment education seems to be keeping pace with the general clamor to consume. The National Bureau of Education reports that $4,000,000 are annual amounts to students in our universities. If we add loans granted by other colleges and to non-students the total would undoubtedly be nearer ten million.

A vision come true

In a part of Africa little known to the whites, where obscure trails ran, Cecil Rhodes dared to envision a railroad. He lived to build it.

The railroad itself was part of a vaster dream, a dream of a far inland colony linked fast to existing coast settlements by rail and wire communication. And he lived to build Rhodesia.

First the dream, then the reality, is the rule with telephone men too, as they work to greater heights of service. But in between, they know, must come periods of careful planning and smooth coordination of many elements.

Scientific research, manufacturing, plant construction, commercial development, public relations, administration—many varied telephone activities offer a widening opportunity to practical-minded visionaries.

Bob" is a member of Alpha Tau Omega and is president of the present junior class. He has been president of Gold Key, made Key and Snake last year and is a member of Student Senate. Lawrence is a star guard on the hockey team and is assistant manager of baseball. His home is in West Lebanon, N. H.

HERRICK M. MACOMBER

Manager of football is Herrick's latest acquisition. He is a managing editor of the Cynic and was associate editor of the 1930 Ariel. Herrick Macomber is president of Tau Kappa Alpha, honorary debating fraternity, is president of Wig and Buskin, honorary dramatic society, is secretary of Student Senate and holds membership in Pi Delta Rho and in Grey Friars. He has held membership in Gold Key and in Key and Snake, won the Kingsley Prize Speaking in his freshman year and has been on the varsity debating team. In addition, his scholastic ability has won him a place on the honor roll every semester since his entrance to college. His home is in Burlington and he belongs to Delta Psi Fraternity.

JAMES C. PUFFER

"Jimmy" comes from St. Johnsbury and is a member of Kappa Sigma. He is business manager of the Cynic and is manager of freshman football. His achievements include the directorship of the 1930 Kake Walk and the assistant managership of tennis. He has claimed membership in Gold Key, is rounding out his term in Key and Serpent, belongs to Pi Delta Rho and is in Student Senate.

ALBERT G. SIROIS

"Al" was president of his class his sophomore year and has played star end on both the freshman and varsity football teams. In addition to serving on many important class committees, "Al" has made Gold Key and Key and Snake. His popularity is justly earned. Sirois is a member of Sigma Nu and lives in Andover, Mass.

the new constitution adopted in 1917, was not recognized by the United States until 1923. Obregon restored property rights to the people and started in to pay Mexico's debts. He also insisted that what remained of Mexico's natural resources should be retained for the benefit of Mexicans. This did not please foreigners who had money invested there.

The approach of a new election toward the close of 1923 started another revolution, headed by Adolfo de la Huerta, Sanchez and Laurens, who attempted to set up a provisional government. They were defeated by Obregon, who supported the candidacy of Plutarco Calles, former minister of the interior, who was inaugurated president of Mexico in November, 1924. Calles was the first president of Mexico to come from the common people. He had been a schoolmaster.

Mexico and Catholicism

Mr. Hartwell touched briefly upon the trouble which arose between the Mexican government and the Catholic Church, because of the fact that Calles set out to strictly enforce the religious laws in Mexico. He said that as a result, most of the priests left Mexico. While Mexico is generally considered more than 90 percent Catholic the real facts of the case are that the people still cling to their old Aztec religion, he said he himself believed.

Mr. Hartwell spoke briefly of the present provisional president of Mexico, Emilio Portes Gil, known as "The Roosevelt of Mexico." He is a young man, only 37 years of age, and a reformer. He neither smokes nor drinks which is very unusual in a country where practically everybody drinks intoxicants regularly.

AWARD HOWARD PRIZES FOR ENTRANCE EXAMS

Mrs. Hannah T. Howard [illegible] ton left by will $1,200 [illegible] which is annually awarded. From this income three [illegible] each are awarded to men of the freshman class who pass the entrance examination in [illegible] and Mathematics. In addition to the foregoing prizes, an additional [illegible] to the amount of $5 is given anonymously to the person who passes the second best examination. This year the prizes are awarded as follows:

Greek: Natalie Ella [illegible] prepared at St. Mary's Academy, Burlington, Vt.

Latin, 1st: Margaret Arline [illegible] kins, prepared at Lyndon [illegible], Lyndon Center, Vt.; 2nd: [illegible] Clark, prepared at Turners Falls High School, Turners Falls, Mass.

Mathematics: Fred Wallace [illegible] holder, Jr., prepared at Burlington High School, Burlington, Vt.

Again we have one about a Scotsman who was invited to a party. He told that each guest was to bring something.

He brought his relatives. — Lantern.

Absent-minded Business Man (writing his wife): Now, dear, I will dictate a couple of letters.—Kitty Kat.

The present revolution seems to have developed in the northern part of the country and is apparently being crushed, with the exception of the province of Sonora in the northwest. There is no apparent reason for the revolution except that some of the leaders desired to get in power, Mr. Hartwell said.

WHY CAMELS ARE THE BETTER CIGARETTE

The Camel blend of choice Turkish and Domestic tobaccos has never been equaled.

This blend produces a delightful mildness and mellowness.

Camels are always uniform in quality.

You can smoke Camels freely without tiring your taste.

They do not leave a cigaretty after-taste.

Camels are a refreshing and satisfying smoke.

VERMONT WOMEN SEND MIDDLEBURY DEBATERS DOWN TO 3-0 DEFEAT

Powers, Howley and Goodrich Secure Unanimous Decision of Judges Against Traditional Rivals

JURY SYSTEM IS AGAIN SOURCE OF CONTENTION

Vermont Demands Retention of Present System in Well-Contested Affair Tuesday Night

Vermont's co-ed debaters last Tuesday came through with a unanimous decision over the Middlebury women. Again the debate was on the jury question. "Resolved: That the American jury system should be abolished." Again the smiling Prof. Dean presided. This time the debate was held on the American plan; each woman having a main speech of ten minutes with a rebuttal speech of five after the conclusive arguments. It was however continuous, there being no intermission. "The show," as the chairman remarked, "goes on." The judges of this debate were District Attorney Harry D. Amey of Vermont, Miss M. Agnes McPhillips, instructor in Public Speaking at Burlington High School, and the Rev. Harvey F. Connor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Burlington.

Middlebury, which upheld the affirmative of the question, was represented by Helen Perry, Mary Henseler, and Ellen Kellogg, speaking in the order named. Debating on the behalf of Vermont were Roberta Powers—a new debater—Frances Howley and Janice Goodrich.

Helen Perry, as first speaker for Middlebury, accepted Vermont's welcome and extended an invitation for future debates. She then stated the case for the affirmative. The jury system, she said, contains certain social evils. It has outworn its original purpose, protection, and is no longer needed. The judge, experienced though he be, is now held powerless. The obtainance of justice is the only trust regularly placed in the hands of amateurs. Jurymen, as a class, are of poor caliber.

Not Worth the Change

Roberta Powers, answering for Vermont, said that even were the justice obtained by the change as good, which is doubtful, it would not be worth the trouble and expense of the change. We shudder even to think of it! The legal system, court procedure must be changed; many constitutions amended, many laws repealed, and the people shut out of their hold on the judiciary.

Mary Henseler took exception to the preceding speaker's shudders, one of which was at the abolition of the grand jury. She said the question did not include the grand jury. Juries, she remarked, are untrained; judges are not. Under the present system years are often wasted in vain efforts to obtain justice. We consider it unjust to restrict the judge, who has so much of experience and training on his side. It is an economic waste to use men as jurymen—positions for which they are not trained. Moreover, the jury system is a costly waste of money.

Frances Howley affirmed that the grand jury was evidently part of the "jury system." The jury, she went on, does work with relative perfection. Education does not mean wisdom. We want the ordinary man on the jury. He may have his prejudices, but so has everybody, including the judge. A judge may become technical, hardened, but a jury stays humane. Great authorities state that the jury gives a high percentage of just decisions. Indeed, last, delay in impaneling is due, not to the jury, but to the lawyers who misuse their powers.

Justice by Judges

Ellen Kellogg, continuing for the affirmative, still refused to consider the grand jury a jury. In giving her

UNION OPENS CATS' TRACK SEASON HERE

Vermont Strong in Field but New York Outfit Has Decided Edge in Running Events

PARK AND LYMAN LOOK GOOD FOR FIRST PLACES

Vermont's track team will get into action for the first time this spring when it clashes with the Union College team at Centennial Field tomorrow. Union is reported to have a strong, well-balanced outfit and with the Catamounts showing up true to form, a track meet as closely contested as the heart of any track follower would desire is sure to take place.

Vermont, weakened considerably from the loss by ineligibility of Freddy Robbins, star letterman of last year's team, will be weaker than Union in the running events, but should give the opposing runners some stiff opposition. Berry and Morse look good to place in the century and 220, while Lyman should come through in the hurdles. Woodward and Huey, two experienced runners, have been displaying good form in daily practice and ought to come through in the 440, with Maynes breaking the tape in the mile-run, and Bjorn out to cop the 880 event, Union will have to exert itself to keep up its reputation as a strong running team.

Vermont is unusually strong in the field events, however, and Park, one of the best weight throwers on last year's team, will be a real threat to the visitors who are rather weak in this department. There is no reason why he should not take first place in the discus as well as placing in the shot, and javelin. Other weight men are Mace, Kropper, Mackay, Flagg and Bolles.

Several freshmen have materially strengthened this year's team. Although a number of them have not had any previous experience in actual competition, they are being depended upon to give an excellent account of themselves. Wilder, who won the freshman cross-country meet with Middlebury last fall, is expected to place in the two-mile run as he has been making good time in practice. In the pole vault Lyman and Meehan are easily clearing the bar at ten feet, while Bove, Mace, and Child are slated to enter the broad jump.

In the high jump Lyman and Franceschi will compete with the visitors. Both of these men should place in this event. Woodward, Crockett, and Bombardier will probably make a stab at this event.

There is no doubt but what Vermont should edge the visitors in the field events, and if Coach Aldrich's proteges come through with a little something in the running events, Vermont should carry off the laurels of victory.

The hammer throw has been eliminated from the list of events which are as follows: 100-yard dash, 220 yard dash, 440-yard dash, 880-yard run, 1-mile run, 2-mile run, 220-yard low hurdles, 120-yard high hurdles, running high jump, running broad jump, pole vault, discus throw, javelin throw, shot put.

The failure to secure sufficient sleep is one of the growing evils of American undergraduates, states President Livingston Farrall of Cornell.

CONFERENCE DECISION FAVORS NOVEMBER 18 TO OPEN 1929 RUSHING

Interfraternity Council Adopts Tentative Date in Compliance With Request of Athletic Council

MEETING CONSIDERS PHI SIGMA DELTA PETITION

Luciani, Patton and Robbins Named to Consider Membership Request of Local Branch of National Fraternity

At the meeting of the Interfraternity Council of the University of Vermont held last Wednesday night tentative plans for changing the rushing season were drawn up. The plans favored changing the time of the rushing season until the date of November 18, at which time there is no conflict with important football games. This brings the rushing season before Thanksgiving Day, after the Middlebury game has been played, and almost two weeks before the last game of the season with Springfield.

These plans, it is believed, will meet with the approval of the Athletic Council who are anxious to ensure closer cooperation among the football players of the varsity team, and the freshman team also.

The plans, having met the approval of the members of the Interfraternity Council, are to be presented to the Athletic Council, and a report of their views will be read at the next meeting which will be held in the near future.

These tentative plans, it is easily seen will aid materially the unity and spirit of the football teams. For, as was the case last year and in previous years, rushing nights were decidedly detrimental to a rigorous course of football training, without which a team is not at its best.

At the same meeting the Interfraternity Council took up the petition of Phi Sigma Delta, a Jewish fraternity founded in 1928, to enter as a member of the Conference. The following committee was chosen by the members to report at another meeting on the petition of the aforementioned fraternity: A. A. Luciani, '29, chairman; W. J. Patton, '30; and F. E. Robbins, '30.

VERMONT TO SPONSOR HIGH SCHOOL CONTEST

The annual state high school cattle judging contest will be held at the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College under the auspices of the Association of Vermont Agricultural Teachers on Friday, May 17.

The contest will be open to all students in Agriculture who have been regularly enrolled in a high school in Vermont for at least twelve consecutive weeks of the school year in which the contest takes place, and who qualify under headmasters' rules. The teacher may have his entire class judge at the contest if he so desires, but must designate five students who are to represent his school in the competition. Only the highest three scores of these five will be counted for each school in each class.

Each team must judge one ring each of mature cows and heifers in the following classes: Ayrshires, Holsteins, Guernseys, Jerseys. Four animals constitute a ring. Each animal shall be given a number and be placed in order of merit. Fifteen minutes shall be allowed for placing individuals of each class. All placings shall be written on score cards furnished by the Association and the judging shall be on the basis of score cards and suggestions furnished by the College of Agriculture.

The boys having the highest ten scores will be entitled to enter a second contest held at the Champlain Valley Fair this fall. The four boys with highest scores will be entitled to go to the National Dairy Judging Contest in St. Louis, October 14.

Professor F. B. Jenks of the University State Supervisor of Agricultural Education, is in charge of the contest.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT INDICATES SURPLUS IN MORTAR BOARD DANCE

Reports Favorable Balance of Eighty-Six Dollars in Affair Sponsored by Women's Honorary

A favorable balance of $86.65 resulted from the Mortar Board dance on April 13, according to a financial report just released by the auditor of student finances. Administration authorities advance the following statement "as an offset against the financial statement of the Sophomore Hop."

Financial Statement

MORTAR BOARD DANCE

April 13, 1929

Receipts
137 couples at $1.25		$171.25
Expenses
Rent of H. S. Gym	$25.00
Orchestra	35.00
Refreshments	13.00
Printing	6.10
Decorations	2.50
Police Duty	3.00
Total		84.60
Balance		$86.65

The greatest points of discrepancy between the expenditures for the Mortar Board dance and for the Sophomore Hop lay in the $70 orchestra, the $23 decorations and the item of $8[illegible] for favors for the latter. Rental of the gym amounted to but $20 at the Sophomore formal, while total receipts were $27 less than at the Mortar Board affair.

PROFESSOR LADD TELLS OF WAR EXPERIENCES

How he was condemned to die during the early days of the World War and was set free at the hour for his execution was told by Professor B. F. Ladd, associate professor of German, last Tuesday at the Lions Club luncheon at the Hotel Vermont.

It was at Kiel in Germany. He went there to study the language. Suspected of being a spy, he was placed in a cell and told he would die at 2.30. Realizing that sane judgment often goes by the board in war time, Professor Ladd prepared for his last. Two guards came in, one about ten minutes after the other, each giving him no hope. At the appointed time an officer entered. But it was to tell him he would not be executed. It seems that his University identification card had saved him.

Professor Ladd taught English and studied German at the University of Kiel for many months during the war. At a previous talk to the Lions, he recounted other experiences in Germany.

William Bland Speaks to Students in Absence of "Dad" Clark at the Meeting in Methodist Church Vestry

Election of the officers of the University Y. M. C. A. for next year were held in the vestry of the Methodist Church on April 24. The officers elected were as follows: President, H. D. Butterfield, '31; Vice-President, M. A. Duval, '30; Secretary, J. C. Carter, '32. Treasurer, W. J. Brock, 3d; Editor-in-Chief of the Freshman Handbook, H. R. Mattison, '31; Business manager of the Freshman Handbook, H. S. Corbin, '31.

The speaker of the evening was Mr. William Bland who is taking the place of "Dad" Clark as state secretary of the Y. M. C. A. during the latter's illness. He reviewed what the organization had done for the sufferers of the World War, its present activities in missionary work in the old countries, its work of relief in the Near East and its possibilities in the future. He outlined the work that a college organization of this kind ought to do and offered to give suggestions to those interested in furthering the work of the "Y" here at the University of Vermont.

After Mr. Bland's talk, George Bond the president of the "Y" at the University opened the business meeting.

Among those elected to office are many who have made a name for themselves on the campus by their extra-curricular activities.

H. D. Butterfield was president of his class during his freshman year, and has also served on numerous class committees. He is on the 1931 Ariel Board and is an officer in Wig and Buskin. Mr. Butterfield made a trip to Boston last Saturday to attend a conference for the newly-elected presidents of the college Christian Associations in New England. His fraternity is Phi Delta Theta.

M. A. Duval is vice-guardian of Grey Friars. He is also an active member of the John Dewey Club and of the International Relations Club. He was chairman of the Smalley Campaign last fall and of the International Institute this spring. He served for two years as assistant editor of the Cynic and was on several class committees. He has been very active in Y. M. C. A. work ever since his coming to college.

J. C. Carter is a member of Grey Friars and has been active in literary activities during the whole year.

W. J. Brock has been doing much work for the "Y" and has been quite active in the religious circles of the city.

Editor of the Handbook is only one of the many honors of H. R. Mattison. He is business manager of the 1931 Ariel, assistant editor of the Cynic, a member of Pi Delta Rho, the honorary journalistic society and was on the sophomore debating team this year. He belongs to Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

S. H. Corbin is assistant business manager of the Cynic and has served on numerous class committees. He is a member of Delta Psi Fraternity.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Dean entertained the members of Press Club at their home on South Prospect Street Monday afternoon, at 4.00 o'clock. Following the brief business meeting there was a social hour. Dainty refreshments were served. Florence McKenzie, '30, the new president of Press Club, poured.

Many a Ph.D. has flunked the blindfold test. Nevertheless they can safely be defended against the charges of O. G. Our intelligence department tried them and found them not guilty.

KINGSLEY PRIZE SPEAKING—VINTAGE OF 1929

There was once a day when artificiality prevailed in all educational methods. That day is gone. And with it has gone that pet subject of the Victorian curriculum—the study of evolution. The stilted expressions, the fixed gestures, the artificial inflections of "elocution" are most things of the past. We glory in the fact as a sign of our "progressivism." The modern tendency is towards naturalness and spontaneity in everything.

The modern tendency, however, is also towards glib aphorism. "There is no easy road to learning," says the modern collegian, and leans back in his easy chair to smoke his Old Gold and take it easy.

"True eloquence," said Daniel Webster many years ago, "must exist in the man. Affected passion, intense expression, the pomp of declamation, all may aspire after it—they can not reach it."

"Right!" says the collegian. "If I haven't got it in me, why work?" And in his smug complacency, he will not even try to determine whether or not he possesses the requisite quality for the occasion.

Darwin P. Kingsley, of the class of '81 and a trustee of the University, has established three prizes for the best annual renditions of oratorical prose by men in the freshman and sophomore classes. The contest has always been looked up to as a major event of the year and a Kingsley prize has always been a coveted award.

What's the matter this year, gentlemen of the freshman and sophomore classes? Not half a dozen have yet reported to Mr. Powers.

Does it disgust you to memorize a set speech? Or are you afraid that you have not sufficient ability?

The tendency towards taking it easy has already been noted, and this tendency, and this alone, is behind the first objection. It requires some little time and some little effort to memorize a speech—just as it takes time and effort to prepare assignments. Nor is the work particularly dry or repulsive. The speeches of Wilson, Briand, Roosevelt and the others that have taken prizes in recent contests are as interesting in the memorizing as in the hearing.

As to the plea of lack of ability, let no man declare it lest he be named a fool or a coward. No man knows his innate abilities. No man knows, as any past participant in the Kingsley Contests will inform him, just what latent spark of ability will flame up in him to urge him on to success.

Gentlemen of '31 and '32, wake up and show some spirit!

With the Theatre

Monday and Tuesday

With this program the Majestic embarks on two new policies, one of presenting sound pictures and the other, of presenting continuous performances every day. Both of these changes are definite advances for the theatre and for the town. Because of the lack of a noise machine, the Majestic has been compelled to hold back many of the more noteworthy efforts in the motion picture field. Perhaps, with this change, we may expect better programs. In addition, the theatre, in having continuous performances, will make it possible for a great many people to attend at the time they want to do so, which was not previously the case. The approximate times at which the feature will go on each day are 2.55, 4.55, 5.45, 7.35, 9.35.

Monday's program, while better than many which have been presented in previous weeks still needs considerable improvement. We are presented to Mr. George Bancroft being "The Wolf of Wall Street" and to Baclanova being seductive in a picture which would have been a thousand times better if the producers and writers of the thing had never heard of that ancient legend. According to this legend there was, once upon a time, a boy who was captured by wolves and carried to their den somewhere near the top of the Wolvesworth building. There the wolves fed him on ticker tape until he could digest nothing else. As he grew older he found that the only thing which could give him pleasure was the sight of poor widows and stockholders writhing beneath his power. But one day this "Wolf of Wall Street" discovered that he had a heart and also a couple of suppressed desires concerning members of the opposite sex, and what Mr. Bancroft does with that newly discovered heart is more or less engagingly unfolded at the Majestic. Baclanova is hot, and the noise is swell.

Wednesday and Thursday

Now we are treated to a picture that proves exceedingly well that, although the movies have learned to talk, they have not yet grown up. Here is the old Western Picture, with the same old plot, pretty tough acting and not so good sound. However, this picture should interest you as a historical incident because as the program (not yet prepared) will undoubtedly boast, this is the first talking picture made in the great outdoors. The outdoors is quite great but the picture isn't. In fact the only thing that makes it possible to be listed as a feature picture is that it has noises with talking with more noises with more talking tacked on it. Need I tell you the story? You've heard it a thousand times and seen it another thousand. "In Old Arizona" merely repeats that once there was a man—and a maid—and a couple of villains—and they got into a pretty complicated mess, which was cleared up just in time to land the heroine in the arms of the hero as the curtain fell and the picture ended.

Friday

And on Friday, Ladies and Gentlemen, we have what is known as silent night on the Majestic's sound machine. We get two silent pictures and both of them are silent. "The Ware Case" is a mystery and you ought to be able to tell the guilty person the minute he steps on the screen because he looks so unmistakably vile.

"The Far Call" is awful though if you go in for hearty belly laughs and a hero too good to be true. You may be able to sit through it. I couldn't.

Saturday

Saturday we again return to good clean noise with Renée Adorée and Alan Hale shouting all over the lot in something called "The Spieler," which seems to have been [illegible] the producers found that was being a success everywhere. The thing tertaining but it leads with alarm" the unc tions under which the tures are at present [illegible] tically every successful with some phase of Show with a court room trial ence," probably the n Talking Picture, was the tion. "In Old Arizona ception, is not so great [illegible] rah for the Talkies, and at the movies when the good.

Baseball Team Opens Home Season Officially Tomorrow

Varsity Team Lines Up Against Medics in Regularly Scheduled Contest—Kendrick and Macomber, Fogg and Aronson Opposing Batteries

FORMER STARS TO BE SEEN IN ACTION AGAIN

Tomorrow afternoon the Catamounts will open the home baseball season with the Medics as opponents. Last Saturday the Green and Gold team was rained out of the first home game by the cancellation of the St. Michael's meet but Coach Larry Gardner took the opportunity to stage a practice game with the Junior Varsity. Thus far this season the Cats have been forced to cancel seven of fourteen scheduled games and from the seven played three have been chalked up as wins for Vermont.

The Medics have been working hard to shape up their team, which will be composed of former college stars. Remembering the good time had at the football game with the doctors last fall everyone should turn out to see the contest tomorrow. Several familiar figures to Vermonters will once more grace the diamond, and if the former players' skill is still with them, the Cats will have a tough battle. "Doc" Moriarty, "Big Chief" Fogg, "Hank" Winchenbach and "Rolly" Aronson, all former varsity battery men will be on hand to perform against the team on which they once starred. Fogg, a star pitcher and captain of the Green and Gold team, is expected to start the game on the mound. Moriarty, the varsity's leading twirler last year, will be in the receiving field at the start.

Aronson will probably be behind the bat for Fogg while Winchenbach will cover down the initial sack. George Tully, the football mentor, is another familiar figure who will strut his stuff while Schurman of the Jayvees will hold down the hot corner.

Coach Gardner will start the game with the regular line-up that he has used this season. It is not known whom he will put on the mound, but Kendrick seems to be a likely possibility. Captain Macomber, the team's leading batter, will be on the receiving end as usual.

That new infield will be in action tomorrow and everyone will want to see them perform. Sargent at first; Trainor, second baseman; Jay, shortstop, and McKay on the hot corner are all beginning their first year on the varsity but are turning in a good record for themselves.

In the outfield "Burt" Morse shines with his errorless fielding. The other two, Howard and Winant, are not far behind and their hitting should prove dangerous to whoever takes the mound tomorrow for the Medics.

FIRST WEEK OF GRID PRACTICE ENDS TODAY

Coach Rattan waxed enthusiastic when the spring football practices were held this week on the back campus. A noticeable factor is the great number of men who are eager to make positions on next year's eleven. Forty new men reported and in this number there must exist some potential varsity material. From all indications a heavy line will represent the Catamounts next fall and should be bolstered by several of last year's invincible squad.

A few fundamental plays were run, followed by signal practice. Some of the most promising of the new crop reporting to date are Dober, Emerson who was Jack Smith's understudy on the 1927 eleven, Bond, Kolinsky, an oustanding lineman of the frosh team, Rugg, Bove, Manning and Davis of this year's frosh outfit. The final practice of the first week's program will be held this afternoon.

Chinese students at Tsing Han College are determined that they will have liberty or trouble will result. They have declared that they will not obey regulations, they will not accept any instruction unsatisfactory to them, and that they intend to assert a right to pass judgment on the appointment of the president.

CAT'S MEOW

—SPORTING EDITOR—

Union on the track and Medics on the diamond at Centennial tomorrow.

The Union meet is scheduled for 2.30 p.m. which will hardly allow the starting of the Medic contest at 3:00 p.m. even under the most efficient direction of the track events. The baseball game will undoubtedly have to be held up until most of the events have been completed.

If "Lefty" Cummings of the junior varsity were in the box against "Chief" Fogg of the Medics that would make a sweet pitching duel. Unfortunately, Fogg should have things his own way.

Among those to watch at bat tomorrow are Fogg of the M.D.'s and Captain Macomber and Jay of the varsity.

Marston, who will be on second for the pill purveyors, is a former Bowdoin star.

The Cadavers will have Tully, Cayward, and Gardner on the bench ready to sub in the field. Cerasoli will be on hand to help Aronson behind the bat. Moriarty is a first class twirler who can step onto the rubber at short notice.

Coach "Larry" Gardner had the varsity squad vaccinated for smallpox last Tuesday. We hope it won't affect their playing tomorrow. The junior varsity men will be vaccinated in the near future.

The varsity tennis match scheduled for Monday afternoon with St. Michael's has been cancelled on account of the quarantine at Winooski Park.

A track meet has been arranged with Mass. Aggies for next Tuesday, May 7, to take place at Amherst. The open date as announced recently was May 11, but it was impossible to arrange a satisfactory out-of-town meet on that day.

A game with Princeton for next year's baseball southern trip has already been arranged for by Manager "Doc" Rogers.

Frank O'Keefe who was slated to start the season as varsity first-baseman and who was stricken with appendicitis before the first game on the southern trip returned to school last Monday morning. Although he is much improved in health he will, of course, not be able to participate on the diamond this year.

Following is the tentative Junior Varsity baseball schedule:

May 11	Queen City Cotton Co.	Here
May 18	Clark School	Here
May 25	Jeffersonville	There

Another month of college baseball finds only seven teams still enjoying undefeated records: Lafayette, Colby, Syracuse, Gettysburg, Amherst, Union and Pratt. Lafayette, however, is the only one which has played more than three games.

Macomber and Jay are tied for 18th place with .345 averages.

G. BASILICATO FENCING CAPTAIN AND MANAGER

Fencing team elections held recently place G. Basilicato, '31, as captain and manager, and L. J. Riani, P. H. Thomas, and R. F. Bigwood, all of the class of '31, as assistant managers.

Basilicato has done exceptionally good work this year in the ancient and chivalrous sport, fully meriting the dual honor conferred upon him. Riani, besides being a member of the fencing team, played Frosh football and held down the hot corner for the Independents in baseball last year. Both Thomas and Bigwood are prominent on the hill, having served on numerous committees and done good work with the fencing team. That all the four men elected are members of the class of '31 speaks well for the interest and ability of the sophomores in what is rapidly becoming a big sport at Vermont.

A professor at Lafayette College got annoyed when he found his whole class had cut on him. The irate professor proceeded to the frat houses and dormitories, rounded up his missing class and conducted it.

A collegiate wrecked car race, sponsored by the Daily Texan, provided movie material for a prominent news reel, and the pictures are being circulated all over the United States.

What's dumber than a dumb Swede? Lots of people.

Holy Cross has lost only one college game to Princeton while its other defeat was at the hands of the Boston Braves. That's the outstanding record.

Including last Monday's games, Colbert, Boston College catcher, leads eastern college hitters with a .563 average. He is only a sophomore and is followed by another one—Ed McGrath, Harvard keystone sacker—who is hitting at a .500 clip.

From 1906 to 1927 the record books show the 100-yard dash has been reeled off in 9⅘ seconds exactly ten times. Charlie Paddock has equalled it six times and Claude Bracey, Frank Wykoff, Charley Borah, and George Simpson have equalled it once each.

Simpson did it at the Penn relays last week. He is from Ohio State University.

Boston College beat Boston University 19 to 1 in baseball Tuesday and Norwich defeated Lowell Textile 11 to 4. B. C. and Norwich will be here later in the season. Lowell Textile is coached by "Rusty" Yarnall.

Clark conquered Middlebury in a tennis match Monday at Worcester by a 4 to 2 score.

George Lott, No. 3 ranking American tennis player, may turn pro some day, but if he does, it will probably be as a baseball player. He is the whole works on the University of Chicago baseball team at the present time as a pitcher and has been looked over by several big league scouts.

DEAN BROWN DELIVERS SERMON LAST SUNDAY

To be in want, to hunger and thirst after better things of both the body and the spirit, is an indication of health, Charles R. Brown, dean emeritus of Yale Divinity School, told the students, faculty members and townspeople gathered at the vesper service in the Ira Allen Chapel last Sunday.

It is the man who is satisfied with himself, like the Pharisee praying in the temple, who has no yearning to be anything better than he is, such a man needs sympathy, for he is in real trouble.

Dean Brown told the story of the Prodigal Son and emphasized the fact that this young man, who had been brought up in an atmosphere of plenty and went forth to a life of reckless spending, did not come to himself and see life in its true perspective until he was actually in want.

And so it is the men and women who are in want, who feel a real need for something better, that are forging ahead in the world. The South Sea Islander wants little. He feels no need of clothing and his desire for food is satisfied with fish and fruits which are easily obtained.

But when the missionary reaches this man and stirs within him a new sense of the meaning of life, new wants are created. He wants to become civilized, to wear clothing, to learn to read and write, to know about God. His outlook is enlarged and he begins to grow, to reach out toward higher things.

And for every universal, normal, persistent desire there is an appropriate satisfaction, Dean Brown declared. Man hungers and there is food to satisfy that hunger. Men desire books and art and music and there is the means with which to satisfy that desire. A college education is but the means of creating an appetite for better things.

And so it is that men yearn after God and there is the power to satisfy that yearning. The soul which does not have a deep-seated longing to grow toward God is a sick soul. But the man who persistently seeks the satisfaction of that fundamental desire within him to know God and to acquire more of the strength and power which come from a knowledge of God will find awaiting him in abundance the satisfaction of that desire.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR LATE TRUSTEE TUESDAY

Yesterday at 1 o'clock impressive funeral services were held at the Broadway Tabernacle in New York City for James Benjamin Wilbur, a trustee of the University of Vermont, the donor of the Ira Allen Chapel, and a philanthropist in the widest sense of the word. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, life-long friend of Mr. Wilbur, was the officiating clergyman. Dr. Jefferson will be remembered as the principal speaker at the dedication of the Ira Allen Chapel, which, as mentioned before, was a magnificent gift of Mr. Wilbur to the college. President Guy W. Bailey of the University of Vermont and Professor Walter H. Crockett attended the services.

Out of respect to the memory of Mr. Wilbur the administration ordered all buildings of the University including Billings Library to be closed between 1:00 and 2:00 p.m. Tuesday the hour of the funeral in New York.

KINGSLEY ORATORS TO BE SELECTED MAY 10

Preliminary tryouts in the Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest will be held in the Old Mill Chapel on Friday afternoon, May 10, at 4:00 o'clock. The contest is open to all men in the freshman and sophomore classes. The same oration may be used in both the tryouts and finals, and should not take longer than ten minutes to deliver.

The Kingsley Prizes are three in number: twenty-five dollars for first place, fifteen for second place, and ten dollars for third. They were given by Hon. Darwin P. Kingsley, of the class of '81, and are awarded to the male students of the sophomore and freshman classes for the best declamation of passages in oratorical prose. R. T. Krogh, '29, won first prize last year. L. Lieman, '31, took second and B. Baker, also '31, won third place.

Richmond, Va.

Dear Sirs:

Having just returned from my fishing camp in northern Ontario, and in the reflections upon a fortnight of most excellent weather, wonderful fishing and complete camp comfort, I feel that an appreciation of Edgeworth is due, as one of the principal factors of our enjoyment.

In past years, I have taken along a supply of various well-known brands of smoking tobacco, never having become fully acquainted with the difference in the smoking qualities of the so-called high-grade tobaccos now upon the market, and acting upon a tip from an old smoker friend, and as a matter of convenience in packing, this year I took along a dozen tins of Edgeworth Plug Slice.

There are no places nor conditions in existence where the contentment drawn from a briar pipe meets with keener enjoyment or more critical analysis than beside the camp-fire after a strenuous day in the great outdoors.

It is the unanimous opinion of the smokers among my party that Edgeworth is without a peer, and that its smoothness, fragrance and fine smoking qualities are unsurpassed and unmatched; and I thank you for making it possible to obtain it.

Yours truly,
(Signed) H. N. Curtis

REV. RANKIN OF LUDLOW LEADS CHAPEL SERVICES

Rev. F. B. Rankin of Ludlow, Vt., spoke in chapel Wednesday morning on ambition and accomplishing one's purpose. As an example to support his point he cited the following incident:

William Robert Hitchens was in Algeria once a little prince he saw a man seated against a building watching a donkey go around and around pumping water. When questioned the boy said that he had left his home to seek the Holy Land and that sometime he was going to the land of his dreams.

A few months later Hitchens found himself in the Holy Land viewing some ruins. A huge stone seventy feet long held his attention. It was beautifully matched, a marvel of the engineering of by gone days. This stone should have been placed on a temple platform.

Both the boy and this stone were examples of tragedy. The boy merely wasting his time in the country, never had had ambition enough to attempt his goal. And the stone also never reached its destination.

The warning of these tragedies is that people often have ambition but no energy to carry through and their service will never be applied up to the world. The boy hadn't confidence in self, he had vision but did not respond to opportunity. Never be overcome by accidental experience. Let us carry on and make success.

case she advocated the judge system, where trained men may render our decisions. The jury, by exceeding its function and by determining right and wrong, obscures the code of justice. Many points could not occur under a judge system. In short we want justice, we are not getting it. A judge system would give it to us.

Janice Goodrich, the word warrior, arose, objecting to claims of perfection for the judge system. We wish it were perfect, or that any other system were! The judge is influenced by politics, but not the jury. Again a cross section of the people, such as the jury, is far more likely to have a just point of view than the judge. Moreover, under the American system, a jury trial is optional in most cases. What more do you want?

Miss Powers, speaking first in the rebuttal, said: "The affirmative pictures a sad state of affairs, but let us be cheerful for we believe that conditions are not so bad as they are depicted. They say the jury has outworn its original purpose. Well, so have clothes outworn their original purpose—to keep us warm!"

Helen Perry, answering for the affirmative said, "We have heard our friend of the negative mention a case of a good jury. Hallelujah! At last! Something is wrong in America. All this crime she continued results from our present jury system.

Frances Howley said that the United States has prospered under this system. Let us avoid despotism. Four out of five juries reach just decisions.

Mary Henseler demanded an answer to the affirmative's points. The United States is a nation of seventh graders, such as condemned Dreiser's "American Tragedy" recently in Boston. Judges get down to business; juries delay.

Janice Goodrich, closing the case for the negative, remarked pointedly, "Can you always get a good judge?" She cited authorities on the fact that good juries are the general rule. Again, is the judge always honest?

Ellen Kellogg, finishing the debate, inquired if the judge were tyranny, if the judge were emotional. Would not the jury, too, be influenced by friendship? If the judges are expensive, so is the jury.

To sum up the jury system has many evils all of which will be eliminated by the judge system.

W. A. A. CONDUCTING A MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

W. A. A. is conducting a campaign for [illegible] under the leadership of the new president, Estabel Pereiman, '30. The drive extends from April 29 to May 29, and W. A. A. is hoping for a great increase in members. This is a good time of year to get the necessary fifty points for membership with the advent of the spring sports and pleasant weather for hiking. Health cards afford another easy method of winning points. W. A. COMMITTEES ACTIVE FOR JUNIOR WEEK

Indications Point to Successful Program of Events With Chairman of all Committees Making Final Preparations

BURR HEARS FAVORABLE REPORTS AT MEETING

Perelman Named Chairman of Decorations Committee—Tasillo to Furnish Music for Junior Prom

Favorable reports from all the Junior Week committees were made at a meeting of the entire Junior Week heads, called by Warren A. Burr, chairman, in the Old Mill Chapel last Thursday evening at 7.00 p.m. Both Burr and E. H. Powell, financial manager, have been working hard on the project, and their efforts are beginning to show results.

Because of the resignation of Dorothy Gurney from the chairmanship of the decorations committee, it was necessary to appoint a new chairman at this time. Estabel Perelman was chosen for this position, an appointment that was made on the basis of past hard work and willingness to support college activities. It is thought that this part of the program is already well-assured of success with Miss Perelman to manage the activities of the decorations committee.

The refreshment committee, headed by Herrick Macomber, has decided to have the cabaret style similar to last year's Junior Prom. According to the present plans there will be sixty tables at $1.50 a couple or $3.00 a table. Reservations may be obtained from Herrick Macomber at the Delta Psi House.

Governor's Footguard at Prom

The music for the Prom will be furnished by William B. Tasillo's Governor's Footguard Orchestra of Hartford, Conn. This team of ten pieces is the most popular orchestra in the vicinity of Hartford. C. H. Ramm, chairman of the music committee, predicts that if everything depends on the music the Prom will be an overwhelming success.

The favors have been ordered under the direction of O. Martinetti. Those who are in a position to know claim that they are the most novel and original favors ever given at a dance.

C. H. Mace is doing some fine work in getting out attractive posters for the Prom. The advertising committee under Joseph Sugden is busy broadcasting publicity for the big event.

F. H. Woodward, as chairman of the Program committee, announces that the programs of Junior Week events will be on sale at the Medical Book Store, the University Store, and the Kappa Sigma House in the very near future. The price has been set at $1.50 for two programs or $1.00 each.

The Junior Week Peerade will take place this year as has been customary in the past. There will be floats entered by the fraternities and the dormitories advertising the Junior Week play, "Summertime." Names of the floats must be submitted to Chairman A. L. Sirois at the Sigma Nu Lodge on or before a date which will be announced later. A cup for the men and a cup for the women will be awarded the Peerade winners.

The Junior Banquet is still tentative, depending upon how many will attend. Cards have been sent out to the members of the class of '30, and these are to be returned to N. B. Gray at the Phi Delta Theta House as soon as possible.

Indications point to a successful Junior Week if the activity and energy of the committees may be taken as any criterion.

The patient teacher was trying to show the small boy how to read with expression.

"Where-are-you-going?" read Johnny, seriously, with no accent whatever.

"Try that again," said the teacher. "Read to the end."

Johnny studied the interrogation mark a moment, and an idea seemed to dawn upon him; then he read out triumphantly: "Where are you going, with the buttonhook?"

CATAMOUNTS LEAVE FOR MEET WITH MASS. AGGIES

The Catamounts left yesterday morning for Amherst, Mass., to clash with Mass. Aggies in a dual meet tomorrow.

Mass. Aggies defeated Trinity 64 to 62 Saturday and will make a formidable opponent for Vermont. Vermont should look better on the track than it appeared against the Union speed merchants.

Morse and Berry should place in the 100-yard dash. Woodward ought to take at least a second in the 440. Bjorn is a good second in the 880. Maynes will pick up some points in the mile. Wilder looks like a second or third in the 2-mile run. Howard has a chance for second in the high hurdles. Franceschi is a good first in the high jump with Howard in second place. Lyman may scrape a second in the broad jump. Meehan and Lyman are first and second in the pole vault. The discus and shot-put should go to Wood and Kropper.

VERMONT NETMEN MEET SPRINGFIELD AND MIDD

Capt. Shedd, Borkland, Goddard, Macomber, and Pouch Make Up Green and Gold Tennis Team

Vermont netmen will make their début against Springfield on the back campus court on Tuesday at 4 p.m. Since the engagement with St. Michael's has been postponed because of quarantine at the Winooski College, this will be the Cats' first match of the season. Thursday, the Green and Gold will travel to Middlebury to take on the Black Panther.

Vermont's chances are very encouraging. There are three letter men from last year. These are: Captain Shedd, Borkland and Goddard. All three are speedy players and look good. Pouch and Macomber are the other two that make up the squad at present. Pouch seems to be the favorite and will probably take part in the Springfield combat.

There will be six matches, four doubles and two singles. Shedd will play the first single match and Shedd and Borkland are scheduled to begin the doubles.

The contest with Springfield seems to be the tougher of the two. The Y. M. C. A. College trounced Holy Cross to the tune of 5-1. Henderling and Kelley playing at double defeated their opponents with ease and seemed to be a dependable combination. The remainder of the Springfield team are: Lindeman, Smith, Cameron and Lovejoy, at singles and Smith and Magie at doubles.

On the other hand, Middlebury seems the weaker if comparative scores can be counted on. They were beaten by Clark in a 4 to 2 affair. However, Woodbury and Daland showed some real competition. Sloper and Bemis are the other two netmen.

The Green and Gold squad are practicing regularly and are in fine form. Coach Carpenter expects a successful season.

"EVERYONE A MEMBER OF W. A. A." IS SLOGAN

"Are you a member of W. A. A.?" is being heard continually about the campus. "You know you only need 50 points."

"Everyone a member of W. A. A." is to be the slogan of this organization. From now until May 28 points may be secured toward membership. Do you like to hike, play tennis, ride horseback, roller skate, etc.? All these, as well as keeping health cards, count toward membership.

Once a W. A. A. voter, you are eligible to vote for all W. A. A. officers. With a larger group of voters, the council will be more representative; the more members, the more interest will be secured for women's athletic events.

The New York Times recently published an article featuring the unprecedented intra-mural system of athletics at Williams.

MILITARY INSPECTION PROGRAM RELEASED

May 13 and 14 Set Aside for Annual Review of Local Battalion—To Examine on Both Practical and Theoretical Work

RESERVE OFFICERS' CUP DRILL IS NEW FEATURE

Colonel Black Expects Every Man to Do His Duty—Vermont to be Judged in Competition With Other Schools in New England Area

On May 13 and 14 the local unit will sally forth upon the fair green back campus dressed in all its glory—clean belts, clean guns, shined shoes, pressed suits, shaven faces. For upon that day will the University of Vermont enter upon the difficult task of proving to a picked group of outside and experienced officers that it knows how to understand and execute commands properly. That will be the practical work.

There is the theoretical side of it too. Rapid fire questioning on scouting and patrolling, combat work and other matters demands a thorough knowledge of the course and an active brain as in the practical test, one man can spoil the appearance and rating of the whole platoon; each must strive for individual excellence and cooperation.

This year's program starts on Monday, May 13, at 8.00 with a theoretical test, and continues throughout the morning with the customary calling on President Bailey and Battalion Review. The afternoon will see a rifle company in attack.

Tuesday morning ushers in a new feature at Vermont, Competitive Squad Drill for the recently donated Reserve Officers' Cup. To judge by the frequent intensive practice sessions that the different fraternities are turning in, an excellent and close competition is due to take place.

The official program is given below:

CLASS HONOR SOCIETIES PLANNING INITIATIONS

Key and Serpent Society is making plans for its initiation exercises which are scheduled for Thursday evening, May 9 at the Sigma Nu Lodge, followed by a banquet at the Hotel Vermont. The speaker will be Prof. Leon W. Dean and the toastmaster Robert W. Lawrence, president of the society. The initiation will be carried out in the usual informal manner.

Gold Key will hold its initiation banquet at the Hotel Vermont Wednesday evening. C. W. Walker, present president, will speak. Officers for the coming year will be elected and the informal initiation will follow the banquet.

TENNIS TOURNAMENTS ARE BARRED SUNDAYS

By vote of the University Council, the tennis courts of the University will, from now on, be open for play Sunday afternoons for students only. Games must be for practice or pleasure only. No contests or tournament plays whether intercollegiate or intramural, will be permitted.

In accordance with the practice of other New England colleges, the courts will be closed Sunday morning so as not to conflict with church services and will also be closed on those Sunday afternoons on which Chapel services are held.

It is expected that students using the courts and those watching the play will conduct themselves in a quiet and proper manner avoiding noisy and boisterous conduct, having due regard for the spirit of the day.

GREY FRIARS AND INT'L RELATIONS CLUB ELECT

Robert Stewart to Head Both Men's Literary Society and Political Science Organizations

Robert Lee Stewart, '30, was elected president of Grey Friars, the men's honorary literary society, at the last meeting of the organization which was held last Thursday afternoon. George R. Nelson was elected vice-president, Edmour Germain was elected secretary, Louis Lisman, treasurer, and Joseph Carter, chairman of activities. These men will remain in office throughout the coming year and are the Society's officers for the rest of this term. The retiring officers are Charles Overly, president, Merle Duval, vice-president, Herrick Macomber, secretary, Robert Stewart, treasurer, and George Nelson, chairman of activities.

The newly-elected officers of Grey Friars are very active in campus affairs and have done considerable journalistic and literary work. Robert Stewart, who is now president, was for two years assistant editor of the CYNIC, was managing editor of the 1930 Ariel and was an assistant editor of the Vermont Literary Magazine in his sophomore year. He was this year elected to Pi Delta Rho, honorary journalistic society.

George Nelson, vice-president, was successively assistant editor and columnist of the VERMONT CYNIC and now holds the position of news editor. He is an editor of the 1931 Ariel. Edmour Germain, secretary, was an assistant editor of the CYNIC and now holds the position of feature editor. He is also publicity manager for the John Dewey Club and the Outing Club.

Louis Lisman, treasurer, has held the office of assistant editor upon the CYNIC and is now news editor. He is a member of Pi Delta Rho and of the 1931 Ariel Board. Joseph Carter, who is a freshman, has been very active in the Y. M. C. A. and has done considerable work for Grey Friars.

A semi-annual banquet will be held next Thursday evening at seven o'clock in the private banquet room of the Hotel Vermont. President Guy W. Bailey, Senator W. H. Crockett, Dean Elijah Swift and Prof. Leon Dean will be the speakers.

International Relations Elects

Robert Stewart will also act as president of the International Relations Club for next year as the result of elections held the same day. Frances Hazen, '30, is to serve as vice-president and Pauline Partridge, '30, as secretary. One office will remain open until next fall when an underclassman will be elected to it. The International Relations Club has now wound up its affairs and will hold no meetings the rest of the season.

Another one of the higher institutes of learning has followed in the footsteps of Harvard when three Yale faculties with the approval of the president voted to cancel all formal classes for two days preceding the final examinations.

CATAMOUNTS DROP GAME TO MEDICS

"Big Chief" Fogg Pitches 4-Hit Game for Winners—McKay Poles Out Homer in Ninth

WOOD GIVES 3 HITS, NO RUNS IN FOUR INNINGS

All the Doctors Get at Least One Single Varsity Has Bad Third Inning

Saturday afternoon the Catamount nine opened the home season on Centennial Field by losing to the Medics 7 to 2. Except for one disastrous inning the third, the playing was fairly close but in this inning the Medics bunched their hits and pushed across five runs. Every man in the doctor's line-up was credited with at least one hit, while Fogg kept the Varsity down to four scattered safeties one being a home run by McKay in the ninth inning with the bases empty.

The Medics started the scoring in the third inning when they pounded Kendrick for five hits. This battering attack with loose fielding on the part of the Varsity netted the doctors five runs. This was enough to sew up the game for them and was the margin of victory. In their half of that inning the Catamounts got one run through a walk, a hit and a sacrifice fly to the outfield.

Again in the fifth inning the Medics scored two runs on Morse's single, a three-bagger by Winchenbach and Aronson's bunt for a pretty squeeze play. In the next inning Wood relieved Kendrick on the mound for the Varsity and succeeded in checking the Medics' spree.

In the ninth Wood had himself in a difficult position when he walked Morse to fill the bases with none out. However, he became master of the situation by fanning Fogg and Winchenbach in succession and tossing Aronson out at first on a slow grounder.

Morse led the batting attack for the Medics with three safeties out of four trips to the plate. Traynor and McKay with two hits apiece accounted for the Varsity's slight showing with the stick.

FRATERNITY GETS NINETY CENTS FOR LODGING HORSE

The Chi Phi fraternity house at Dartmouth College is in receipt of ninety bright new pennies from "Rip" Hennessy, supervisor of athletics in payment of a half day's board and lodging for his horse in the main reception room of the house.

Chi Phi members declare that a rival fraternity, removed Hennessy's horse from its stable early one morning when all the house occupants were asleep on the upper floors and installed the animal in the parlor of the recently completed building where it was found the next morning carving hoof marks on the polished floors.

The fraternity sent Hennessy a bill for $1.80 for the night's lodging. Hennessy repaid with a note and ninety cents. He wrote that the horse spent only half of one night in the parlor and that the charge should accordingly be reduced one-half.

Chi Phi, however, did not include in the bill any charge for the unpleasant smell in the fraternity house that broke up a reception to freshmen the following day.

BLUESTOCKINGS HEARS SEVERAL BOOK REVIEWS

Two book reviews were given at the combined business and social meeting of Bluestockings held at the Theta House Monday afternoon. The first review was on "The Woodlanders" by Thomas Hardy and the second was on "The Patrician" by John Galsworthy.

Plans were made to hold a discussion of A. A. Milne's writings at the next meeting which will be held at the Theta House at four o'clock on Monday, May 20.

How to Kill an Organization

Clubs, societies and organizations of many kinds are characteristic of any college campus. Each one was formed with a specific purpose, its founders feeling that there was a sufficient need for the existence of such an organization on the campus. Vermont in this respect is no different from other universities, the Green and Gold campus boasting of a score or more societies representing as many different lines of activity.

Election to membership in the majority of the societies comes in the spring. Members are elected on the basis of character, of service, of ability or on whatever the case may be. One of the first duties of any such member should be to become familiar with the original purpose of the society, as well as what its present aims are, if there has been a change.

To become familiar with the past and present aspirations of the organization the new member will find it to his distinct advantage to attend all meetings. Attendance at meetings is vital to the existence of any society. One may ask the question—what is the quickest and surest way of killing an organization? The answer lies in staying away from regularly convened and properly notified meetings.

When only a few members of a society attend a meeting, action that they take may, and usually is, unsatisfactory to those absent ones as later dissenting voices prove. Again, when only a few are present, they are often afraid to take definite action on a question that should be settled at once for this very reason. As a result, interest in the activities of the society gradually wane, until suddenly it is on the point of dying out altogether for the want of ardent supporters, however instilled its existence may be.

The moral of this tale is—do not be an organization killer.

The Test

It seems that everyone wants to go into aviation today. Those who really want to, say so and those who want others to think that they really want to say so. Everywhere, you hear young men discussing the relative merits of different makes of planes and of aviation as compared to other vocations. Each enthusiastic individual seems to think that all he needs to become a great flyer is the desire to do so.

But great flyers are born and not made. The ability to fly well—to become a satisfactory pilot—requires a certain combination of psychological attributes not required by any other activity or effort of man. The majority of men and even the majority of men who desire to fly do not possess these attributes. Years of research and experimentation have enabled flight surgeons, specialized psychiatrists, to isolate the individual characteristics which go to make up this combination which for want of a better term is called inherent flying ability. They can thus analyze any candidate and determine his potential value as a pilot with only a negligible degree of error. The examination consists of three parts—a practical test to determine the applicant's reaction time under various stimuli; a practical test on an instrument called the Ruggles orientator which simulates the evolutions performed in flying; and a personality analysis by specialized flight surgeons.

It thus behooves any young lad with a healthy desire to view the fleecy spaces above at close range to go and get himself examined, thoroughly, competently before he sets his mind too strongly on aviation as a career.

"Men who are truly great are like meteors; they shine and consume themselves, that they may lighten the darkness of the earth."—Napoleon

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

By Ex-Converse Hall

A Brief Case

During the next several weeks one might have seen a very pretty girl, accompanied by two good-looking fellows, each sporting a large, new kodak, out motoring, swimming, picnicking, dancing, golfing or playing tennis, and just enjoying themselves to the utmost. One might also have wondered at the close attachment that each fellow bore to his camera, inasmuch as neither ever ventured to accompany the girl without it. While Jimmie and Marion were playing tennis Willie invariably got half a dozen snapshots of Miss Wood's most vigorous shots, while Willie and she were diving Jimmie would take several pictures of her doing the jackknife, flips and other strenuous dives. If the girl wondered at the profusion of photographs Jimmie employing skillful flattery quickly allayed whatever suspicions she might have had. Thus the days rolled on, and that department in the lobby which sold films did a thriving business.

Each day the boys collected snapshots, and each night carefully assorted them, labelling each with the date, time, and place where it was taken. Therefore, at the end of seven weeks they could confidently assure Attorney Hoyt that they had enough evidence to hang the Angel Gabriel himself.

Their time limit of eight weeks being nearly over and the boys about to leave, Willie suggested that they three plan a farewell picnic to be held up in the mountains sometime during the week. All agreeing with the plan, on the day decided upon a charming girl in hiking costume, and two young men dressed in knickers and each carrying a knapsack containing lunch, as well as a large, but not entirely new, kodak, left the hotel bound for Mt. Hop-ah Harry. After lunch they danced awhile, and then Miss Wood, mounting upon the pinnacle of a high rock, proceeded to demonstrate her ability to do the "Spread Eagle" or "Flying Mercury"; that is, to stand on one tiptoe, the other leg extended, body bent forward, and arms thrown out as in a swan dive. Jimmie nudged Willie, who quickly got his camera into position.

"Marvelous!" exclaimed the latter, getting a remarkable close-up of the feat.

Both showered her with congratulations, all of which she received in good faith, little knowing the purpose of the films.

The following week witnessed the arrival in New York of two good-looking college youths driving a Packard straight-8 roadster. Their luggage having been sent ahead, had preceded them, but each carried a large, well-worn kodak, and Jimmie carefully, even tenderly, handled a big box containing countless undeveloped films. They immediately repaired to the lawyer's office, whence, after a lengthy but enthusiastic conference, they emerged radiant and proud of their ability as secret service men.

The much-heralded case itself was to have appeared that very week, but Hoyt was able to obtain a seven-day stay, claiming that he wished to obtain certain evidence, but in reality, wishing to have ample time to develop and minutely examine the numerous photographs. Thus, the case came up on August 24, and among those who thronged the courtroom were two collegiate-appearing youths engaged in an animated conversation over the boundless possibilities of photography. But both stopped their conversation when the limp, dejected figure of Julia Andrews, alias Marion Wood, was carried into the courtroom. Judging by the exclamations of pity which burst forth from all sides, Reynolds, the opposing lawyer, had apparently executed a master stroke.

"She sure can sham!" whispered Jimmie.

"So could I for the amount she hopes to get," was the reply.

"Wait until you hear the mean line that Reynolds will throw to the court. He's a wizard at that."

Reynolds did "throw a mean line." In fact, he delivered a most passionate speech upon the recklessness of certain people, who would wantonly destroy life; yes—would cripple a beautiful flower in order to more expeditiously cut through the garden. In the course of his speech he quoted the Bible, the Constitution, Shakespeare, and even the Book of Etiquette. He stormed, he raved, he climbed upon the jury box and proceeded to tear his hair and pour abuse upon those mammals who would without provocation cut off God's own marvelous handiwork—life; precious enjoyment of life! He ended in a burst of oratory that left a vivid impression upon the whole court.

Attorney Hoyt arose and in an offhand manner of speaking declared that he would like to show His Honor and the gentlemen of the jury a few photos which he had had taken during the summer.

"I've had them enlarged so that the characters would stand out, but here are the originals to compare them with," he remarked.

He then handed to Judge Nichols a large picture of a girl about to take a dive, followed by a photograph of the dive itself—a jack knife. His Honor first glanced at the picture, and then, becoming suddenly interested, scrutinized it carefully; looked long and searchingly at the plaintiff; and then cleared his throat. His next act was to remove his glasses, wipe them solicitously, return them to their wonted position, and again gaze at the photographs. Clearing his throat once more, he said, "Ahem!" but proceeded to glance at another picture, which portrayed a girl in the act of hitting a tennis ball, while leaping in the air. The judge again surveyed the plaintiff but said nothing. So the films were handed to His Honor one by one while all the rest of the court looked on and wondered what it was all about. However, when it came to the last two pictures, Attorney Hoyt held them up so that the entire court might see them. They had been greatly enlarged and mounted so that they showed up remarkably well. One presented the front view of a girl doing the "Spread Eagle" on the narrow top of a rock; the other, a side view of the same picture.

The courtroom gasped as it gathered the true significance of these photos; the opposing lawyer looked positively sick, and as for the girl herself, she nearly suffered sufficient shock to warrant her case being pressed. Attorney Hoyt said not a word, but quietly distributed the remaining pictures among the jury, where they created profound interest, especially those portraying the girl dressed in her bathing suit. Only after they had finished regarding them did Hoyt speak.

"If you have any doubts as to when those pictures were taken, you may put either of these two Eastman Kodak Co.'s experts on the stand"—He indicated two men—"They will testify that this type of kodak which took these pictures was first manufactured on May 10th of this year, and that, therefore, all these pictures were taken after the accident. Would you like to question them?"

But Reynolds was too dumbfounded to speak; he could only sit and stare, his wide-open eyes expressing incredulity and fear.

The jury's pretense at weighty deliberation was only a formality, and a few hours later when Attorney Hoyt, Jimmy Everett, Willie Jackson, and Mr. Dennison, president of the Monarch Insurance Company, were seated in the latter's office, he gave rise to this question:

"Where did you two fellows learn so much about photography?"

Whereupon, Jimmie and Willie arose and recited in unison:

"Wherever you may travel,
And wherever you may go,
You'll find there's mighty little
That we Norwich men don't know!"

Union Smothers Vermont In Track Meet 90 1-3 to 35 2-3

Catamounts Outpoint Crimson in Field Events But Are Able to Score Only 6 Points on Track—Captain Lyman High Man for Vermont With 6 Points

A crimson-clad aggregation of speed merchants from Union College fairly walked up the cinders on Centennial Field last Saturday, to capture every first place in the running events and overcome the doggedly fighting Catamount team by the one-sided score of 90⅓ points to 35⅔ points.

The meet opened with the simultaneous starting of three events the shot put, pole vault, and running high jump. Kropper tossed the shot 39 feet, 6 inches to win a first for Vermont, while Meehan tied for first in the pole vault with Lehman of Union. Franceschi and Howard of Vermont tied for second place in the running high jump with Stark of Union. Lyman, Mace, Wood and Mackay next added thirteen points to Vermont's total, Lyman securing first place in the broad jump with a leap of 19 feet, 9 inches. Mace took second honors. Wood carried off the laurels in the discus with a heave of 112 feet, 8 inches, while Mackay took second place. All told, Vermont secured 29⅔ points in the field events to their opponents 24⅓ points.

Although the Cats trimmed Union in the field events, they failed to garned more than six points in the running events, the visitors making a clean sweep of four of the eight events. In spite of the comparative size of the score many of these events were closely contested, especially was this true in the 880-yard run when "Larry" Bjorn put on a spurt that carried him from far in the rear of two Union runners to within a yard of the winner at the tape. This was the only second place that Vermont took in the running events and was the most thrilling finish of the day. Maynes, Howard and Woodward each took a third in various events. Burt Morse gave the Union runners a great race in the century and led them at the 75 yard mark, only to have them surge forward at the finish and outrun him. Morse is a baseball star and did exceptionally well considering his lack of training.

Captain Lyman was high scorer for Vermont, totaling 6 points. Bowie and Cohen each with 11 points were the high scorers for Union.

Manager "Art" Birchard can be commended on the smooth way in which the various events were run off.

The summary:

100-yard dash—Won by Bowie (U.); second, Harris (U.); third, Dyke (U.). Time: 10⅕ seconds.

220-yard dash—Won by Harris (U.); second, Dyke (U.); third, Bowie (U.). Time: 23³⁄₁₀ seconds.

440-yard dash—Won by Bowie (U.); second, Nigrini (U.); third, Woodward (V.). Time: 52⅕ seconds.

880-yard run—Won by Kalico (U.); second, Bjorn (V.); third, Nigrini (U.). Time: 2 minutes, 8⅗ seconds.

1 mile run—Tie for first between Aussicker (U.) and Heath (U.); third, Maynes (V.). Time, 4 minutes, 46⁷⁄₁₀ seconds.

2 mile run—Won by Heath (U.); second, Siegal (U.); third, O'Connor (U.). Time: 10 minutes, 32⅖ seconds.

120-yard high hurdles—Won by Cohen (U.); second, Reiter (U.); third, Howard (V.). Time: 16⅕ seconds.

220-yard low hurdles—Won by Pershkowitz (U.); second, Swartz (U.); third, Cohen (U.). Time 27⁹⁄₁₀ seconds.

Running high jump—Won by Cohen (U.); tie for second between Franceschi (V.), Howard (V.), and Stark (U.). Height: 5 feet, 8 inches.

Running broad jump—Won by Lyman (V.); second, Mace (V.); third, Pershkowitz (U.). Distance: 19 feet, 9 inches.

Pole vault—Tie for first between Meehan (V.), and Lehman (U.); third, Lyman (V.). Height: 10 feet, 6 inches.

Discus throw—Won by Wood (V.); second, Mackay (V.); third, Foley (U.). Distance: 112⅝ feet.

Javelin—Won by Lehman (U.); second, Hansen (U.); third, Donaldson (U.). Distance: 129⅕ feet.

Shot put—Won by Kropper (V.); second, Hansen (U.); third, Stark (U.). Distance: 39 feet, 4⅛ inches.

Summary by points:

MEDICS AND JAYVEES THURSDAY AFTERNOON

Cummings to Pitch Against Fogg or Moriarty—Both Teams Have Same Line-up as Opposed Varsity

A banner year is expected for the junior vasity under the guidance of "Doc" Newton who may be remembered as one of Vermont's sterling twirlers of past years. Over twenty men have reported and from all indications should make an impressive record for themselves. With Wetherell guarding the keystone sack and Dinny Dinniman of last year's varsity in centerfield the jay vees have some especially good men in the field. On the mound is Cummings, sensational transfer from Syracuse whose pitching carries plenty of smoke and curves. He is also a batter of no mean ability, and can be used in the outfield when not pitching. Behind the plate, Charley Stroh fills the bill. Other likely pitching prospects are Stevenson and St. Dennis.

Thursday afternoon, while the Cats are at Middlebury the juniors meet the Medics at Centennial Field. That should be a "pitching duel royal" with Cummings against Fogg or Moriarty. The probable line-up:

Jay Vees	Medics
Proctor, 3b	s. s., Schurman
Wetherell, 2b	2b., Marston
Dinniman, c. f.	c. f., Morse
Cummings, p.	p., Fogg, Moriarty
Heaton, s. s.	1b., Winchenbach
Grant, l. f.	c., Aronson
Stevens, r. f.	r. f., Moriarty, Fogg
Stroh, c.	3b., Foster
Carrigan, 1b.	l. f., Eastman

Game starts at 3.00 p.m.

FROSH TENNIS OUTFIT PLAYS BURLINGTON H. S.

Tomorrow afternoon on the college courts the first freshman tennis match of the season will be played when the U. V. M. yearlings will meet the Burlington High School team. The freshman team has been practicing whenever possible in the cage under the able coaching of Prof. Stillwell. The high school team has been practicing under the direction of Headmaster H. D. Pearl.

On the freshman team all of the men besides Tupper are doing their first tennis playing. Tupper played at Andover Academy last year. The probable players are Tupper, Tory, Albert, and Holbrook with Parker and Thoms on hand.

The high school sustained only one loss by graduation last year and have a snappy outfit. Their best bets are Captain Twitchell and Myers. Both of these boys swing a wicked racket. They will be supported by McMullen and Isham and perhaps Perry.

CAT'S MEOW

—Sporting Editor—

All the former Vermont Stars on the Medic team looked good Saturday and would make valuable men on the varsity.

As old-timers they had plenty of confidence. That's what the varsity lacks. They are young and need seasoning.

Chief Fogg was the same old chief. Pitching a four-hit game is not an every-day occurrence, especially when one is out of condition.

Big Biff Morse flashed some of the hitting that sent him to Portland of the New England League two summers ago.

A serious mishap was narrowly averted in the pole vault Saturday when Meehan, the clever frosh pole vaulter, broke his pole in mid-air. Fortunately he landed in the vaulting pit and was uninjured.

Union's captain, a crack dash man and pole-vaulter was out of the meet with a pulled tendon. He does ten seconds in the 100-yard dash and close to 12 feet in the pole vault.

Middlebury has a good ball team this spring and is out to add the diamond championship to its basketball and hockey laurels.

Scores (Vermont's opponents in italics):

Norwich 7 Clarkson 1
Middlebury 1 Upsala 0
Tufts 6 Bowdoin 4
Dartmouth 10 Cornell 1
Colby 9 Conn. Aggies 6
Clark 7 Conn. Aggies 1
Springfield 10 Conn. Aggies 3
Mass. Aggies 2 Northeastern 1
Williams 9 Mass. Aggies 8

Ken Strong, New York University's sensational All-American halfback is also an outstanding college ball player and will make a promising recruit for Miller Huggins when he steps into the uniform of the New York Yankees following his graduation this year. Not having had the spring training trip south with Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and the rest of the Yankee fence busters, Strong will be handicapped but college followers who are looking forward to seeing this star in the uniform of a big league ball club will have no fear, because he has the stuff which makes good baseball players. Ask Chick Meehan who was responsible for winning so many of his gridiron battles last season, and he will tell you about a big boy who has everything before him and a wonderful record of collegiate prowess behind, to back up his efforts.

The annual I. C. 4 A. track meet will be held May 31 and June 1 on Franklin Field, Philadelphia. The cream of the country will be there, as usual.

GREEN AND GOLD OPENS SERIES AT MIDDLEBURY

First Game for State Championship on Thursday—Panthers Have Strong Veteran Line-up

Thursday will see the opening of the state baseball series, when the Green and Gold nine will meet the Middlebury team, on the Blue and White's own field. Middlebury's aggregation has a strong representation this year, at least, as strong as the team which they put on the field last season, for it is made up almost entirely of veterans. They have an outstanding pitcher in "Ike" White, a catcher and captain of this season's team, and Cone, who had made a fine showing in every game in which he has appeared this year. Last Saturday he was in the box against Lowell College and shut them out by the close score of 2-0. Cook had ten strikeouts to his credit in this game.

The great weakness of the Blue and White seems to be in its stick work, for they have not been able to connect with the pill to any extent in any game this season. Here is the great advantage that the Vermonters seem to hold for they have a strong defensive system and probably will hold their opponents to a low score while they have had a pretty good average at the plate. Another advantage lies in the fact that they have had quite a bit more practice than the Blue and White due to the southern trip games.

In all probability it will be a close game with the defensive strength of Vermont pitted against the pitching and experience of their opponents. The Middlebury nine presents by far the strongest opposition that the Green and Gold will have on its march toward the state series and if they succeed in taking the two games from Middlebury they will have half of their work done toward the pennant.

The probable line-ups:

Middlebury—Franzoni ss, Hassel rf, Nelson cf, Anderson 2b, Hunnestone 1f, Willis c, Sorenson 1b, Kelley 3b, Cook p.

Vermont—Lay, ss, Traynor 2b, Howard 1f, Macumber c, Morse, c, McKay 3b, Sargent 1b, Wimant, lf, Wood p.

"Just would you mind telling me will you paddle Life's Canoe with me or on the Sea of Matrimony ?"

The prof a newcomer and young—blushing furiously, tongue-tied and flabbergasted, begged her to repeat it. With an effort she did.

The young Prospect, gripping audibly and casting wild looks for a means of escape, scraped his throat and wetting his dried lips he answered:

"I accept your proposal, though it is a year too late." He then left the room.

PREPARE TENTATIVE CALENDAR FOR 1930

Dean's Office Issues Social Calendar for Coming Year Prior to Preparation of Final Draft

ALL EVENTS COME ONE DAY SOONER NEXT YEAR

Christmas Vacation Extended One Day and Easter Recess Prolonged Two Days According to Calendar

A meeting of students and faculty on Wednesday May 1, made a tentative draft of the Social Calendar for next year. This is printed below and is now posted on the Bulletin Board in the Old Mill. All interested should study the Calendar carefully with a view toward improving it.

A second meeting to formulate the final draft will be held in the Dean's Office Wednesday, May 22 at 4.15 Suggestions or corrections should be made in writing and given to Dean Patterson or Dean Swift before that time.

The Social Calendar goes back some three years to a period when the Honor Societies and Fraternities were giving dances the same week-ends and even the same nights and public dances were resulting in deficits. Following the example of other institutions, the College adopted a Social Calendar and it has improved conditions here decidedly.

Since much of the benefit of the Calendar arises from its fixing dates Easter Sunday falls on April 20, well outside the limits of the Easter recess.

The social calendar for the college year 1929-1930 is as follows:

Sept.
- 27 Wednesday, Men's Fraternities.
- 28 Thursday, Thanksgiving.
- 29 Friday, Class Plays.
- 30 Saturday, Women's Fraternities.

definitely, all interested should see to it now that the dates suggested for the coming year are satisfactory rather than try to change them next year when changes are difficult to make and bound to cause conflicts.

Next year, in general, college events occur a day earlier than this. The opening day will be Wednesday, September 17, and Commencement falls on June 16. Christmas vacation is one day longer and Easter vacation two days longer than this year, while

Smoker Tips 16 on Big Secret

Larus & Brother Company
Richmond, Va.

Gentlemen:

In the past twenty years I have been a consistent smoker. I was always anxious to smoke a pipe; but no matter how often I tried, I soon changed my mind. I have tried all kinds of pipe tobacco, but not once was I satisfied with the taste of any of them until just recently I gave my pipe another trial.

It was my luck to choose Edgeworth this time, with the results that I am still using it and will continue to do so. I only hope that you will continue to give that same mild, high-grade quality in the future.

I have started not less than sixteen men to start or give Edgeworth a trial, and they are still using that same unequaled non-biting tobacco to this day. I can recommend Edgeworth tobacco to anybody who enjoys a cool non-biting brand of good tobacco, and as long as I enjoy same, you can rest assured that I am going to be a good ad, and many a pipe smoker will be asked to give it a fair trial, and they themselves can act as judges.

I always give praise where praise is due. After I was convinced of the wonderful quality of Edgeworth I could not help but tell you people the same as I have been telling and will in the future tell others.

Hoping that you will continue with the same quality in Edgeworth, I am

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Joseph J. Stahl

JOHN DEWEY CLUB HEARS BOTANY TALK

Psychology and Philosophy Club Again Listens to Prominent Faculty Speaker Who Talks on "How The Biologist Might Regard It"

SAYS ONLY ATHEISM IS DENIAL OF TRUTH

Professor Gershoy Speaks On Relationship of Biology to Philosophy and Psychology

Professor A. Gershoy, of the botany department, spoke to the members of the John Dewey Club last Tuesday evening on "How the Biologist Might Regard It." He indicated the genuine relationship of biology to philosophy and psychology, and touched briefly upon various aspects of his question.

"In its wider appeal to human thought biology is a speculative science," declared Professor Gershoy. Stripped of the drier aspects of form and data, and of controlled experimental facts, it is admirably adapted to theorizing. To the Greeks it derived its main interest in the illumination it gave to human life and conduct, that is, to ethics.

"One is tempted to ask if biology is an outgrowth of the tendency of the mind to speculate, or whether the study of matter in its various manifestations has led to philosophy. There seems to be no escape from an anthropocentric point of view at all times. That we seek to understand ourselves via a study of the activities of lower forms, or attempt to interpret lower forms in terms of ourselves merely illustrates the fact."

The speaker declared that each man, each scientist sees the world from his own particular point of view, but that ultimately perhaps all phenomena will be expressed in purely physical-chemical terms. Speaking on the cell, he said that its origin was probably entirely fortuitous; and that the stream of its evolution was conducting it even to greater specialization.

Now to deal with an even more abstract conception, that of the plasticity of the human being and of his ability to adapt himself to or to conquer the environment. To say that a man conquers his environment is a bit of poetic abstraction and somewhat of a misnomer. One means that man can protect his comparatively feeble frame against the rigors of his environment. Neither the biologist nor the philosopher can think of man or any other living organism without its environment. The living thing and the world it is born into together form an interacting, mutually influencing system."

Concerning the mechanistic and vitalistic views of the nature of the universe, Professor Gershoy said that mechanistic and vitalistic are merely terms. Before biology can arrive at any definite conclusion as to the nature of the universe, it will be necessary to wait until the findings of both physics and chemistry are more complete.

In conclusion, Professor Gershoy stated that "the only atheism is denial of the search for truth."

VERMONT MUSICIANS TO THROW COLLEGE NIGHT AT BAYSIDE PAVILION

On the night of May 14, the much-maligned roof of one Bayside Dance Pavilion will rise and fall in perfect harmony with the torrid strains of Ozzie Ralfe's Nighthawks. In the orchestra—Bob Buckley, Freddie Lynch, Chico Carr, Paul Lane and Claire Hessian from U. V. M.; Al Bernardino, Rez Fennell, Bones Peck and Bill Caise, all well known to college dance crowds.

What's on? Oh, nothing much! Just a combined College and Fraternity Night! Prize for the loudest (not the best) rendition of your fraternity song. Singing. Dancing. Whoopee!

NAMES PARTICIPANTS IN DECLAMATION CONTEST

Mr. M. D. Powers, instructor in argumentation and debate, made public today the names of five contestants scheduled to appear in the annual Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest, which will probably be held early next week. The five are: B. Baker, '31 of Roxbury, Mass.; E. M Codding, '31 of Bellows Falls; L. Lisman, '31, of Burlington; D. H. Frazier, '32, of Burlington; and R. S. Jenks, '32, of Burlington

PROFESSOR WILKINSON SPEAKS ON LORD CECIL "A GREAT STATESMAN"

Head of History Department Addresses Young People's Fellowship of Congregational Church

Professor Wilkinson, head of the history department, spoke before the Young People's Fellowship of the Congregational Church on "A Great Statesman." He quoted Mr. J. L. Garvin, editor of the London Observer, as saying that Lord Robert Cecil is one of the outstanding statesmen of the present generation. Following this assertion, Professor Wilkinson proceeded to answer the following question: Who is Lord Robert Cecil, why is he one of the foremost political figures of the age, and finally what is the religious significance of the political and international views with which Lord Robert Cecil happens to be identified?

Prominent in Politics

Professor Wilkinson explained that Lord Robert Cecil is one of the Cecil lans who have been prominent in British political affairs since the time of Queen Elizabeth. Lord Balfour, Lord Hugh Cecil and the present Marquis of Salisbury were mentioned as members of this distinguished family. After pointing out that it is quite customary for men of this class to take an active part in political affairs, Professor Wilkinson showed just why Lord Robert Cecil was entitled to the high praise accorded him by Mr Garvin.

Not only has Lord Robert Cecil been an advocate of a better economic system in his own country but he has been a foremost leader in striving for a better international order. In his pamphlet entitled "The New Outlook" Lord Robert Cecil has pointed out that nationalism was the distinctive achievement of the nineteenth century. The great statesmen of that period were Bismarck, Cavour, and Lincoln. In the first half of the 19th century, for instance, there was no Germany. Bismarck's great achievement was the making of a strong, unified nation. Cavour did the same for Italy, which in Metternich's time was only a geographical expression. Likewise in America there was no strong national feeling until under Lincoln's guidance the question of state sovereignty was decided in favor of a compact union. To preserve the union was the issue of the outbreak of the Civil War. So strong was the appeal of the state to a citizen's devotion and loyalty in the South that a figure such as Robert E Lee had no hesitancy in declaring his allegiance to the state of Virginia rather than give his support to the national government. This was part of that nationalism which characterized the 19th century.

Leader in New Order

Today there is to be seen the beginning of a movement towards internationalism and Lord Robert Cecil is a conspicuous exponent of this new order. This is seen in his support of the League of Nations, the World Court, disarmament and such pacts as the Kellogg Treaty and the Locarno Treaty.

In conclusion the speaker pointed out how these efforts on the part of such leaders as Lord Robert Cecil were helping in a practical, concrete fashion to realize the doctrines of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man as enunciated by the Galilean teacher nineteen centuries ago.

VERMONT GETS THIRD IN LITERARY CONTEST

University Given Last Place in Tri-college Contest for First Time in Four Years

TAKES A THIRD IN EACH OF THE THREE CLASSES

New Hampshire Judged the Winner in Short Story, Essay, and Poetry Competition—Maine Second

For the first time in four years the University of Vermont has trailed the field in the annual tri college literary contest between the University of Maine, New Hampshire State and the University of Vermont. The contest is divided into three classes short story, essay and poetry--with prizes of $25, $15 and $10 in each class. This year Vermont took third place with three third places one in each class. New Hampshire State won the contest, taking four places, including two firsts, a tie for first, and a second, which is one of the best records ever made, although two years ago Vermont scored five places. The University of Maine took two places this year, a tie for first and a second. Maine picked the poetry judges, New Hampshire the essay judges, and Vermont the short story judges. The short story judges were Sophie Gates Kerr, author, Gertrude Lane, editor Woman's Home Companion; and Prof. G. W. Benedict, Brown University. Elizabeth Ahern of New Hampshire, who has figured in the scoring in preceding years, did the best individual work this year, capturing a first and a second, a record that has never been equalled, although Janice Goodrich of Vermont two years ago took a first and a third. Only one man placed in the scoring. Those who scored for Vermont were Mary Turner of Montague City, Mass., in the short story; Margaret Rice of Brattleboro in the essay, and Janice Goodrich of Richmond in poetry.

In the short story contest Elizabeth Ahern of New Hampshire took first with her story "Property," Frances Babb of Maine second with her story "Living Death" and Mary Turner of Vermont third with her story "But We Are Like That."

In the essay contest Doris Vivian of New Hampshire took first with her essay "Ipswich Beach," Elizabeth Ahern of New Hampshire second place with her essay "The Connecticut Breaks Camp," and Margaret Rice of Vermont third with her essay, "My Grandfather's Library."

In the poetry contest Dorothy Dunklee of New Hampshire and Philip Brockway of Maine tied for first place, and Janice Goodrich of Vermont took third.

COOLIDGE AND KINGSLEY ARE NEVER DICKERERS LIKE OTHER VERMONTERS

Coolidge's Election to Insurance Company's Board of Directors Arranged on Short Order

People who think that Vermonters always dicker should know how Calvin Coolidge and Darwin P. Kingsley do business.

A week from Wednesday on the 8th of May to be exact, our ex-President will be elected to the board of directors of New York Life Insurance Company. How much dickering preceded this transaction? Two notes and an interview between the ex President and a vice-president of the company. Trust the President of the New York Life to know how to do business with a fellow Vermonter!

Last year he wrote Mr. Coolidge a holograph note, casting his bread upon the waters, you might say. The President's secretary acknowledged the receipt of the note, and there the

CLARK TELLS CHAPEL GOERS TO FORGET HATE

Dr. W. C. Clark of Bakersfield Vt. spoke at chapel Wednesday morning on "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth."

A Biblical character once dug a well, but the land was soon claimed. He dug another and then another before he could have a well without claim. This man is often criticized as lacking in pluck to oppose his rivals, for to some competition seems the keystone of life. A story illustrates this point.

Two men, "Ikey" and "Jakey," had two respective businesses, but Ikey's" business was in the decline. A fairy came to him and said, "Ikey you may have any wish you want on the condition that 'Jakey' is to have twice as much." "Ikey" thought a while and then said, "I wish I were half dead."

He that hateth his brother is a murderer and a moral descendant of Cain. Beware of the evils that result from competition. Dig a well where there are no rivals to encounter. One enjoys prosperity more if it is shared.

A man found a spring and put a gate around it and tried to sell it. The people said that the water was a public utility and they piped the water to the community at cost.

No one can be spiritually successful until he forgets hate. The world does not now recognize meekness, but in time a modest man will be recognized as a benefactor and be encouraged to go higher in the spiritual world.

GREY FRIARS SOCIETY HOLDS LAST MEETING OF ITS SECOND SEASON

Men's Literary Organization Celebrates Highly Active Year With Banquet—Five Admitted During Past Few Months

Last night Grey Friars, men's honorary literary society, held their second banquet of the year in the private banquet room of the Hotel Vermont. The speakers were Prof. W. J. Wilkinson of the University, Dean Elijah Swift, Senator W. H. Crockett, and Professor Leon W. Dean an honorary member of the society. This interesting affair brought to a close a very active year for the organization.

Grey Friars has met twice a month throughout the year in a variety of places including the Radio Shack, the Vermonters' Club house, Sally's Restaurant, private houses and the Hotel Vermont. At each meeting there was at least one outside speaker, many of whose writings by the various members were read and criticized, and Mr. Dean and other guests joined in the discussions and spoke briefly. During the past year the society has heard several interesting and well known speakers including Professor W. E. Aiken, Mr. Mervin H. Lanford, Professor G. G. Grant, President Guy W. Bailey, Professor A. B. Myrick and Professor Leon W. Dean.

To become a member a student must submit two manuscripts, each of a different type of writing, for examination, and then be voted on by the members. Those who were admitted during the past year are: G. W. Shaff '30, Louis Lisman '31, A. J. Morin '30, S. B. Barker '30, and J. C. Carter '30. All are well known in literary activities on the campus. Lisman being news editor of the Cynic, Morin an assistant editor of the Cynic and Barker a contributing editor of the Vermont Literary Magazine.

Under the leadership of Charles H. Ogorin '29, president for the past year, many projects have been started which include the subscription of a fund to buy new books relevant to the work of the organization for the coming year and for the purchase of writers' journals. Robert L. Stewart, '30, the incoming president already has started planning for next year. He hopes to secure several well known authors to speak to future meetings.

CATS TAKE TRACK AND FIELD CONTEST

Defeat Mass. Aggies 72 to 63 in Thrilling Finish—Vermont Gets Seven Firsts, Two Ties, Six Seconds, Eight Thirds

LYMAN, KROPPER, BERRY WIN TWO FIRSTS EACH

Victory Comes Towards Last as Vermont Takes 440 and Places in Hammer and High Jump

Vermont defeated Mass. Aggies in track and field on Alumni Field, Amherst, Mass., last Tuesday afternoon after a whirlwind finish, by a 72 to 63 score.

The Aggies took a commanding lead in the track events but a clean sweep in the discus and first and third places in the hammer and pole vault, the final events of the meet, enabled the Green and Gold to outpoint the Bay Staters.

Berry and Kropper of Vermont took two firsts each. Berry dashed in ahead of the field in the 100 and 220 while Kropper copped the discus and shot put. Lyman also won the pole vault and tied for first in the 120 yard low hurdles besides making the third best broad jump. Snell was high scorer for M. A. C. with firsts in the 880 yard and one mile runs.

Woodward's victory in the 440 yard dash, Mackay's first place in the hammer throw, and a tie for first in the high jump gave Vermont a total of seven firsts and two ties for first which allowed the Catamounts to break even in this respect. The Cats had six seconds and eight thirds.

The summary:

120 yard high hurdles: Tie for first between Little (M A C) and Lyman (V); third, Howard (V.). Time: 18.2 seconds.

120 yard dash: Won by Berry (V); second, Hammond (M A C); third Kay (M A C). Time: 10.5 seconds.

Mile run: Won by Snell (M A C); second, Hunter (M A C); third, Maynes (V). Time: 4 minutes, 53.6 seconds.

440 yard dash: Won by Woodward (V); second, Huey (V.); third, Robertson (M A C). Time: 55.9 seconds.

2-mile run: Won by Herman (M A C); second Wilder (V); third, Coven (M A C). Time: 10 minutes, 58.5 seconds.

220 yard dash: Won by Berry (V); second, Hammond (M A C); third, Kelley (M A C). Time: 23.6 seconds.

220 yard low hurdles: Won by Davis (M A C); second, Douglas (V); third, Billings (V). Time: 28.6 seconds.

FROSH CLASS ELECTS OFFICERS ON MONDAY

Results Show Paul Armstrong President—Rauh, Beggs, Kazlauskas, Wilder, Parks, Proctor and Winant Also Honored

As the result of the freshman class election, held Monday afternoon in the Old Chapel, Paul Armstrong, of North Attleboro, Mass., is the president of the class for next year. Kathryn A. Rauh will be the new vice-president, while Carolyn Beggs will hold the office of secretary. The election for treasurer resulted in a tie between Victor Kazlauskas and Everett Wilder, necessitating a revote in the near future. The Student Senate representatives will be Charles Parks, Fletcher Proctor, and Edward Winant. The new Faculty Council representatives are Lillian Mount and Paul Weston.

All the new officers are well known members of the class, and in no case, except that of president and of treasurer, was the election close. Eight votes separated the winning president

Junior Week Has Been A Real Gala Event For Over Thirty Long Years

For over thirty years now Junior Week has been one of the gala events of the college year. In 1902 there was a minor celebration made up of the usual promenade a Glee Club concert the Cotillion Club dance and the women's first baseball game. It was not given the great importance however after much agitation on the editorial columns of the Cynic and on the campus that a real Junior Week occurred.

1905 Junior Week a Great Success

In 1905 the affair was scheduled for the last week in April. On the Tuesday before there was a large and very enthusiastic meeting in the Old Mill at which arrangements were made for the following week. Professor Goodrich was there with a talk on Pound Ole Jim an was representatives of the Glee Club Cynic and the Histrionic Club. The committee was made up of Wood Carton Burrows Stanley Lumbert and Cutting with Wood as chairman. Chairman Wood set forth the plans and work and asked the hearty cooperation of all students that Junior Week might become an annual affair. He also handed out cards programs bound in green and gold. This year it was a great success and attained the great popularity with the students which it has held ever since.

The next year brought forth essentially the same events except that a class supper was added and an interclass track meet while in 1907 we find a Junior class banquet being given. The following year brought the Junior Week play into being along with the Peerade to advertise it.

R. G. Amsdell, '99, Writes Junior Week Play

From the first the Histrionics Club had staged a series of one act plays and farces for Junior Week audiences but it was not until 1909 that a real play was put on. In that year Wig and Buskin produced "William Wallace Wycomb" a farce-comedy in three acts by Roger G. Amsdell then a senior at the University. The action was brisk its feature being a mass of mistaken identities, and "the unravelling of the plot was ingeniously contrived" as the Cynic report put it. The play was greatly appreciated it is said that there was not a weak spot in the cast which included G. S. Harris, E. W. Chaffee, G. P. Tuttle, D. W. Kipper, H. A. Gregg, R. G. Ramsdell, C. F. Macrae, W. White, Elias Lyman and G. E. Scott.

Class of '09 Features Peerade

A Peerade had been held the previous year to advertise the college play but in that year it was made a feature of Junior Week. Signs were pasted on the Campus and notices were inserted in the Cynic urging everyone to turn out. The Peerade was a most strenuous affair with a very large proportion of the student body taking part and wearing highly original costumes. It made its way down Pearl to Church Street down Church to Main and back to college. In 1911 Wig and Buskin offered a small cup for individuals a large cup for the most elaborate float and another small cup for the most original float.

Delta Psi Wins 1928 Cup

The cup for the best fraternity stunt was awarded last year by Wig and Buskin to the Delta Psi fraternity. Robinson Hall won the cup for the women's dormitories and Richard H. Curtis '29 won a small cup for the most individual stunt.

Delta Psi's stunt was the first long ago forty feet a cover drawn of a farm towing a row boat in which sat a row of ludicrously dressed passengers whose chief occupation was bailing out water from their craft. The long green serpent easily the longest float in the line from under which showed the feet of numerous co-eds, won the cup for women's dormitories. "The Height of Entertainment" which was none other than Richard Curtis on very high stilts, took the individual award. Curtis could not join the Peerade until it had descended the Main Street hill and from that point on he attracted universal attention.

Majority of Floats Showed Similarity

A strong similarity of feature marked most of the other floats. Sigma Nu followed the band with a float depicting Adam and Eva in the Country. Phi Delta Theta presented in three scenes the Evolution of Adam and Eva from the lowest stages of barbarity to the highest. Zeta Chi followed with an individual stunt—Adam wheeling a baby carriage. "In Our Vermont Paradise" featuring Ira Allen was Lambda Iota's entry. Phi Mu Delta presented a float in two scenes. Adam and Eva 1000 B.C. and Adam and Eva 1928 A.D. Kappa Sigma's float featured the expulsion of Adam and Eva from the Garden of Eden. The Rand House gave a scene from the play in which appeared a number of its characters, entitled "Eve didn't give Adam an Apple." Another play scene appeared in Grasse Mount's float "See King Get His Money's Worth."

Twelfth in the line of march was Sigma Phi's picture of a modern farm scene which bore the title "How Adam got His Start." Sigma Alpha Chi presented a scene from an old Miracle play. Kappa Sigma, in addition to its regular stunt, had an individual stunt as well showing Adam and Eva in barrels, labeled "Censored by Dean Patterson." Zeta Chi, too, had two entries, the fraternity stunt showing Adam and Eva in the Garden of Eden. Kappa Alpha Theta's was a double float of two auto loads of coeds. The first was labeled "Although you can't see Adam and Eva today." The second completed the legend "You can see them tonight." Campus House had a gaily decorated roadster of pretty co-eds "Adam's Eves." Another Garden scene, a modern Eve in a garden eating an apple was entered by Redstone and bore the placard, "Yield to Temptation."

Eighteen Floats in 1928 Peerade

Eighteen floats advertising the Junior Week play followed the band down Main Street along Church Street, Pearl to St. Paul and back to the College. Nine fraternities were represented six women's dormitories were entered and three stunts competed for the individual award.

The judges of the Peerade were Professor J. T. Metcalf, Leon W. Dean and E. H. Thornton of the Chittenden County Trust Company who observed the Peerade as it passed the Sherwood Hotel.

VERMONT REPRESENTED AT ALL-SPORTS DAY AT ST. LAWRENCE U., MAY 11

Vermont is to be represented by eight coeds at an All-Sports Day at St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y. on May 11. Those who will make the trip are Estabel Perriman, '30, president of W. A. A., Helen Buck, '30, representative for tennis, Marion Baldwin, '29, archery, Jean Beidler, '30, baseball, Marian Everest, '29, hockey, Edith Abbott, '31, basketball, Lillian Mount and Doris Humphries, '32, track. Mrs. Florence Farr Hard will accompany the girls. The group will leave Burlington Friday morning by bus, accompanied by the group from Middlebury and will return Sunday morning.

Sports days are being held all over the country in an effort to college women to get away from intercollegiate competition. The colleges play together in the interest of sports for sports sake.

Cornell University and Syracuse University will also be represented with Vermont and Middlebury at St. Lawrence University. "Kaiom," the senior honorary society at St. Lawrence is giving all the representatives a good time Friday night at an All-Get-Together and the Sports Day will be held Saturday.

At a meeting of the Home Economics Club Thursday afternoon May 2 at the Practice House the following officers were elected: Alma Farr, '30, president; Janice Davis, '31, vice-president; Helen Taylor, '31, secretary; Helen Laflaton, '32, treasurer. Mrs. H. A. Mayforth gave a very interesting talk on "Service." Plans were made for a rummage sale with Helen Wilson, '30, in charge. Narcissa Goodsell, '30, presided at the meeting.

NEWARK ESSAY CONTEST FOR CATHOLIC STUDENTS

Students who are members of the Newman Club of the University of Vermont are informed that an essay contest in which they may be interested is now taking place. This essay contest is under the auspices of the Newark Conference of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade in conjunction with Mission Sunday and the Mission Week membership campaign, May 12 to 19, and has been announced by the Rev. John A. Weisbrod, field secretary of the C. S. M. C. The subject of the essay is "The C. S. M. C. and Mission Aid."

All essays must be in Father Weisbrod's office, 1 Mulberry Street, Newark, not later than May 11. The essay contributing the best suggestion toward constructive progress in mission education through the channels of the crusade will merit extra credit.

Three Classes

The essay contest will be divided into three classes: A, colleges, 1,500 words minimum; B, high schools, 1,000 words minimum; C, grammar schools, 500 words minimum. There will be three prizes in each division. In the college and high school divisions the first second and third prizes will be $20, $10 and $5 in gold, respectively. In the grammar school division the prizes will be $10, $5 and $2.50. With each prize will be presented a copy of the Rev. T. Gaven Duffy's book, "Dawning Day."

Each school competing is requested to hold a preliminary contest of essays. Colleges are advised to submit the best three essays from each class, high schools the best four essays from the entire school and grammar schools, the best two essays from the seventh and eighth grades. Prizes will be awarded at the close of the contest.

The work must be strictly and entirely student endeavor, but reference works may be used to supply information. A number of reference works have been suggested and can be obtained at cost from diocesan headquarters.

tial candidate from the others. Mr. Armstrong belongs to Phi Delta Theta, and is popular with all his classmates. He played on the class basketball team.

Miss Raub, who comes from South Orange, N. J., has been prominent in both athletics and dramatics. She will have a part in the Junior Week play. She is a Kappa Alpha Theta.

Miss Beggs, who is a Pi Phi, has been prominent in college activities besides being extremely popular. Her home is in Brooklyn.

Everett Wilder, recently elected to Gold Key and one of the men tied for treasurer, comes from Petersham, Mass. He is a track man, the two-mile and cross-country being his specialties. Sigma Alpha Epsilon is his fraternity. Victor Kazlauskas is an A. T. O. from New Britain, Conn.

Charles Parks is an S. A. E., who comes from Grafton. Fletcher Proctor comes from Barton. Edward Winsor of Larchmont, N. Y., played on both the football and basketball class teams. At the present time he is playing baseball. He is a Kappa Sigma.

Miss Mount, the new representative to the Faculty Council, is also next year's representative on W. A. A. Her home is in Burlington, and she belongs to Alpha Chi Omega. Paul Westin is a new Gold Key man who earned his numerals as assistant manager of freshman football. He is a Delta Psi. His home is in Proctor.

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE HAD CAPABLE SPEAKERS

International Institute held at Vermont had two of the most capable speakers obtained by New England colleges, in the persons of Dr. Gruening, editor of the Portland Evening News, and Dr. Samuel L. Joshi, professor of Comparative religions and Indian Philosophy at Dartmouth College. An article concerning Dr. Gruening's last venture up in Maine appeared in a recent issue of the New Republic. Also, an article written by Dr. Joshi appeared in a recent issue of the Literary Digest.

The total number of International Institutes and Christian World Education Institutes held this year on college campuses has reached eighty. The number of students and professors participating being around 50,000. Most of the Institutes lasted two days and were closely linked up with the regular class room work, supplemented by special assemblies and forums. Some colleges are already planning to repeat with a "bigger and better" institute next year. It is not definitely known whether Vermont will be one of those colleges.

matter rested until the 23rd of February when Mr. Coolidge himself replied to Mr. Kingsley, who was then spending a vacation in Arizona. Mr. Kingsley got his Vice-President on long distance and the ex-President and the Vice-President closed the matter in one Vermontish little chat. "Does anyone believe that a native of any other State, however estimable, could have dealt with Mr. Coolidge just like that?"

Darwin Kingsley Graduated in 1881

Mr. Kingsley has travelled a long way since his boyhood days on a farm in Alburg, when he worked his way through college "dreaming of a larger world." He was graduated from the University of Vermont in 1881, and took his A.M. in '84. After his graduation, he went to a Wyoming ranch and at Christmas time in '81, he went to Denver where he taught for a year. Then he went to Grand Junction, a frontier town in those days, where he soon bought a newspaper. He edited this paper himself until the first of January, '87, when he went to the Capitol at Denver to serve two years as State Auditor and Superintendent of Insurance.

Here he became interested in insurance, and decided to make it his life work.

He went to Boston for the New York Life Insurance Company, and later (1892) came to New York, and became president of the company in 1907. In 1905, just before his election to the presidency, came the dark days for insurance and it took the right kind of Vermonter to send the company on its upward way.

The more you look at the company's new building, (just completed) the more you appreciate the great things for which it stands. The building, like anything worth seeing in New York, has to be looked at more than once. It presents a rare combination of beauty and power, and is worthy of the time and thought Mr. Kingsley devoted to its plans during the ten years preceding its erection.

Mr. Kingsley is one of the fortunate men who not only achieve their ambitions, but enjoy them after they get them. But, as he says, almost any man would be satisfied with the presidency of the New York Life. He likes the new building even better than he expected, and can say the same of the presidency, which he has enjoyed for twenty-two years.

Kingsley is Author of Four Volumes

Mr. Kingsley is the author of four volumes of addresses which have been published by New York Life—"The First Business of the World," "Militant Life Insurance," "Let Us Have Peace," "Life Insurance Is Right." As the titles suggest, they deal largely with insurance, but they are by no means exclusively devoted to it.

As President of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York Mr. Kingsley was interested in everything pertaining to civic welfare, he had interested himself in politics since his days as a Colorado editor; as a golfer, he was and is interested in his pet game, and as a many-sided man, constantly growing, he was and is interested in almost everything worth while. So the addresses show a surprising variety of subjects.

Wrote on Ira Allen

One of the best is on Ira Allen, the knightly youth "who founded a University and a State," delivered at the University of Vermont when the statue given by Mr. James B. Wilbur was dedicated. One of the most pleasing features of this address is the way Mr. Kingsley gives Ira Allen his due without snatching at any of his brother's laurels.

The splendid memorial to John Purroy Mitchel, and the Minute on the Death of President Wilson both adopted by the New York Chamber of Commerce show that Mr. Kingsley can appreciate men with whom he doesn't always agree. The jolly addresses, "Falstaff's Defense of Age" and "In Praise of Age," must have given much enjoyment to his fellow golfers. The addresses "The Japan Society," "Belgium" and "Shall We P..." the Innkeeper's Bill," show his interest in international affairs. "The Sin of the Church" shows him at home among churchmen, while the tender little tribute "My Mother" touches a responsive chord in every mother's heart and in the heart of every mother's son.

In the preface to his last volume he says that he finds himself more happily situated than at 30, and finds life even more interesting now than he did then. "All who reach 70 have at least had a chance," he says. Who will say that he hasn't pushed his chance?

Attends Every Commencement

Mr. Kingsley spends part of every August in Manchester, Vermont, and always attends Commencement at the University of Vermont, unless he is out of the country. He has been a trustee of the University for longer than any one now living except Mr. Roberts. He received LL.D. from the University in 1915 and an L.H.D. in 1916.

Although the New York Life has been taken by Vermonters for the past five or six Vermont alumni, the president and one son (at the home office) New Yorkers, have the matter to heart. In fact the Lotus Club gave Mr. Kingsley a dinner in January. When you've been honored by the Lotus Club dinner, Little Old New York is yours.

Mr. Kingsley is a life member of the Museum of Natural History, belongs to the New England and Vermont societies, and to a number of metropolitan clubs. His diversified interests keeps him young. He is in "Who's Who" and his own family you'd never suspect his dear old mother lived to be 92, and proceeded to be every likelihood of outliving the family record. (Burlington Free Press.)

HARTWELL AGAIN TALKS ON MEXICAN PROBLEM

Dartmouth Graduate, Studying for His Master's Degree in Latin-American History at Vermont, Addresses Exchange Club

Some of the major problems that have and are confronting the people of Mexico were outlined at noon to members of the Exchange at the Hotel Vermont by Mr. Hartwell, of the historical department of the University. Mr. Hartwell is a graduate of Dartmouth College and is spending a year at the University of Vermont on his master's degree in Latin-American history. He has recently completed a thesis on Mexico and has extended study of the country, its government, people and politics. During the summer of 1930 Mr. Hartwell expects to go to Mexico to continue studies in this direction.

Land, Labor, Oil are Chief Problems

Mexico's three chief problems were outlined by the speaker as follows: been its land, the labor problem and its effort to stop foreign penetration. At some length, Mr. Hartwell well explained the history of ownership of lands in Mexico. There are approximately 500,000,000 acres of land in the country, only 50,000,000 are under cultivation. Throughout the time since Mexico was settled by Spanish conquistadors there has always been trouble over land ownership, a comparatively few persons owning property and a small percentage making up the working class.

Since 1917 much progress has been made in the labor problem, the peons having been passed to and the working classes. However, the speaker pointed out, the laborer is still poor. In 1910 the working man was receiving practically the same wage as he received in 1790. This amounted to about 12½ to 37½ cents a day. To show the unfairness of the wage the speaker pointed out that the cost of living had advanced approximately 300 percent during the same period.

A brief history of Mexico's oil problem was given to show how Mexico has attempted to keep foreign powers from gaining possession of her great economic resources. The oil is the more important at the present time, it was stated that the value of foreign investments in the country amounts to $1,875,000,000 of the total value of all property which was given as $2,500,000,000. This indicates that foreigners have a very strong hold upon property in Mexico. Citizens of the United States have a very large percentage of this foreign investment.

In 1926 a law was passed by the Mexican government which would have forced all outside property owners to give up their property to the government. Taken to the United States Supreme court the law was held void as the big oil interests being permitted to lease (indefinitely) oil lands rather than own them. The Doheny and Mellon interests are said to own some of the most valuable oil lands in the country and to have approximately 50 percent of the entire Mexican oil property. It was the opinion of the speaker that the Mexican supreme court permitted the continuance of large oil holdings to remain in the hands of outsiders because the government (which really controls the court) did not wish to have any more trouble with the United States.

She: "I can go out to dinner with you tonight."

He: "Does your mother know you are coming?"

The University of Vermont has given ...itary instruction since 1870. Milit... training in general had its incep... in colleges many years ago when the so-called Morrill Act, sponsored by Senator Justin S. Morrill of Vermont, granted government aid to one college in each state in return for the maintenance by it of a military course open to all male students of suitable age and physique. Colleges operating under this act are known as Land Grant Colleges, and the universal method taken by these institutions in order to carry out their contract with the government has been for them to require military training of all students for two years of their course.

Military Compulsory Since 1870

The University of Vermont is one of the so-called "Land-Grant Institutions" and military instruction has been given at this institution continuously since 1870. Throughout this period, all physically fit members of the freshman and sophomore classes have been required to take the course in the military department, while the advanced course has been optional for the members of the junior and senior classes. Uniforms, which were purchased by the students, have always been worn at drills, the style and color having changed many times throughout this period. During practically this entire period an officer of the regular army has been on duty as professor of military science and tactics.

During the World War, a unit of the S. A. T. C. was maintained at the University of Vermont. Signal corps, automobile and mechanical units were also maintained here.

R. O. T. C. Infantry Unit Established in 1916

An infantry unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Course was established at this institution in the fall of 1916, at which time there was only one officer and one non-commissioned officer of the regular army detailed to the unit and the total enrollment was approximately two hundred.

Present Enrollment Over 400

At the present time the enrollment is in excess of four hundred. The unit is organized into a battalion of infantry, composed of four companies and a band. Suitable rooms are furnished for offices, armory, store rooms, shooting galleries, drill halls, etc., and arms and equipment for instructional purposes in value in excess of $40,000 are on hand. The cost to the government of maintaining this unit, including amount paid to the advanced course students as commutation of rations will exceed $40,000 for the current college year.

Military training at this University is still compulsory for freshmen and sophomores and optional for juniors and seniors. The military department receives just recognition as do other departments and credit is given for work taken therein. A student excused from drill for physical disability or other reasons is required to take the theoretical work given in the course.

War Dept. Prescribes Instruction

The Reserve Officers Training Corps unit at this institution is a senior infantry unit, and a course of instruction prescribed by the War Department is carried out. A successful completion of the basic course of the R. O. T. C., that is, completion of the first two years' work, is necessary for graduation from the University of Vermont.

U. V. M. Held First Student Camp

It will interest many to know that the first training camp for students ever held in the United States was held in Burlington, Vt., during the period of July 6 to August 7, 1914, on the grounds of the University of Vermont. This camp had an attendance of approximately one hundred and fifty. Major-General Leonard Wood and the Hon. Lindley M. Garrison, secretary of war, were responsible for the establishment of this camp.

The site of the camp was just east of the Weather Bureau on the University farm overlooking the Green Mountains to the west, with Lake Champlain in the foreground.

Guy Potter Benton was president of the University at this time. The camp was under the command of Captain Oliver Edwards, who was then stationed at Plattsburg Barracks. The surgeon of the camp was Major George M. Ekwurzel.

It is of interest to know that the students who attended this camp, which covered a period of some five weeks, each paid $22 to cover the cost of their subsistence while in camp.

U. V. M. at Front in Military Matters

It is to be noted that Vermont is at the front in military matters. In the instance cited of this training camp being on the University grounds in Burlington, it is well to note that the camp preceded all training camps held in Plattsburg, across the lake, or elsewhere and was the first training camp for students anywhere in the United States.

SCABBARD AND BLADE AGAIN DONATES CUP

In accordance with its yearly custom, Scabbard and Blade offers two cups, one to the freshman and the other to the sophomore who wins out in his class competitive drill in the manual of arms. These cups were won last year by E. C. Ball, '30, and B. B. Westremski, '31.

The drill will take place during Federal Inspection on Tuesday morning, May 14, at 9.20, just preceding the inspection of the campus. The freshmen will compete separately from the sophomores.

Officers from the Fort will act as judges and Lieut. Frederick will give the commands.

Mike: "No, yez don't mane it? It's a blame good thing he didn't play the piano."

PHILOSOPHY CLUB PICKS NEXT YEAR'S OFFICERS

Harrison E. Goddard ... was re-elected president of the Lyon Debating Club at the meeting of the executive committee which was held last Tuesday evening at the Newman Club House. Annette Rosenberg was elected vice president, and Edmour Germain secretary-treasurer. Harrison Goddard has been very active in the Glee Club and University Choir, and played the leading male rôles in the operas given this year and last. Annette Rosenberg was recently initiated into the John Dewey Club this year. Edmour Germain has been active in Grey Friars and on the Cynic, and was manager of publicity for the John Dewey Club this year.

Committees Appointed

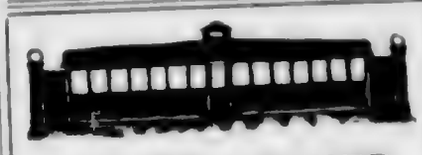
Harrison E. Goddard, president of the organization, announced the committees as follows: Executive committee, the officers of the club; Goddard, Bostwick and Joseph Cutler. Publicity committee, Edmour Germain, chairman, Louis Lisman. Refreshment committee: Geraldine Grenier, chairman, Pauline Burridge, and Mary Woodson. The faculty advisor will be Professor Ewert.

There will be no change in policy next year. It was decided that the constitution needed revision and a committee of two was appointed to make the revision, Robert Lee Stewart and Wilmond Parker. This committee will report at the next meeting.

Following the business part of the meeting, Professor Gershoy gave a talk which is reported in another column of the Cynic.

A MATTER OF INTEREST

Success is largely a matter of being interested.



Find a man that is interested in his work and nine chances out of ten he is possessed of those cardinal attributes which are accepted as the prerequisites of success.

An interested man will be honest, for his reason dictates that honesty is the direct route to attainment. Subterfuges, he recognizes, are poor makeshifts and serve only to clutter up his path of progress.

An interested man will be loyal, for his interest will be based on a faith in his ability to achieve.

An interested man will be industrious, for his interest will be founded on the desire to develop his ideas and to do so he must expand his activity.

An interested man will be efficient, for his interest will be the direct offspring of his aptitude.

Now Finds Sad World Young Again

DREAMS THAT COME TRUE

I am sitting alone in my room tonight,
Dreaming and smoking my old cob pipe;
I smoke and dream, and dream until
I get a plot, and get a thrill.
I am in the writing game, you see;
And the pipe-dreams softly bring to me
Scenes of carnage where the red blood ran,
And the dreams all come from a bright Blue can.
It's just a can of Edgeworth-cut—
Fragrant as flowers—sweet as a nut;
Of all Fate's kindly gifts to man
Is this gift of dreams from the bright Blue can.
I sit me down at eve, to smoke;
And soon am wrapped in a magic cloak;
It has banished trouble, it has banished pain,
And the sad old world is young again.

What Are You Reading?

It is the customary thing nowadays to criticize the college man for everything that he does or doesn't do. So be it. We are caught in that whirlpool of critical views and tendencies and shall therefore proceed to criticize—but in a constructive manner.

What are you reading? The Saturday Evening Post, Liberty, The American Magazine, The American Mercury, College Humor—and the rest. Certainly, there's nothing wrong with them; good, interesting stories; a pleasant way to kill that half hour between activities. But that's just the point. You're killing the half hour!

Now every half hour possesses the inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. It is wrong—very wrong—to kill it.

"But," you say, "who's going to start in on a novel or some long biography when you only have a few minutes at a time to put on it?"

The point is well taken. But you've overlooked two big things:

1. The good short story.
2. The good essay.

Each of these two forms of literature is easily obtainable. The best short stories of every year, and of a series of years, are available in almost every library. A book entitled Great Short Stories of the World—a collection of a characteristic group of the outstanding examples of the short story as it has been practiced from the earliest days of civilization down to the present generation, by writers of almost every nation or race that has made any considerable contribution to the art of telling stories—may, likewise, be had for the asking, in most cases. The more literary periodicals of the day are just packed with worthwhile reading of this sort. No excuse there, my man! Sam Hellman may be funny—but then, so's a burlesque show.

Then there's the short essay. Ever since Michel de Montaigne, who published the first two volumes of his Essais in 1580, broke away from the impersonal moral disquisitions of his day and proceeded to write about himself, his own likes and dislikes, his foibles and idiosyncrasies, the familiar essay started on its upward climb to popularity. The familiar essay is justly popular, for it deals not with abstractions, but actually with ourselves.

Best of all we like to talk about ourselves; the next best thing is hearing somebody talk about himself. In the typical familiar essay, therefore, the pleasing egotism of the writer is matched by a healthy curiosity on the part of the reader in personal experiences, embarrassments, confessions, mistakes, ludicrous and ridiculous blunderings of the writer. And the more personal they are the more we, the readers, like them, because in them we recognize ourselves and our experiences; we come upon echoes of our own thoughts to which we have, unfortunately, never been able to give expression, and we are pleased, too: we all enjoy saying, "How true!"

Both the short story and the light essay are short in length, long in value. They're vivid, fast-moving and modern. They're a good return on that occasional half-hour investment. Try them.

"A doctrine is not believed because God has said it, but because we are convinced by reason that it is so."—Abelard

AN INTELLIGENCE TEST

A Scottish farmer, being elected to the school board, visited the village school and tested the intelligence of the class by the question:

"Now, boys, can any of you tell me what naething is?"

After a moment's silence a small boy in the back seat rose.

"It's what ye gi'd me the other day for holding yer horse."

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

By Ex-Converse Hall

LES MISERABLES

Coming into the house from the garden, where I had become begrimmed, a good washing and scrubbing was first in order. After which, with skin tingling, I found myself, with no excuse at all, quite naturally in the arms of Mrs. Willing.

Mrs. Willing, as the name signifies, was married, and the mother of three children, the eldest of whom was a buxom lass of sixteen. Besides Mrs. Willing and the children, the household consisted of Mr. Willing, a necessary adjunct, I admit, and a hired girl of the simple farmer type.

I learned soon after entering the house that the hired girl might be simple minded, but from the manner in which she attempted to take possession of me, until I was rescued from her clutches by Mrs. Willing, her physical qualities were more complex. I believe the hired girl was a hedonist, but of the old school, or why should she persist in sticking her finger in my eyes? I realized that ill would be my fate in that hired girl's hands!

As I was saying, I found myself in the arms of Mrs. Willing. I didn't mind this in the least, as I said before, or didn't I say? Mrs. Willing, although the mother of three children, was not yet thirty-five. Once the buxom lass took me from her mother, but her mother immediately recaptured me, sending her daughter to the post office to mail a letter. I liked the fresh eagerness of the buxom lass, and the vitalizing effect of her touch. Nevertheless, I didn't mind her mother's possession of me, as I had a natural liking for an older woman, and felt more at ease in her company. An older woman is more reassuring. And her praise was as oil to my flickering ego. Many a time she remarked what a big, strapping, healthy looking specimen I was! Boy, I liked that!

Then the outer door slammed and heavy footsteps sounded in the hallway. Mrs. Willing dropped me like a hot coal and left the room hurriedly. The buxom lass, who had just returned from the post office, started toward me, but at a sharp word from her mother retreated to the dining room where she commenced to set the table.

In the bewildered state I found myself after the rapid sequence of events, who should pounce upon me but the hired girl. What I went through at her hands I cannot fully chronicle here. I certainly felt parboiled! So harsh was her treatment that all reason must have fled me, for I recall little of what happened. I know I cursed her in my own feeble way, with no effect. Was the woman bereft of all but the commonest feeling?

When senses returned somewhat to me, I realized that I lay, as I had feared from the moment the hired girl had taken possession of me, beside a pot. I was still in a half daze, like one coming out of ether, with the feeling that all would turn out well. This was not so bad compared to what I had just gone through.

My composure or reposure, however, was short lived. I was again seized, squeezed, crowded, crushed, pounded, pommeled, and patted against the pot. How I hated that pot! I would have cried out could I have found voice, but even then I realized my lot was hopeless. And the knell of day sounded when the housewife, Mrs. Willing, reappearing, poured milk and butter on me, and gave me a final deft turn, remarking as she did so: "Well, children, you should enjoy this mashed potato."

SAYINGS OF NAUTES

At the present time, there remains one great and outstanding need to be supplied at this great and noble institution of learning. As a student among students, as a sufferer among the others, I have often noted the great and truly pressing need for cuspidors. Up with the cuspidor, down with the spittoon! What we need is a huge, shiny brass one directly in front of the prof's desk.

She was only a chemist's daughter, but she sure had a snappy retort.

The Kappa Sigs are a great bunch of gentlemen. They sure can boss a job well, as witness their swift tire change out in front of the Owl house the other day. All hail the Co-ed Carmen.

(The Song of the Sock.) He was only an astronomer's son; still, he assuredly could assist me to visualize the constellations.

Rumor has it that more votes were cast in the freshman class meeting the other day than there are members in the class. No. of freshmen, 378; No. of votes cast, 572. Such enthusiasm should be rewarded.

Certain well-meaning souls handed out ballots ready-filled-out to the dumber-looking of the frosh.

We apologize to the lame tramp who was mistaken for a senior last Thursday.

Our Platform. (Translated from the Senegambian.)

1. No seven-thirty classes.
2. No Chapel Wednesday morning. Classes meet a half hour later, not earlier.
3. Unlimited cuts.
4. More money.
5. No exams.

Burlington, Vt., U. S. A.
Dear Mr. Duval:

Your card of New Year's Greeting and announcement of the gift of the student body of $400.00 to the Congo Institute recently received. We thank you for both.

We have sent our luggage to the railroad this very noon preparatory to our homeward trip. You may guess we have been fairly busy lately getting things arranged and sorted although we are bringing very little home. We are bringing a few things such as the natives make and use that may be of interest to some home folks. If you are interested I should like to show them to you providing the opportunity permits.

Our homeward itinerary will take us to Denmark for a few weeks. We wish to get a glimpse of their cooperative agricultural work. We will come via England. It is quite impossible to say just when we shall arrive in the United States, much less Vermont.

Please give our best regards to all friends and our thanks to all who made this gift possible.

Sincerely,
Ray and Ruth Smalley.

To the Editor of the Cynic:

At last Slade cottage is to be finished and ready for occupation next fall. There is a mad scramble to get rooms there. But those of us who have investigated have made the sad discovery that half of the rooms are to be saved for the incoming freshman class, thus leaving only thirteen rooms all singles, to be divided up among the three upper classes. That means that a good many people are going to be disappointed, but it seems to me that it strikes hardest at the seniors. Next year will be our only chance to live there; the other classes, all those classes which will be coming after us will have several opportunities to live there. Anyone who is truly anxious will be able to get in sometime during her four years in college. But for us it is the last chance, the only chance. And we are refused. We are to take what we can get while the girls of the class of '33, with three more years ahead of them, are to have our coveted places.

It may seem trivial to many, perhaps it is trivial. But to us who have only one more year to be here, one more year to do all those things and enjoy all those things which our college provides for us—to us, it seems unfair. It is like a silent rebuke, as though we were nearly three therefore of no importance wishes are nothing; we denied the rights of seniors freshmen grow more unruly a pendent every year, as this borne witness. Well, why ney? They are the class that pered and catered to, rather th who have proved their wo earned the right of privilege a topsy-turvy scheme of thi I crazy? I'd like to know

WILLIAMS NEXT BASEBALL OPPONENT

Williams Has Mediocre Team—Has Broken Even on Games This Season—Vermont Team in Good Condition

RUTKOWSKI PROBABLE CHOICE FOR TWIRLER

Tomorrow the Catamount nine plays Williams at Williamstown and again Vermont fans hope for good weather and an even break. The schedule has been broken up quite a bit this season but it is the team hopes to get started at last. Seven games have been either cancelled or postponed and this has been a serious handicap to the team.

Williams is reputed to have a good team this year but not an unusually strong one. Columbia nosed out a 4 to 3 victory and Virginia did the same trick by the same score. Last Saturday the Williams nine trounced Wesleyan 13 to 3. Mass. Aggies, which meets the Catamounts on Centennial Field two weeks from tomorrow, was defeated by the score of 9 to 8. Thomas, a right fielder, has been going strong at the bat and will prove dangerous to the Catamount pitcher who will oppose him. Tittman, first base; Winn at second; Putnam, third baseman; and Alexander, shortstop, compose the infield which will be matched tomorrow against the Vermont yearling infield. Wolcott, who was on the mound against the Mass. Aggies, may start the game, with Smith receiving.

Coach Gardner has been ironing out some of the difficulties in the Catamounts' playing and thus hopes to get into the win column again. The game will undoubtedly be close and should provide an interesting battle.

The probable line-up:

CAT'S MEOW

SPORTING EDITOR—

The CYNIC having gone to press previous to the playing of yesterday's baseball game with Middlebury will carry a report of that contest next Tuesday. Likewise for Middlebury tennis and Medic-Jayvee baseball.

Williams should make a good match for Vermont on the diamond this year.

After-effects from the smallpox vaccinations had much to do with the poor showing of the varsity in the field Saturday. The arms are in the pink of condition now.

Football practice has been frequently interrupted by the heavy rainfall during the past few weeks. Consequently the squad is as yet in a premature state. Coach Rattan in his latest report states that practice will continue until Junior Week.

Very few changes have occurred in the race for the eastern college batting championship. Colbert of Boston College still leads with .565. McGrath of Harvard has dropped from second to fifth with Bigbee of Springfield and Regan of Boston College succeeding to second place.

Amherst continues to mow down the opposition in Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball. She has taken the measure of two of the leading eastern teams, having defeated Harvard and Princeton, the conqueror of Holy Cross, 7-3 in 10 innings.

Boston College, here in four weeks, got 15 hits for 14 runs in a 5½ inning game against Seton Hall, Tuesday. Seton tallied once.

Plans are being made to hold a Green Mountain Conference tennis tourney at Middlebury on May 30. Definite decisions will be reached and announced in the near future.

Ed Wineapple, All-American basketball guard at Providence, was considered one of the select few pitchers of college ball at the end of last season and also about two weeks ago. Since then Holy Cross knocked him out of the box in two frames and St. Bonaventure did the same thing in the seventh inning on Tuesday when the Saints downed the Dominicans 10 to 9 the eleventh.

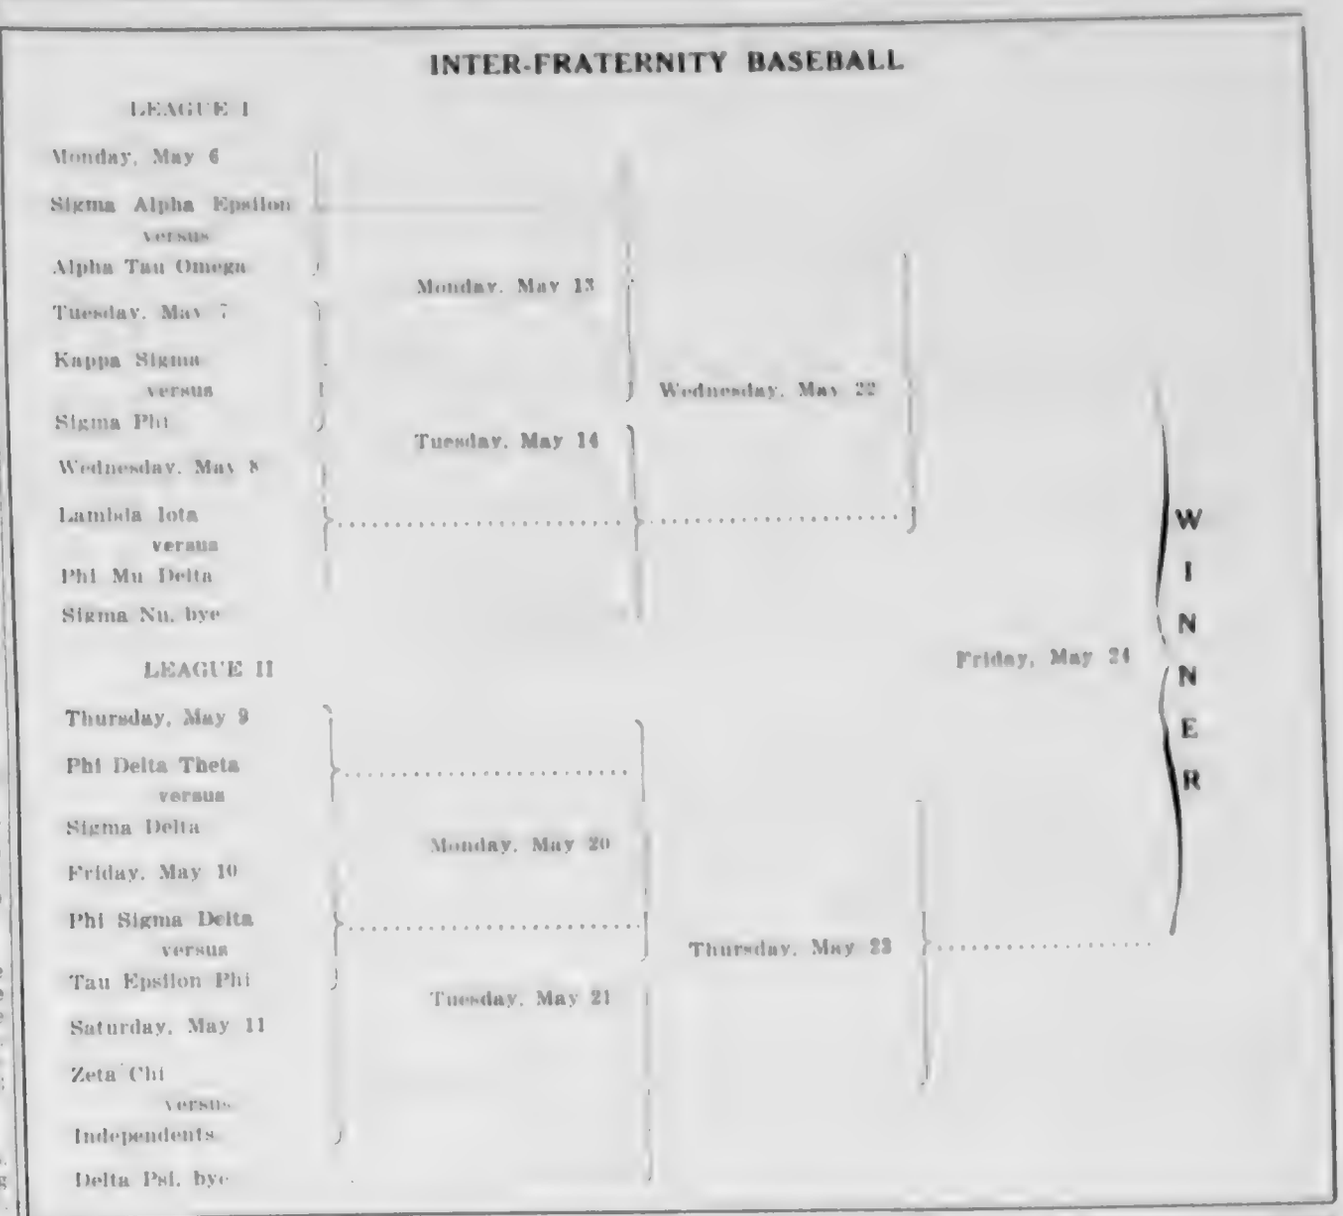
St. Dennis is slated to toe the rubber for the Junior Varsity baseball team at Centennial Field tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Since Cummings pitched yesterday Foster and Stevenson will be on the bench ready to serve them up if called upon.

The Queen City Cotton Co. will put a team on the field against the juniors which will be made up entirely of local amateur talent.

Coach Newton will use the same batting order that started against the Medics yesterday: Proctor, 3b.; Wetherell, 2b.; Dinniman, c.f.; Heaton, s.s.; Grant, l.f.; Stevens, r.f.; Stroh, c.; Carrigan, 1b.; St. Dennis, p.

VARSITY AND FRESHMAN TENNIS BALKED BY RAIN



Tennis at Vermont is getting the same old tough break in weather, etc., that other sports are getting on the hill.

The St. Michael's match, scheduled to be played last Monday, was postponed to the 20th on account of quarantine. Wet courts caused the cancellation of the tennis matches with Springfield on Tuesday. The Vermont varsity was at Middlebury yesterday and will play at Rensselaer tomorrow. The Black Panthers will appear on the back campus courts Monday, weather permitting.

Freshmen-Burlington High School contest was postponed on Wednesday on account of soft courts. The yearling season opens tomorrw with Adirondack Commercial High School of Malone, N. Y., here.

INTER-FRATERNITY BASEBALL

FRATERNITY BASEBALL STARTED THIS WEEK

Interfraternity baseball got under way on the back campus this week with the first games of the preliminary round.

The quarter-final round starts Monday next.

Elsewhere in this issue of the CYNIC will be found the complete schedule of games.

Rules of the contests are as follows:

A man who has played in a varsity game is not eligible to play inter-fraternity baseball.

One defeat will eliminate a team from the tournament. Games will be played on the back campus, on the diamond east of the tennis courts, and except on Saturday, will begin at 4.15 promptly. Games on Saturday will begin at 2.00. A team which fails to appear at the specified time forfeits. Games of seven innings will be played. Games postponed on account of rain may be played on Saturday, May 11, at 4.00, or on any day at 6.00. Postponement of a game should be reported to Key and Serpent, that a new date may be set.

Balls and catchers' outfits will be furnished by the athletic department. The new Key and Serpent Society will select umpires and govern the tournament.

An entrance fee of three dollars is required, payable to the treasurer of Key and Serpent before a team participates in the tournament.

The superstition that all our hours of work are a minus quantity in the happiness of life, and all the hours of idleness are plus ones, is a most ludicrous and pernicious doctrine, and its greatest support comes from our not taking sufficient trouble, not making a real effort, to make work as near pleasure as it can be.

—Lord Balfour.

"What do you make a week?" asked a judge of an Italian organ grinder.

"Twenty dollar, sare."

"What! Twenty dollars for grinding an organ?"

"No sare; not for da grind, but for da shut up and go away."

This is the military system. It is based on the principles of autocracy and has no place in a supposedly democratic institution such as the University of Oregon, or in a supposedly democratic country such as the United States.

EQUITATION ENROLLMENT STILL RIDING UPWARD

Proving so popular with the students, the class in equitation conducted under the leadership of Howard A Everton has become so large that it has become necessary to divide it into two groups, one meeting on Mondays and Wednesdays, the other on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The turnout has encouraged Mr Everton who believes that the maximum number has not yet been reached and who extends an invitation to all interested to participate.

MORIN APPOINTED TO NEW "Y" CHAIRMANSHIP

University Christian Association has created a new chairmanship which is to be known as News and Advertising. Owing to the large program that is being planned for next year it was decided that this extra department would be needed. The executive committee at its meeting last Saturday night appointed Alfred Morin '32 to fill the position. Morin is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, of Grey Friars, men's honorary literary society, and an assistant editor of CYNIC. This department will run a regular column in the CYNIC featuring brief summaries of international events which will be of interest to students. All publicity and programs of the Freshman Camp to be held next September will be brought out by the new chairman.

Annual Banquet Starts Off Many Junior Week Events

Macomber Will Act as Toastmaster for Annual Affair at Van Ness —Members of Class of 1930 to Furnish Music at Wednesday Night Function

GRAY REVIVES CUSTOM WITH JUNIORS' APPROVAL

Nelson B. Gray, '30, announces the Junior Banquet. The great number of favorable responses received to the questionnaire sent out by Chairman Gray gives promise of a large and successful banquet. The grand dinner will be held at Burlington's old hotel, the Van Ness. Chairman Gray announces that an excellent entertainment, part of which will be a series of numbers played by a smooth orchestra team composed of members of the junior class, Herrick M. Macomber will serve as toastmaster. For the benefit of the juniors it has been decided to charge these patriotic individuals two dollars and only two. The festivities are scheduled to start at seven o'clock Wednesday night.

The junior banquet has had a checkered history at the University. It was first noted as part of the Junior Week program in 1908, although it had long been customary for the classes to hold banquets at various times in the year. Since then it has sometimes been held, and sometimes not. There was no Junior Banquet either last year or the year before.

This year, cards were sent out to all the juniors, asking them if they planned to attend the banquet. As a special appeal to the Scotch, reply cards, already stamped by the United States Government, were attached. The replies received were very near unanimously in favor of the affair Wednesday night's function is the answer to this demand.

The chairman guarantees a howling success to all who attend. The dinner will be well above the usual quality, while the entertainment will be far superior to what is generally in evidence at such banquets.

The list of speakers, while not available at the present, is promised to be short and interesting, with the indefatigable Mr. Macomber as interlocutor.

Nelson B. Gray, as chairman, has shown a great deal of activity toward making the event a success. With the aid of the other members of the committee he hopes to accomplish even more. He has in the past shown his ability as a manager while Assistant Manager of Basketball, and in activity in many important class committees.

JUDGE MCLAUGHLIN, '79 PASSES AWAY IN ALBANY

New York's Most Eminent Jurist Dies After Several Weeks' Illness—Very Popular While in College

The Honorable Chester B. McLaughlin, '79, for many years holder of the highest judicial office in New York State, died Sunday at his home in Albany after several weeks' illness. He was the father of Donald G. McLaughlin, '29.

Born at Moriah, N. Y., in 1856, Chester Bentine McLaughlin entered the University of Vermont in 1875 in the class to which John Dewey also belonged. After his graduation, he studied law, and was admitted to the New York bar in 1881. Ten years later he won his first judicial position as surrogate of Essex County. In 1896, he became justice of the Supreme Court and served there almost continuously until 1917, when he resigned to become justice of the Court of Appeals, the highest judicial post in the Empire State. From the office he retired in 1927, and has since been official referee for the state and general counsel of the law firm of McLaughlin and Rogers of New York City.

In appreciation of his services, an oil portrait of Judge McLaughlin was hung over the entrance of the chamber

SWIFT, CROCKETT AND DEAN SPEAK AT GREY FRIARS' FINAL BANQUET

All Speakers Stress Value of Literary Organizations—Claim Athletics are Over-Stressed

Grey Friars, the men's honorary literary society, met the last time this year last Thursday evening. The meeting took the form of a banquet which was served in the private dining room of the Hotel Vermont. Dean Elijah Swift, and Senator Walter Crockett were the invited guests. Professor Dean, who is an honorary member of Grey Friars, was also present. These men addressed the members of the society, and their talks were followed by brief addresses from Charles Overly, the retiring president, and Robert Lee Stewart, newly-elected president.

Dean Elijah Swift spoke on the mathematician and literature. He said that the best mathematicians are poeti , and just as words are the symbols of the literary man, so figures are the symbols of the mathematician. Commenting upon modern free verse Dean Swift declared that much of it does not deserve the name of literature.

Senator Walter Crockett declared that journalism was an excellent preparation for creative writing. An author must often write whether he wills so or not, and newspaper reporting or magazine work offers a fine training in the grind element of writing. Senator Crockett said that while he did not wish to disparage athletics, yet he thought that too much attention was being placed upon them and that he favored activities which gave some attention to the intellectual side of the student. "Grey Friars," he said, "is an intellectual organization, and I am glad it is in existence." There has been no outstanding literary man or woman who has graduated from the University of Vermont and he told the members of Grey Friars that an opportunity was thus tendered them of attaining distinction along this line.

Professor Dean spoke on short story types and told an interesting tale to illustrate his points. Professor Dean also stated that the favored organizations which gave the students an opportunity for intellectual expression. He mentioned the John Dewey Club and the International Relations Club as other organizations, the activities of which he highly approved of.

A rising vote of thanks and appreciation was tendered to Professor Dean. George Gould, first president of Grey Friars, and Charles Overly, retiring president, for the work they have done for the society.

MEN'S GLEE CLUB SINGS TONIGHT IN FIRST CHURCH

This evening at eight o'clock the University Men's Glee Club will sing before the Federation of Women's Clubs of Vermont in the First Church. Mrs. F. B. Jenks who is in charge of the music has kindly placed the Glee Club first on the program in order to enable the members who so desire to study the remainder of the evening. This is the last performance of the Club for this semester and there have been intensive rehearsals the past week in order to get back into the excellent trim which they were in at the time of the New England contest on March 1.

JUNIOR PROM DUE NEXT FRIDAY EVENING, THE 17

The Junior Prom will soon be here! Next Friday evening, May 17, will ushe in the greatest social event of the college year. Instrument B. Griffin's Collegiate Footprint Orchestra will greet the dancers with melodious renditions that will chase the cockles of their festive hearts and make them yearn to dance to his circian strains. Like Odysseus of old, if they be not chained to a mast, they will be unable to resist his tempting selections from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. The decorations committee has in store a surprise in store of positively artistic that the atmosphere which will be created throughout the spacious Memorial Auditorium hall next Friday evening will be unique. Furthermore the favors are just the kind to rave about and write home about to mother. The refreshments will be of extremely refreshing. A superb punch will be concocted that will inject ecstacies of pleasure in that night.

"SUMMERTIME" TO APPEAR THURSDAY

Thespians Sponsor Third Event of the Week With Annual Spring Presentation, a Comedy of Farce and Humor

BEVERLY HOUSEHOLDER AND KROGH TAKE LEADS

Metcalf Again Directs Dramatic Production, Which is About to Take the Boards at The Strong

Thursday evening, May 16, Vermont will witness a play which will more than come up to the high standard attained in past years. At The Strong Theatre on that night, "Summertime," a comedy of youth and irresponsible high spirits will be performed by a group of prominent University of Vermont thespians.

Anyone desiring to enjoy an evening of laughs and amusements will be satisfied with this production, according to those who have been fortunate enough to witness some of the latest rehearsals. Prof. J. T. Metcalf, the coach, has been rehearsing his protégés continually for the last month. Although the majority of the cast is composed of veteran players whose past performances have always roused much enthusiasm, there are also several players who have not been heard from before in college plays of this calibre.

The leading parts will be well taken care of by R. T. Krogh and Beverly Householder. Both of these are active members of their respective dramatic societies, Krogh being prominent in Wig and Buskin and Miss Householder in Masque and Sandal. Both have also secured an envious reputation in histrionics through their participation in several dramatic productions.

The complete cast is as follows:

Willoughby Spencer	R. T. Krogh
Salem	Beverly Householder
Jack Hollyhush	F. W. Householder, Jr.
Harry Davenport	P. M. Perry
Ernest Wybrow	H. D. Butterfield
Volens	R. B. Aiken
Daisy Topping	Elizabeth M. Cary
Rose Philpotts	Kathryn A. Rauh
Violet Drinkwater	Hope K. Ranslow
Mrs. Vokins	Dorothy Cottrell
Selina	Phoebe H. Flint

The play "Summertime" is a comedy abounding with the joyful spirit and gaiety of youthful emotions in "Summertime." The scene of action is at Appledon, Devon, where "Summertime" is at her best. It is a play that will appeal to everyone by its abundance of good humor and good-natured witticisms. It was first produced at the Royalty Theatre in London in 1919, and has enjoyed a remarkable popularity wherever it has been given. The opening situation is unique and the development swift and entertaining.

The play as a whole is especially well adapted to amateur presentation and has the right amount of vivacity and humor to make a tremendous appeal to all at the highly festive Junior Week season.

1929 Junior Week Twenty-Fourth Event Of Its Kind

Featuring Banquet, Peerade, Play, Prom and Other Events, Annual Vermont Gala Event Begins on Its Program Tomorrow Night to Last Four Days

PEERADE MAY ECLIPSE ALL PREVIOUS EFFORTS IN ANNUAL COMPETITION

Based on Theme of "Summertime," Floats in Unique Event Are Now Ready for the Grand March

The 1929 Junior Week Peerade bids fair to beat the best ever. With a wide choice of subject matter pertinent to the Junior Week play, "Summertime," it is expected that there will be greater cleverness and originality than there ever has been. Final arrangements for the Peerade will be made this afternoon at 4:00 p.m. when descriptions of the various floats will be submitted to the Peerade chairman, A. C. Sirois.

Floats are expected to be entered by all of the men's fraternities and the women's dormitories and sororities with a strong possibility of one being entered by the Independents.

Three cups will be awarded this year as usual. One for the best men's float, one for the best women's float, and one for the individual prize. Cups will be donated as usual by Wig and Buskin Society. Judges for this event will be members of the faculty of prominent business men.

The cup for the best fraternity stunt was awarded last year to the Delta Psi fraternity. Robinson Hall won the cup for the women's dormitories and Richard H. Curtis '29 won a small cup for the best individual stunt.

The committee in charge of this annual event is composed of Albert G. Sirois, chairman, Reginald H. Arnold, Paul W. Kinney, Franklin A. Sears and Philip S. Robbins. The committee desires the earnest cooperation of all organizations entering stunts in order that everything may be carried off in A-1 style. The line of march will be from the campus down Main Street to Church, up Church to Pearl, down Pearl to St. Paul, down St. Paul to College and up College Street to the campus. Judges will decide on the merits of the entries as they pass the New Sherwood on Church Street.

U. V. M. CO-EDS ATTEND ST. LAWRENCE EVENTS

Eight Women Spend Week-End in Contests Conducted Without Competitive Spirit at New York College

Vermont's representatives to the coeds Sports Day at St. Lawrence University returned Sunday, May 12, full of enthusiasm after having spent a most enjoyable week-end there.

The girls left Friday morning by bus with the Middlebury girls. The colleges represented were Elmira College, University of Rochester, Middlebury College, University of Vermont, and St. Lawrence University. Friday night Kappa, the senior honorary society at St. Lawrence, gave a reception for all the representatives. They were entertained by the St. Lawrence Junior quartet and Prof. Cram, head of the music department. St. Lawrence songs were sung and St. Lawrence banners were given as favors to the girls. The representatives were entertained at the sorority houses.

Saturday morning teams were made up in the different sports and the preliminaries were played off, much as at the Middlebury Sports Day last fall. In addition to the usual sports

FRATERNITY FORMALS TO COMPLETE PROGRAM

Junior Week, the twenty-fourth event of the kind since its institution in 1906, is the spirit of fun, gets under a flying start with the Junior Banquet tomorrow night at the Van Ness Hotel and extended over the rest of the week, passing successively through the various phases featuring Peerade Day and Prom will conclude with the annual round of fraternity formals on Saturday evening.

Peerade Second Event

The Peerade, originally an advertising scheme for the play, will feature the second afternoon, starting from University Place at 4:00 the variegated line of floats will wend its way along the streets of the city going for a few moments at the Sherwood Hotel for a judges' review, then make its way back to the campus to disband.

The Peerade is peculiar to Vermont as Junior Week was first held in 1906 to advertise what then passed for a Junior Week play. Signs were posted on the campus and fathers were invited to the Cynic urging everyone to turn out. The Peerade was a most strenuous affair with a very large proportion of the student body taking part and wearing highly original costumes. It made the key down Pearl to Church Street, down Church to Main and back to college. In 1914 Wig and Buskin offered a small cup for individuals, a large cup for the most elaborate float, and another small cup for the most original float.

Eighteen floats last year followed the band down Main street, across Church Street, Pearl to St. Paul and back to the College. Nine fraternities were represented, six women's dormitories were entered, and three stunts competed for the individual award.

The judges of the Peerade were Prof. J. T. Metcalf, Leon W. Dean, and R. H. Thornton of the Chittenden County Trust Company, who observed the Peerade as it passed the Sherwood Hotel.

The cup for the best fraternity stunt was awarded by Wig and Buskin to the Delta Psi fraternity. Robinson Hall won the cup for the women's dormitories, and Richard H. Curtis '29 won a small cup for the best individual stunt.

Delta Psi's stunt was the Port Douglas ferry boat, a clever device of a ferry towing a rowboat in which sat two very elderly-looking passengers whose chief occupation was bailing out water from their craft. The long green serpent easily the longest float in the line, from under which showed the feet of numerous coeds, won the cup for women's dormitories. "The Height of Entertainment," which was none other than Richard Curtis in very high stilts took the individual award. Curtis could not join the Peerade until it had descended the Main Street hill and from that point on he attracted unusual attention.

"Summertime" Thursday

"Summertime," Louis N. Parker's delightful comedy which was the choice of the U. V. M. dramatic society for the spring production, will make its appearance at The Strong Theatre on Thursday, May 16, at 8:00 o'clock, under the joint auspices of Wig and Buskin and Masque and Sandal. Prof. J. T. Metcalf directing. No less than five veterans will feature prominently in the production. They are Krogh and Dorothy Cottrell, the one taking a leading rôle, the other playing Mrs. Vokins, will make their last appearance in a Vermont production. Beverly Householder has the women's lead, while two other veterans, Harvey Butterfield and Fred Householder, also have prominent parts. Philip Perry, Robert Aiken, Elizabeth Cary, Kathryn

A Junior Week Not Alone for Juniors

Junior Week is here at last! This annual period of festivity has been much awaited by many. Others realize that Junior Week means the close proximity of finals and commencement. But no matter how close the end of the year may be, thoughts of final exams are most remote in the minds of the majority at this time. It is well that studies are forgotten for a time, too. No one is able to enjoy a week so filled with exciting events both social and athletic if he is continually worrying about his studies.

Junior Week is annually set aside for the enjoyment of the junior class in particular, and the whole college in general. As an event of social importance, it stands second to none. The juniors have their Junior Week, and the seniors have their Senior Week. Yet, Senior Week is set aside for the enjoyment of the graduating class especially. However, everyone with the inclination is expected to enjoy himself during Junior Week. Junior Week is Junior Week in name only. It is named for that class in the undergraduate member of that body whose collegiate careers are nearly three-quarters over. It is named for the class which will be undergraduate for only a short time longer. It is named for those students who, having been in college for three years, will soon be assuming the rôle of a dignified senior. But it is meant for the whole student body regardless of class affiliation. It is the one chance in the whole year to revel in one solid week of enjoyment. Do not miss it.

Junior Week has two sides—the social and the athletic. Of the social, there is the Junior Banquet, the play, "Summertime," at the Strong Theatre, the Junior Prom at the Memorial Auditorium, and the fraternity dances. The athletics include a baseball game with the Connecticut Aggies at the Centennial Field, a track meet with Montreal A. A. also at the Centennial, and two tennis matches. Afternoon and evening are well filled throughout the week. It is a time to enjoy yourself. Do not miss it.

Junior Week marks the appearance of the Ariel, the year book of the class of 1930. The annual is a veritable storehouse of information not only of the junior class, but of the college as well. Every U. V. M. student should have at least one of the annuals published during his college days to place on the shelves in his library and to refer to and dream over later in life.

The CYNIC editor is pleased to hear that a Junior Banquet will be held this year. Last year the custom was allowed to drop because of the lack of interest. Enough interest was evidenced to Nelson Gray, the chairman of the banquet committee, to warrant the re-establishment of the custom. It gives the members of the class an opportunity to know one another better and to form closer friendships. The custom should not be allowed to drop into disuse. It is a memorable and an enjoyable occasion. Do not miss it.

"They who fail in their endeavors have still in them the animus of desire; but the man who attains his will cohabits with an assassin, for, having it, he perceives that he does not want it; and desire is dead in him and the man too is dead."—CAMUS.

"What's the idea of that set of traffic lights over the mantel?" inquired the young man calling on daughter.

"It's father's idea," she explained. "The red stays on until 11.30; then he flashes on the amber, and at 12 the groom. And, you know," she added, "father is a traffic cop."

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

By Ex-Converse Hall

ADVICE TO THE LOVETORN

Dear Ex

I'm in an awful fix. Really I am. You see I've been going out with a cute little girl that works down at the Soda Luncheonette. She's had [illegible] more experience than I, if you get what I mean—. She tells me that I'm painfully proper and all that. But the climax of my embarrassment came the other night when I told her I'd never kissed a girl in all my life.

Well, don't come buzzing around me," she flared. "I'm not running a prep school."

What shall I do? Oh, what shall I do!

Sincerely,
C. C. C. C.

Mr. C. C. C. C.
Dear Sir

Send for my free, illustrated booklet entitled "Knitting, Sewing and Knitting." Read this in your spare time and leave the girls alone. He who plays with fire is apt to get burnt!

Truthfully,
Ex-Converse.

My Dear Mr. Ex-Converse Hall:

I am taking a course in Economics 7, but I'm not getting much out of it. And the worst part of the whole matter is that it's my own fault—or maybe it's a certain girl's fault. She's a red-head and you know how Walter P. Chrysler advertises the high compression in his "red head" motors. Well, same here. She's in my class, or to be more modest, in my classroom. Ec. 7 and her to choose between. It's too much for me. My Ec. 1 course teaches me that too much competition is apt to kill trade, and the competition in this course is certainly killing my mark. Please tell me what's what and why it is.

Thankfully yours,
P. T. HANK.

Mr. P. T. Hank.
Dear Sir

Make the red head; you can make up the Ec. 7 any time.

Thoughtfully,
Ex-Converse.

My Dear Ex-Converse:

I have five big things to tell you.

1. I am a co-ed in my teens.
2. I used to love to go places and do things—to be on the qui vive.
3. Recently I met a sophomore man.
4. I love him, but he won't even so much as condescend to kiss me on my front porch.
5. Please tell me how to win his love and affection.

Your friend,
Greensborough Bend.

My Dear Miss Greensborough Bend:

I shall proceed to answer your questions in order.

1. You say you are a co-ed in your teens. Personally, I do not approve of any girl going around in her teens. They're too sheer. Step-ins are bad enough.

2. If you are no longer able to keep on the qui vive, try the C. V. Speed is only relative after all.

3. It is unnecessary to state that you "met a sophomore man." All sophomores of the male sex are men.

4. I do not blame the young man for refusing to kiss you on your front porch. I, too, believe in comfort. Is it necessary for me to point out that the Grand Rapids Furniture Manufacturers' Association reports a 279 per cent increase in their sales of sofas over the past year?

Smoking Regulations at Vassar

A blueprint of the campus has been illustrated in yellow and red to indicate smoking areas, and posted opposite the Post Office. There are several variations and a study of the map will prove profitable, but incidentally smoking is not allowed:—

1. On College View Avenue anywhere, at any time.
2. On the path from the back of North to Davison.
3. Anywhere around Assembly Hall. The area extends only as far as the south side of the cement road which skirts Assembly Hall, and the corner of the Chemistry Building.
4. In the Circle nor on the inner paths around the Circle.
5. On the porch of the gymnasium or anywhere near it, except beyond the North corner.
6. On the stage of the outdoor theatre. It is allowed only on the slope up from the pit. This regulation is to protect the trees from possible fire.—Vassar Miscellany News

CADAVER'S HOUSE. By Edred Algerton Ruperson. 103 pp. New York: The Vonvillian Company. $2.00.

By PUBLY VILLISON

The announcement not long since of a new didactique poem by Edred Algerton Ruperson inevitably brought to mind that poet's brilliant, if startling failure in "Twistom," and inspired the hope that the new work, when it appeared, would prove equally a muster piece. "Cadaver's House," as the poem is called, is a very brilliant and lovely tale of murder and dead bodies, but except for the fact that it too is written in black ink, it does not closely link with "Twistom," either in mode or manner. It is an auster—(guess which wind, cis)—piece, deeply comic; the high spirits (for they have just gone up), the color of Russian, the rich pantomime of design, things that lent torsion to "Twistom," are all lacking. And it is well at the outset that the reader should be made aware of such futile differences between the two poems, for since the poet has applied himself to a task of another nature, it is not less than just, that the purpose should be viewn with untrampled eyes.

To the present writer's mind, "Cadaver's House," appears to link more closely with hot dogs. The tragedy is that of students in torture; the time is the present (a straight gift), and the seen, in so far as there can be any, is African. In "Twistom" there are souls in torture, but a student in torture is tortured indeed.

Actually, it is a question if all the earlier bards of the college would have recognized their studes and coeds in the human beings of Ruperson's rendition. Nevertheless, not even Ruperson, with all his reasonableness could prevent his epic from attracting to itself some of the romance of the old collegiate stuff; his epic was rich in hooey.

"Cadaver's House" is a tale told from within, by one of the cadavers.

The poem is an extremely sooty piece of work. Behind the story that Ruperson tells is another story which is but hinted at.

The earlier tail would, toughly, be something like this: A cadaver, wealthy apparently, intelligent (once), dead and gone, from motives that are not entirely clear, had apparently thrown his wife over a cliff. Years have past, and the jazz orchestras are playing the "Wabash Blues" when suddenly a deteckative jumps on the scene. The note of loving tragedy, of stark mirror, is struck in the first line.

Into that hole where mad fools go, he went
Alone; and in that hole where profs are right,
Where dumbbells study, wise men don't, and flunk,
College was like a pocket that had fingers.
He felt them fishing his pockets as if the world
Was down on him; and waiting as one waits,
Eyes covered, for death; he worked like life in fear.

It is no small part of the geniu of Poet Ruperson that he is able to wr te such stuff and get away with it. Listen to this excerpt from the second section of the sapic.

I stood and mourned my flunk in analyt,
I thought upon the world, its ways
That most men figure out, alas, too late.
And as I thought upon my crimes—O fear
There's no escaping thee—my profs came back
To me in memory. Again I marched
Around the field, again as skirmishers
Deployed, and dropped my gum—too bad, that's all—
At federal inspection. Now that's gone.

Ruperson has struck a new note, as was said of the one-fingered pianist. Read "Cadaver's House" and wonder when its author will be made a cadaver.

The facts of the freshman election are that 142 votes were cast for treasurer: which, for some reason, was the most votes cast for any office by the freshmen at the meeting.

NEWS IN BRIEF

At a meeting held last week at the Delta Psi House, Tau Kappa Alpha, the honorary debating society, discussed at length a question of organization raised by the National Executive Council. Invitations to membership were sent out to those qualified for membership, that is participation in an intercollegiate debate. May 24 was set as a tentative date for initiation.

Cats Break Even—Win at Williams And Lose at Midd.

Middlebury Takes First Game of State Championship — Cook Gives Cats Only Two Hits—Rutkowski Is Winning Pitcher at Williams

VERMONT 8—WILLIAMS 4
MIDD 7—VERMONT 0

U. V. M. evened up on her baseball attempts over the week-end and crashed through with one victory and one defeat. The Green and Gold dropped the first of the state series to Middlebury Thursday afternoon when she was shut out by the Blue and White. When the contest was over the Middlebury nine was on the long end of a 7-0 score.

Enraged over the crashing defeat administered to them and over the dashing of their high hopes for the state title, the Catamounts invaded the Bay State and walloped the Williams team by the score of 8-4. The team was severely handicapped in the Middlebury game by the loss of Sargent, the lanky first base man, who was unable to play in either game because of the bad condition of his arm. However, the premier bag was taken care of very well by Captain Macomber.

This game was one of the greatest disappointments to the Green and Gold fans this year. They were unable to fathom Cook's assortment of hooks and obtained but two hits from the Middlebury ace, while their opponents connected with the pill with comparative ease, collecting 10 hits during the game, and at the same time played airtight baseball, leaving the field without a single error being chalked up against them.

The game was attended by a festive crowd, as Junior Week was in full swing at Middlebury and a holiday crowd turned out for the contest.

Saturday told a very different tale. The Cats were bloodthirsty and went after Williams with a vengeance. The purple got a big lead on the Green and Gold in the first inning when they pushed three runs over the plate before Rutkowski settled down to work. After they were unable to get a man past third until the fifth inning. Vermont's runs were fairly well distributed with two in the second, one in the fourth, two in the fifth and three more in the eighth. The Cats at last found their hitting streak and pounded both Wolcott and Bright out of the box. Singmaster was unable to stem the tide any better than his teammates when he was sent in to relieve Bright.

"Eddie" Winant turned in a beautiful job at the initial sack. He was all over the place and did some fine work for his first time in that position. Out in right field Howard covered a lot of ground and turned in a record of seven put outs, which is an unusual number for an outfielder. Both nines played airtight baseball throughout the game and backed their pitchers to the limit. All in all it was an extremely different team from that which took the field against Middlebury, Thursday. They were peppier, had more punch, and showed a hundred percent improvement over their previous showing.

MEDICS SHUT OUT BY CUMMINGS AND JAY VEES COTTON CO. TEAM WINS

Without Star Pitcher Junior Varsity Is Weak in Queen City Cotton Company Game

Junior Varsity baseball team broke even in their two week-end games, just as the Varsity did.

While Middlebury was winning over the Cats on Thursday the Jay Vees were shutting out the same Medic team that beat the Varsity several days previous. Of course, it was all "Lefty" Cummings. The steady left hander struck out 14 ambitious cadaver-wrestlers and allowed only four bingles. He didn't issue a single free trip.

Wetherell's safe bingle in the final stanza, scoring Kendall with the only run of the game gave the juniors a 1-0 victory in the initial start of the season at Centennial Field. The game was seven innings by agreement. Fogg and Morey between them fanned nine of the Jay Vees and also allowed but four hits.

Big Chief started on the mound for the Medics and after he had hurled four innings he was relieved by Moriarty. In the third, Cummings nearly won his own ball game with a three-base clout to right but died on the hot corner.

In the last half of the seventh Kendall singled past Marston. Grant fanned. Carrigan got a free ticket but Don breezed three fast ones by Proctor. Then Wetherell, a yearling, bingled one down the first base line and Kendall romped home with the winning run. The box score and summary:

CAT'S MEOW

SPORTING EDITOR

The Catamount nine is at Norwich today. The Cadets beat Middlebury 18 to 10 last Saturday but the Panthers could not use Cook who pitched against the Green and Gold the day before.

It was no surprise to us at all to see the Junior Varsity set back the Medics on Saturday. In fact it was expected. After watching "Lefty" Cummings do his stuff against the varsity in the practice game we were pretty confident that he could lead his team to do what the varsity had failed to do.

Six out of nine men coming through at bat for Vermont against Williams was not so bad. Winant was in his southern trip stride again and his triples were certainly welcome. He played a whale of a game at first, too.

"Larry" Gardner made a great shift by putting Winant on first and Mc Bride in left field. Mac is an out fielder by birth.

Sargent is suffering from the small pox vaccination and his height will be missed at first base.

Boston College 8—William and Mary 2.
Boston College 3—Springfield 2.
Dartmouth 3—Pennsylvania 1.
Conn. Aggies 2—Wesleyan 1.

Al Nichols of Amherst hurled a no-hit no-run game last Thursday against Williams, the final score being 4 to 0. Al rates with the best of them, having won over Harvard and Princeton. Amherst is undefeated.

Another sophomore with a great future is Sonny Sondheim of Brown. He held Holy Cross to six hits and a 3 to 2 score recently, and in the N. Y. U. game struck out Ken Strong three times.

Gunnar Holstrom of Dartmouth comes in for his share of the twirling honors. Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Cornell and Penn are his victims.

Holy Cross is getting about the best pitching possible. Hebert served Fordham only two hits in Thursday's 6 to 0 game. This is the first year since 1925 that the Purple has taken both games from the New Yorkers. Hebert, by the way, throws as fast a ball as a big-leaguer ever saw.

Boston College is running up what looks like a record total of runs this season. In the last four games the Eagles' scores have been 17 to 2, 19 to 1, 19 to 0, and 14 to 1, making the total 69 to 4 in favor of B. C. Boston College is making up for their comparatively weak pitching by great hitting and fielding.

Earl Clark of the Boston Braves set two new world's records last week when he caught 12 flies in the outfield and made an assist on a throw home. The flies give him the outfielders' putout record and the assist gives him the outfielders' mark of 13 chances. Clark is 21 years old and is bound to be one of the National League's greatest outfielders.

Mackay of Vermont was only ten inches behind that hammer distance in the M. A. C meet last week. The U. V. M. hammer record is in danger.

Fred Taylor, a star javelin thrower, and John McDonald, an outstanding shot-putter and fair broad-jumper, both of Norwich, will be unable to compete in the Green Mountain Conference Meet here May 25 on account of academic difficulties.

On Saturday, however, the Vermonters looked like a different team with Pfenning in the box, and were defeated 8-6.

Lefty Joe Danis, in his initial start of the season, let the Vermont Jay Vees down with nine hits while his teammates were collecting 11. Three hits and some snappy base running by the youngsters, Vosburgh and Hart, gave the mill team a two-run lead in the opening frame and they held on to it throughout the game. Hart's single scored Bergeron with a tally in the second and the mill team annexed another in the fourth when Carrie Vosburgh led off with a double and scored on D. Danis' single. Then the Jay Vees collected. Wetherell and Dinniman crashed successive singles and Charlie Cummings pasted one to the far corners of the lot scoring both runners. Cummings, however, was chucked out trying to stretch the double into a triple. Lakeside sewed up the contest in the eighth after the Jay Vees had tied the count. Joe Danis singled and Bergeron sacrificed. Ritchie collected his third bingle of the game to send Danis scampering over the platter, Ritchie in turn scored on Hart's single through short and Hart came in with a third marker when Heaton messed up Binnette's drive. Ritchie played great ball for the winners getting three hits in five trips and making three sensational plays in the field. Wetherell, freshman infielder, made three hits out of five trips for the Jay Vees.

The score by innings:

RATTAN AND TULLY LEAD GREEN AND BLACK TEAMS AS FOOTBALL FINALE

As a fitting climax to the Spring football session, Coach Rattan's Green jerseyed squad will battle Coach Tully's Black team at Centennial Field Thursday, May 16 at 4:15 p.m. Both teams have practiced strenuously for a victory in this contest and the gridiron fans should be rewarded by a battle which will undoubtedly become an annual affair.

Coaches Rattan and Tully will be given a chance to get a line on the material which will go through one of the toughest schedules ever undertaken by a Vermont team next year and those in attendance will see the men in fighting trim eager to win positions on the varsity eleven of next Fall.

Most of the men in the starting line-ups have played varsity or frosh football. Both teams have been chosen as evenly and as well balanced as possible. There are several other men who have reported regularly who will see service in the game before it is over.

The probable line-ups:

Greens	Blacks
Segal, l.e.	l.e., DeWitt
Donaldson, l.t.	l.t., Tilley
Pelofsky, l.g.	l.g., Collins
Levine	c., Brown
Aronson, r.g.	r.g., Leonard

Middlebury beat St. Lawrence 84½ to 50½ on the track. Two Middlebury College records fell when Schmidt threw the hammer 128 feet 2 inches and Paul pole-vaulted 11 feet.

of basketball, hockey, archery, track, tennis, and baseball, there was a bicycle relay race.

Saturday afternoon the finals in the sports were played off. There were no competitive contests, all were conducted as sports for sport's sake. Each team was made up of girls from each of the five colleges. A. T. A. C. W. is sponsoring these meets and disapproves of competitive sports.

In the evening, fifty canoes were waiting for a canoe ride and picnic. This had to be postponed because of the rain and a gym dance was substituted.

Middlebury was represented by seven girls, Vermont by eight, and the other colleges by twelve each. Those who made the trip from Vermont were Estabel Perelman, '30, president of W. A. A.; Edith Abbott, '31, basketball; Marion Baldwin, '29, archery, Marian Everest, '29, hockey; Jane Holden, '31, baseball; Helen Hard, '31, tennis; Lillian Mount, '32, and Doris Humphries, '32, track. Mrs. Hard accompanied the girls and Miss Blanchard and Miss Cummings arrived at St. Lawrence Saturday noon. The coaches and presidents of W. A. A. from all of the colleges represented were present at the Meet. A number of sport enthusiasts from Vermont went to St. Lawrence Saturday.

1929 Junior Week Fourth Event of Its Kind

Junior Week at Vermont has a long history behind it. In 1906 Wig and Blade presented "William Warrington, Will," a farce-comedy in three acts by Roger C. Sprague, then a senior at the University. The action was brisk, the costume hunts a maze of mistaken identities, and the unravelling of the plot was humorously conceived as the [illegible] part of it.

Next—The Prom

Following the game Friday afternoon with the Connecticut Aggies comes the gala event of the week, the Junior Promenade, being an event of [illegible] importance in undergraduate circles. The Prom is an event to look forward to and to look back to. [illegible] orchestra, an all-star Vermont favorite will be there [illegible] the junior committees will [illegible] to provide an [illegible] atmosphere while [illegible] and programs will be there to [illegible] to those who have been looking forward to the festivities [illegible]

The Track meet with the Montreal A. A. A. on Saturday afternoon and the social evening Junior Week of 1929 promises to be in history in the wake of the annual series of fraternity dances.

"Good Smoke!" Says Hubby "O. K." with Wife

Brooklyn, N. Y.
August 4, 1928

Larus & Bro. Co.,
Richmond, Va., U. S. A.
Dear Sir:

Going to take the pleasure and drop you a few lines to say that my favorite tobacco is your Edgeworth. I have been a user of it for the last eight years and find it's the only tobacco for a real good smoke.

For the last five or six months I have been trying several other kinds but I find Edgeworth is the only tobacco for me.

If I am smoking any other brand my wife will tell me, as she likes the smell of only Edgeworth. When I'm smoking others she opens all windows and doors.

The reason for writing this letter is that I had a card party last night, and most all of the party asked me what kind of tobacco I used.

So I told them Edgeworth.

Yours very truly,
A smoker of Edgeworth

CO-EDS TO OBSERVE LILAC DAY THURSDAY

All Invited to Attend Out-of-Doors Exercises in Back of Redstone at Four O'clock

EVENT TO OPEN WITH PAGEANT PRESENTATION

Activities in Honor of Pearl Wasson, Former Dean of Women, are Ever New and Interesting—Many Prominent Co-eds to Take Part

With Lilac Day less than a week away the committees are hard at work and rehearsals for the pageant are in full swing. Lilac Day comes next Thursday with Friday as an alternate date in case of inclement weather. At four o'clock everyone in the University is invited to attend the exercises which will be held out-of-doors in back of Redstone. The annual Lilac Day activities are in memory of Pearl Wasson, formerly dean of women. The purpose of Lilac Day is to plant one lilac tree annually in the hedge at Redstone. This ceremony is conducted by the members of Mortar Board.

Before the planting of the lilac tree is the presentation of a pageant written by Florence Smith, '27. After the planting of the lilac tree there will be a buffet supper for the University women served out-of-doors. This will be followed by singing, and by the Lantern Walk, a new feature, which is under the direction of Elzada Fiske, '30.

The principals in the pageant are: High Priestess, Gladys Kone, '29; Seeker, Catherine Bassett, '29; Nature, Miriam Idleman, '29; Lake, Mildred Whitney, '29; Mountains, Laura Bingham, '29, and Dorothy Gurney, '30; Learning, Marion Baldwin, '29; Truth, Marion Backus, '29; Vision, Charlotte Cleveland, '29; Achievement, Margaret Durick, '29; and Memory, Lucy Morgan, '29.

In addition to these principles there are a number of groups of dancers in the pageant. They are as follows:

Forest Leaves: Marion Everest, captain; Lillian Cohen, Julia Waterman, Elzada Fiske, Margaret Corbin, Louise Bosley, Iva Harris, Hildur Wilde, Margaret Nourse and Jane Corwin.

Gray Mists: Christine Shaw, captain; Margaret Miller, Helen Burns, Winona Spencer, Helen Esielionis, Dorothy Claflin, Ruth Strong, Rebecca Seaver and Katherine Mudgett.

MEMBERS OF GLEE CLUB HOLD ANNUAL ELECTION

At a business meeting following the rehearsal of the Men's Glee Club on Monday afternoon the following officers were elected for next year: manager, Major B. Jenks; assistant managers, John O. Percival, B. Baker, and Richard G. Cowles.

Jenks, who replaces Henry C. Dalrymple, '30, as manager is a member of Delta Psi. He is advertising manager of the CYNIC, is on the 1930 Ariel board, and belongs to Pi Delta Rho, the honorary journalistic society.

Percival is a member of Lambda Iota Society. He has made his letter on the rifle team for the past two years and is now serving on the 1931 Ariel board as an assistant editor. Last Tuesday he won the Scabbard and Blade cup for the sophomore winning the drill down of the class. Baker is a member of Wig and Buskin, has been active in dramatics and in music circles, and last year placed in the Kingsley Prize Speaking. Cowles was formerly on the CYNIC board and is a prominent member of the International Club.

Tuesday evening the Glee Club sang before the Vermont Federation of Women's Clubs at the First Congregational Church. The program was "My Little Rose Bud," "Songs My Mother Taught Me," and "Vermont Victorious," with the German traditional "Bienaltzer" as encore.

EVAN THOMAS SPEAKS ON JAMES B. WILBUR

Prof. Evan Thomas, retired professor of mathematics, spoke in chapel Wednesday morning on a place of worship, referring to the memorable work of the late James B. Wilbur

About three weeks ago a man died in New York who has established a strong claim of gratitude. This man was James B. Wilbur, who gave us our chapel. His acquaintance with this college came late in his life, but his interest in U. V. M., the college of his adopted state, increased continually.

Worship is a distinctive mark. It is the highest order higher than intelligence, memory and strength. Worship is characteristic of man, even of a non christian—the highest order on the spiritual scale; and through Mr. Wilbur's generosity a place was built wherein this highest and most exalted worship might be held. This chapel stands for us as an aid to a life rich in great aspirations and purposes. There is no other way in which we can better show our respect and gratitude to James Wilbur than our use of this chapel for the purpose for which it was given.

ARIEL APPEARS ON THE EVE OF JUNIOR WEEK DELIGHTING STUDENTS

1930 Year Book, Under Editorship of Powell and Billings, Contains Many New Features

Complete in every detail the 1930 Ariel made its appearance Tuesday afternoon to an admiring student body who, without exception, call it one of the best annuals ever produced at Vermont. Under the editorship of E. Henry Powell, the Ariel appears in its regular form but with better makeup and original features.

The first few of the four hundred and fifty pages are full-page views of the campus. These views of University Row themselves are almost worth the price of the book, so well were they photographed by Ivan Stanhope. The high quality of the paper together with the many cuts and half-tones used throughout insured the book's success.

After the views of the campus and the list of the faculty come the class sections, each one headed by a well-drawn cut of Don Oatley's. The grinds in the junior section which were prepared under the direction of Herbert K. Borkland, with Major Jenks, Philip Robbins and Daniel Vignone as assistants, are exceptionally well done and original.

The many cuts and half-tones with which these sections and the Medical Section abound make the book both interesting and attractive. The Medic section was in charge of Philip Daniels, who with his assistants, Art Allen, Don Chamberlain, Frank Flagg, Katherine McSweeney, and Royal Whitney, has made it one of the most original sections of the whole annual.

The Athletic Department under Angus Clain has a review of every game for the season and individual pictures of the outstanding players. His section undoubtedly receives more than its usual share of attention.

Following this come the pictures of the various societies and the fraternity and sorority sections. Janice Goodrich has done her usual fine work with the women's department.

The feature section under Frank Beckley contains many pictures that were clipped from the very first Ariels, printed up to forty-three years ago, when the Ariel first made its appearance as a sophomore publication.

The many pictures of campus activities and the results of the junior questionnaire probably will receive plenty of attention. Bob Lawrence and Natalie Owsley were chosen as the most popular, while Tim Halligan and Janice Goodrich carried away the honors for the most all-around. The most apt to succeed were Herrick Macomber and Joyce Richardson. The favorite instructor of the class was Professor Dean. Captain Rattan carried off first honors as the most popular coach with Claire Cayward second. Football was

Scabbard and Blade Trophies Won by J. O. Percival, '31, and T. R. Irish, '32—Federal Inspection Believed to be a Success

On Monday and Tuesday last, a large crowd of admiring co-eds and others witnessed Vermont's annual inspection of her R. O. T. C. unit. The inspecting officers were Lt. Colonel Walton Goodwin, Jr., Cav. D. O. L., and Major Robert H. Barrett, Inf. D. O. L. All events were run off in their scheduled order, starting with quizzes of both the freshmen and sophomores on the oretical work and ending with a series of competitive drills on Tuesday morning. President Bailey received the initial parade on Monday morning, spending some time with the officers

Competitive Drills Feature

From the spectators' point of view, the three competitive drills—and especially the interfraternity contest for the recently donated Reserve Officers' Cup—held the most interest. Eight squads were entered in this contest: Delta Psi, commanded by B. W. Gustafson; the Independents, commanded by R. H. Curtiss; Sigma Phi, commanded by C. C. Lyman; Sigma Nu, commanded by J. Hyland; Phi Delta Theta, commanded by H. J. Kropper; Alpha Tau Omega, commanded by F. E. Robbins, Kappa Sigma, commanded by C. J. Douglas; and Lambda Iota, commanded by G. S. Rand These were rated in the order listed by the judges for competitive drills. Captain Ira E. Ryder, 13th Infantry; 1st Lieutenant Kent Nelson, 13th Infantry, and 2nd Lieutenant Allen Thayer, 13th Infantry.

The winning squad, drawn from Delta Psi fraternity, was composed of B. W. Gustafson in command, and F. A. Bolles, S. S. Corbin, R. F. Dewitt, E. G. Huriburt, K. Parker, A. A. Scharbius, P. E. BANQUET PROVIDES AN AUSPICIOUS START FOR JUNIOR WEEK PROGRAM

About fifty juniors gathered in the banquet hall of the Hotel Van Ness Wednesday evening to start Junior Week off right with the banquet Everyone present had a good time and is convinced that it was certainly worthwhile to revive this custom of past years. The committee, under Nelson B. Gray, in addition to providing a sumptuous dinner, presented a lively program.

Herrick M. Macomber, who acted as toastmaster, had everyone laughing with his witty introductions and remarks. Several, including President Robert A. Lawrence, Janice Goodrich, Mabel Freemann and William J. Slavin were called upon to give short impromptu speeches. During the dinner, a short musical entertainment was given. Cornelia Mould gave several piano selections; and duets were played by Major B. Jenks and Roger S. Derby on the violin and trumpet. Nelson Gray also added to the entertainment with several mystifying card tricks.

The committee in charge was: Nelson B. Gray, chairman, Charles H. Steele, Americo Gloria, Hugh M. Wallace, Marjorie Huntley, and Florence A. McKenzie.

Junior Prom, Premier Event Of The Week, Due Tonight

Principal Event of 1929 Junior Week an Anticipated Success—Tasillo's Orchestra and Dutch Atmosphere to Feature at Memorial Auditorium This Evening

MACE, PROM CHAIRMAN, HAS ALL IN READINESS

Junior Prom! The principal gala event of Junior Week! What would Junior Week be without its traditional promenade? What a host of pleasant memories are evoked in the minds of many by the mere mention of it! Tonight this joyful event will be the mecca of all who are fortunate enough to attend. That it will eclipse all former promenades is certain when one glances down the list of those chosen to uphold and revivify the spirit and youth of the Class of 1930.

Charles H. Mace, popular chairman of the Junior Prom, predicts a record attendance. Not content with assuming the responsibility for the whole affair, Mace has done some especially fine work in getting out attractive posters for the event. Joseph H. Sugden, ballyhoo man for the dance, has been busily broadcasting publicity for the big event.

Carl H Ramm, chairman of the Music Committee, has secured Lieutenant B Tasillo's Governor's Footguard Orchestra of Hartford, Conn This orchestra, according to the chairman will meet the approval of the most fastidious. It was only after great consideration that this orchestra was chosen in preference to other popular ones. Lieutenant Tasillo's orchestra of twelve musicians recently played a battle of music with McEnnelly's Orchestra, one of the best in New England, at the Butterfly Pavilion in Springfield, Mass

Estabel Perelman, chairman of the decorations committee reports that if everything depends on the decorations the success of the Prom is already assured. The decorations committee has decided to put on a unique Dutch atmosphere. These decorations, along with the sixty little tables placed alongside of the walls will give a picturesque and joyful tone of originality to the spacious hall in the Memorial Auditorium

With favors and programs secretly withheld up to the last minute, plenty of surprise features will be in store for the dancers at the annual Prom next Friday night from 9.00 p.m. to 1.00 a.m.

The complete list of all those who have been actively engaged in promoting the different activities of the 1929 Junior Week is as follows

Junior Prom—Charles H. Mace, chairman; programs and favors—Odino A. Martinetti, chairman, Charles W. Capron, Philip M. Perry, Anne J Edmunds, Doris Y Dupraz, Janice M. Goodrich Decorations Estabel Perelman, chairman, Angus W Clain, Frank E. Beckly, Lester W Meehan, Major B Jenks, Mabel L. Freeman, Beverly Householder, Iva M Harris Phoebe H Flint, Irene L. Marcotte, Natalie Owsley.

Music Committee—Carl H. Hamm, chairman, Philip E. Manning, Julia Waterman, Anne M. McLaughlin.

Publicity Committee—Joseph H Sugden, chairman, William J. Slavin, Lawrence O. Clayton.

Prom Refreshments Committee—Herrick M. Macomber, chairman, Nelson B. Gray, James C. Puffer, Frances M. Hazen, Ruth E. Doherty

Peerade Committee—Albert G. Sirois chairman, Reginald H Arnold, Paul W Kinney, Franklin A Keare, Philip S Robbins

Banquet Committee Nelson B Gray chairman, Herbert K Borkland, Charles H. Steele, Americo Gloria, Hugh M. Wallace, Marjorie Huntley, Florence A McKenzie

ADMINISTRATION MAKES PUBLIC STATEMENT OF ANOTHER DEFICIT DANCE

Last Key and Serpent Affair Resulted in a Loss—Fall Dance, Charging 50c, Made Fifty Dollars Profit

"Another Dance to Deficits," is the way the administration characterizes the Key and Serpent dance of April 20, which resulted in a deficit of $24.91. An itemized statement follows.

Receipts, $1 admission		$ 79 00
Expenses:
Orchestra	$60 00
Rental	25 00
Printing	7 05
Refreshments	8 61
Floor Wax	2 55
Taxi	70
Total		103 91
Net Loss		$ 24.91

50c Dance Profitable

Startling in this connection is the contrast between the last dance and the fall dance of Key and Serpent, held on November 3, 1928, which resulted as follows:

Receipts, 50c for 441		$220.50
Expenses
Orchestra	$75 00
Refreshments	17 80
Printing	24 75
Rent	19.20
Wax	2 40
Flares for Peerade	36.00
Total expense		166.15
Net gain		$ 54.35

Administration authorities especially note the fact that, while admission to the fall dance was only 50c per couple, nevertheless a net profit of over fifty dollars resulted.

DELTA PSI AWARDED RESERVE OFFICERS' CUP

Scabbard and Blade Trophies Won by J. O. Percival, '31, and T. R. Irish, '32—Federal Inspection Believed to be a Success

On Monday and Tuesday last a large crowd of admiring coeds and others witnessed Vermont's annual inspection of her R. O. T. C. unit. The inspecting officers were Lt. Colonel Walton Goodwin, Jr., Cav. D. O. L., and Major Robert H. Barrett, Inf. D. O. L. All events were run off in their scheduled order starting with quizzes of both the freshmen and sophomores on the orderly work and ending with a series of competitive drills on Tuesday morning. President Bailey received the initial parade on Monday morning spending some time with the officers.

Competitive Drills Feature

From the spectators point of view the three competitive drills and especially the interfraternity contest for the recently donated Reserve Officers' Cup held the most interest. Eight squads were entered in this contest. Delta Psi commanded by B. W. Gustafson the Independents, commanded by R. H. Curtiss; Sigma Phi commanded by C. C. Lyman, Sigma Nu commanded by J. Hyland, Phi Delta Theta, commanded by H. J. Kropper, Alpha Tau Omega commanded by F. E. Robbins, Kappa Sigma commanded by C. J. Douglas; and Lambda Iota, commanded by G. S. Rand. These were rated in the order listed by the judges for competitive drills. Captain Ira E. Ryder 13th Infantry, 1st Lieutenant Kent Nelson 13th Infantry and 2nd Lieutenant Allen Thayer, 13th Infantry.

The winning squad drawn from Delta Psi fraternity, was composed of B. W. Gustafson in command, and F. A. Bolles, S. S. Corbin, R. F. De Witt, E. G. Hurlburt, K. Parker, A. A. Scharbius, P. E. Westin and R. W. Worrell. These men demonstrated their superiority and hard training by not only excelling in the various regular movements, but by contributing an excellent silent drill which drew

BANQUET PROVIDES AN AUSPICIOUS START FOR JUNIOR WEEK PROGRAM

About fifty juniors gathered in the banquet hall of the Hotel Van Ness Wednesday evening to start Junior Week off right with the banquet. Everyone present had a good time and is convinced that it was certainly worthwhile to revive this custom of past years. The committee, under Nelson B. Gray, in addition to providing a sumptuous dinner, presented a lively program.

Herrick M. Macomber, who acted as toastmaster, had everyone laughing with his witty introductions and remarks. Several including President Robert A. Lawrence, Joyce Goodrich, Mabel Freemann and William J. Slavin were called upon to give short impromptu speeches. During the dinner, a short musical entertainment was given. Cornelia Mould gave several piano selections and duets were played by Major B. Jenks and Roger S. Derby on the violin and trumpet. Nelson Gray also added to the entertainment with several mystifying card tricks.

The committee in charge was: Nelson B. Gray, chairman, Charles H. Steele, America Gloria Hugh M. Wallace, Marjorie Huntley, and Florence A. McKenzie.

Junior Prom, Premier Event Of The Week, Due Tonight

Principal Event of 1929 Junior Week an Anticipated Success—Tasillo's Orchestra and Dutch Atmosphere to Feature at Memorial Auditorium This Evening

MACE, PROM CHAIRMAN, HAS ALL IN READINESS

Junior Prom! The principal gala event of Junior Week! What would Junior Week be without its traditional promenade? What a host of pleasant memories are evoked in the minds of many by the mere mention of it! Tonight the social event will be the concern of all who are fortunate enough to attend. That it will eclipse all former promenades is certain when one glances over the list of those chosen to uphold and revivify the spirit and youth of the Class of 1930.

Charles H. Mace, popular chairman of the Junior Prom predicts a record attendance. Not content with assuming the responsibility for the whole affair, Mace has done some especially fine work in getting out attractive posters for the event. Joseph H. Sugden, ballyhoo man for the dance, has been busily broadcasting publicity for the big event.

Carl H. Ramm, chairman of the Music Committee has secured Lieutenant H. Tasillo's Governor's Footguard Orchestra of Hartford, Conn. This orchestra according to the chairman will meet the approval of the most fastidious. It was only after great consideration that this orchestra was chosen in preference to other popular ones. Lieutenant Tasillo's orchestra of twelve musicians recently played a battle of music with McDermott's Orchestra, one of the best in New England, at the Butterfly Pavilion in Springfield, Mass.

Mabel Freeman, chairman of the decorations committee reports that if everything depends on the decorations the success of the Prom is already assured. The decorations committee has decided to put on a unique touch at the Prom. These decorations along with the sixty little tables placed alongside of the walls will give a picturesque and joyful tone of originality to the spacious hall in the Memorial Auditorium.

With favors and programs secretly worked up to the last minute plenty of surprise features will be in store for the dancers at the annual Prom. Next Friday night from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.

The complete list of all those who have been actively engaged in promoting the different activities of the 1929 Junior Week is as follows:

Junior Prom, Charles H. Mace, chairman; programs and favors, Odone A. Marchetti; hostesses, Charlotte Cleveland, Dorothy M. Perry, Anne J. Wilson, Dorothy V. Dugan, Janice M. Goodrich.

Decorations, Mabel Freeman, chairman; Angus W. Clain, Frank E. Beckley, Lester W. Meehan, Major B. Jenks, Mabel L. Freeman, Beverly Householder, Iva M. Harris, Phoebe H. Flint, Irene L. Marcotte, Natalie Owsley.

Music Committee, Carl H. Ramm, chairman; Philip E. Manning, Julia Wyckoff, Anna M. McLaughlin.

Publicity Committee, Joseph H. Sugden, chairman, William J. Slavin, Lawrence O. Carlton.

Punch Refreshments Committee, Herrick M. Macomber, chairman; Neil B. Gray, James C. Potter, Frances M. Hazen, Ruth E. Doherty.

Programs Committee, Albert G. Steele, chairman; Reginald H. Arnold, Paul W. Lyons, Franklin A. Sears, Phillip S. Robbins.

Banquet Committee, Nelson B. Gray, chairman; Herbert K. Borkland, Charles H. Steele, America Gloria, Hugh M. Wallace, Marjorie Huntley, Florence A. McKenzie.

Junior Week Programs, Frederick H. Woodward, chairman, Arnold G. Anderson, Thomas J. Halligan, John M. Munro.

Those members attending the tea at Redstone last Sunday were Professor and Mrs. Packard, Professor and Mrs. Spaeth, Miss Ada Jones, Mrs. Burnett, Mr. Adams and Mr. Frederick. The tea was quite pleasant. It is not fully decided as to whether there will be another tea this coming Sunday. Watch for further notice.

A blessed thing it is that any memory can be separated from the pain that attends it; nothing but evil would else be remembered, and no one could bear to live.—Coleridge.

ADMINISTRATION MAKES PUBLIC STATEMENT OF ANOTHER DEFICIT DANCE

Last Key and Serpent Affair Resulted in a Loss—Fall Dance, Charging 50c, Made Fifty Dollars Profit

Another Dance to Deficits, is the way the administration characterizes the Key and Serpent dance of April 20 which resulted in a deficit of $24.91. An itemized statement follows:

Receipts $1 admission		$ 79 00
Expenses
Orchestra	$60 00
Rental	2 00
Printing	1 00
Refreshments	8 61
Floor Wax	2 30
Taxi	50
Total		104 91
Net Loss		$ 24 91

50c Dance Profitable

Starting in this connection is the contrast between the last dance and the fall dance of Key and Serpent held on November 2, 1928 which resulted as follows:

Receipts 300 for 441		$220 50
Expenses
Orchestra	$150 00
Refreshments	17 80
Printing	24 75
Rent	19 20
Wax	2 40
Flares for Parade	20 00
Total expense		165 15
Net gain		$ 54 35

Administration authorities especially note the fact that while admission to the fall dance was only 50 per couple nevertheless a net profit of over fifty dollars resulted.

Vermont Chemistry Department Has Had Highly Interesting Development

[illegible] in science itself rather than [illegible]

[illegible] teachers of higher special[illegible] of the secondary school course[illegible] two department plans for next year to [illegible] the graduate departments of the larger universities

[illegible] the department of chemistry [illegible] especially interested in subjects [illegible] principal part of our teaching [illegible] and thus are attracting [illegible] teachers of higher special[illegible] of the secondary school course[illegible] two department plans for next year to [illegible] the graduate departments of the larger universities

At a recent meeting of the Green Mountain Club an account was given of [illegible] who were from outside Vermont. The [illegible] included a surprising number of [illegible]. Keeping track of the [illegible] would be difficult and probably [illegible]. And Vermont [illegible] has had few of the chemical [illegible]. Besides the chemists [illegible] in Vermont, those teaching at Middlebury College, at Norwich University and at the University of Vermont and their students, and the few men employed in chemical chemistry in the state have handled so [illegible]

A Scene in the Chemical Laboratories

[illegible] this much. That it is difficult to become an accomplished chemist? Yes, rather, but stimulatingly difficult. And the rewards of accomplishment materially, intellectually, and in opportunity for adventurous living were never as great as now. The study of research methods tends to sharpen the mind to an elasticity that defies age. Young folks start with chemistry sets and with the further advantage of [illegible] Grove viewpoints [illegible] can be grasped. The lessons of [illegible] and [illegible] have grown [illegible] a foundation of general and a variety of [illegible] knowledge [illegible] few years ago. Everybody [illegible] knows of [illegible] by chemists [illegible] the wonder is not that [illegible] the thoughts of those in other fields. Chemical [illegible] is [illegible] adequate than ever before in [illegible] of the world's literature. Improvements in [illegible] facilities, conference and entertainments accelerate progress and [illegible] the [illegible] and unpleasant tasks of [illegible] days.

The status of chemistry in America has changed. The competent chemist [illegible], for example, on a career in the industries would [illegible] fight a battle for the recognition of his science rather [illegible] and great confidence with which he is received. And [illegible] in a scheme of things [illegible] with [illegible] trained [illegible] investigation.

The extent to which science is now used and the need in its application for men of broad education is [illegible] and in all large businesses and in many [illegible] by the establishment of more [illegible] means for advanced study and research. Numerous scholarships and fellowships [illegible] for gifted young men and women to perfect their preparation.

Our department endeavors to keep its teaching abreast of a rapidly advancing science and to enable its graduate students to take advantage of these newer opportunities. For these students even less stress than of old is laid on technological studies, greater emphasis and more time are given in class room and laboratory to fundamental theory. Opportunity for [illegible] subjects has been enlarged. New de[illegible] gether as a Local Section of the American Chemical Society. This enables us from time to time to invite distinguished chemists from without to visit and speak to us. At other times we distinguish one another and discuss [illegible] and its life.

Another means of contact with people and conditions beyond our walls is through industrial trips taken in the [illegible] the past two seasons [illegible] with the Professor of the [illegible] trips to Troy and Schenectady N. Y. and other centers of industrial activity.

Alumni and other friends of the department will want to know something of our material needs. These are and [illegible] for substantial [illegible]. The endowment of the department [illegible] needs a fixed income set within a few years the cost of books and of periodicals has doubled. Many improved forms of instruments and of apparatus, [illegible] have been developed for teaching and research that we have not as yet felt able to purchase. Then, too, it is our hope to be able to transform in the near future a part of the north end of the Science Hall basement into one teaching laboratory and two small research laboratories. These will need special equipment. When one of our younger members completes the research that is to add special interest to the name of the University, the distinction, and our pride in it, will be enhanced if we are able to state that the spectroscopic results were made possible through the specific [illegible] potentiometer, thermostat, microscope furnace or tome given by [illegible] of the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] cabinet, plate or shrine in [illegible] or in handsome tome).

Little mention has been made of the department staff. It is a high calling to be a teacher of a great science. We feel ourselves important. There are nine of us. When visiting the University, as of course you do occasionally during its working terms, [illegible] at the chemistry laboratories and meet with us. Probably we will serve tea, real tea in china cups.—Prof. [illegible] in Vermont Alumni Weekly

Reserve Officers Cup Awarded to Delta Psi Fraternity

Scabbard and Blade Cups

The rest of Tuesday morning was consumed in a drill down for the two Scabbard and Blade cups. J. O. Percival, of the Lambda Iota fraternity, won the sophomore trophy, and T. R. Iron Sigma Delta received the freshman award.

In 1927 L. R. Robinson excelled among the sophomores and J. W. Chilson among the frosh, while in 1928, E. C. Ball and B. B. Jastremski were awarded the laurels.

GLEE CLUB RENDERS OPERA "IMPATIENCE"

Professor Wuzzett's Charges Outshow "Showboat" and Outsing "The Singing Fool" as They Score in Tragic Opera

ENTIRE PLASTERED CAST SMASHES TO SUCCESS

In a frenzy of musical rage, outrivaling the crashing opera of Samson, which we think was the original opera, the Glee Club scored a triumph that will echo, resound, and reverberate through the ages. Raising the roof of the Chapel by their first crescendo, they showed their impatience at all mundane things. At the first slow rumbling of this crescendo, the principal actors of the opera "Impatience" were ushered in. Then the opera, or as we colloquially say, the fun began.

The principal actors responsible for the tempus were as follows: Impatience, Coryla Cad; Bunonion, Fairy Hubbard; Grosserror, Hoger Beeall; Lady Kane, Carlon Baldhead; Lady Allanger, Dam Smash; Lady Pooph, Horraine Lilpill; Lady Eel, Porous Prat; Duke, Major Crank; Colonel, P. I. Chatfield; Major, Den Mene.

Last to Professor Wuzzett, the cohorts stationed themselves at advantageous places around the stage, in order to avert the falling timbers, as they prepared to put Burlington all over the map.

If I have described the first blast as rather heavy, the second one which wrung out the life-blood of all the members, beggars description.

Experts that they were, keyed up to spent out from their powerful laryns, the sum of their consummate efforts at one powerful ebullition they lived up to their motto, "le diable à quatre."

Then having thus seized from the unwilling audience all the attention they desired, they proceeded to do as thespians, what they did as a stentorian chorus:

"A lazy day, a lack a day,
Look, I'm just wilting away,
I'm missing the gown, you bum
Which I ironed, while you hummed."

"Winnowings From The Mill," a Paper Of Ye Very Olden Times

In the year 1876 there was published by the students of the University of Vermont a paper by the name of Winnowings From the Mill. Winnowings From the Mill, the February issue of which was a 12-page affair, was ambitious to be issued twice each term. The subscription price per year was one dollar and single copies could be secured for 20 cents.

One striking difference between the publication and a modern student publication is that there is no space devoted to athletics save a plea, presented in a manner typical of undergraduates of apparently all ages, for a gymnasium. Perhaps you would like to read the plea.

The Gymnasium

[illegible] exercise is absolutely essential to health and the perfect development of the physical and mental powers of a man. Mind can be worked to its fullest capacity only when the body is in a perfect condition; and the body cannot reach such a state unless it be fitly exercised. Hence means ought to be afforded in every educational institution for such exercise, and students be compelled, under it, to take the amount a competent professor, to take the amount requisite for good health. But compulsory [illegible] would probably meet with strong opposition. Students would ask by what right do you compel us to do this?" "We run our own risk of sickness." Yet, it would be just as pertinent and sensible for them to ask "what right have [illegible] College us to study Greek." If an [illegible] aims at the highest result in [illegible] attains at the highest result in [illegible] the same constraint should be employed to compel a student to improve his body as his mind. Now, while we students of the U. V. M. appreciate the great value of the new Art Gallery, and the [illegible] enjoyment and benefit to be derived therefrom, we cannot help thinking that an open-plan gymnasium would have supplied a much more palpable need of the College, and we earnestly hope that the next philanthropist, who wishes to immortalize himself, and aid his Alma Mater, will pause and remember that [illegible] and health are prior to esthetics. And while we await the coming of such an one we would suggest that, at least, something be done to keep down the dust in the present gymnasium; and a little attention paid to keeping the apparatus in repair. A very small expense would do this, and make it possible to exercise without producing asphyxia.

The table of contents of the magazine shows a decided literary slant in the minds of those early winnowers. There is to be found, classed as Literary, a translation of The Lorelei, essays, Did Milton Fail, Byron as an Orator, and Ulric de Hutten, a play, College Hospitality, and an article on The Basques, spelled Basquers in the table. Under Editorial Items we note: Shall We Visit the Centennial?—Is It Possible for Patriotism to Triumph?—Bodily Exercise—Tariff Question. The Scientific Department contributes the Birth of Chemistry and the Antiquity of Man. Under Miscellaneous are listed Personal, Literary Intelligence, Educational Matters, New Books.

The student mind in 50 years seems not to have changed unrecognizably. The editorial on The Gymnasium might have been written by some modern scribe in the CYNIC office of today. And if that be not sufficient proof of similarity we have a little squib on The Library, wherein the faculty seems already to have begun upon its long string of errors that yearly grows greater, causing a reader of publications to wonder how the institution could ever have endured for so long when so wrongly guided.

The Library

Has it not occurred to the Faculty that in excluding students from the alcoves of the Library, they are depriving them, especially Seniors and Juniors, of a very valuable privilege, merely to escape a very slight inconvenience? There are occasions when a student cannot name exactly the book he needs; and a few minutes' consultation of the shelves would avoid the disappointment of finding that the contents of the book he has drawn, apply to the subject he wishes to investigate, about as well as a Greek grammar would to a lesson in Calculus.

Students came in 1876, lived their little hectic hour as students do today, worried about how things were going, contributed their mite to the life of the institution, and went away again, bearing into the world [illegible] and the teachings of their [illegible] perpetuating her principles, they are still perpetuated. But the seasons come the [illegible] as stated in a certain [illegible] song, and some things do need but read the little [illegible] Hospitality, with local [illegible] of stoves, stove blacking, papers, spittoons and [illegible] alize it.

College Hospitality

A Plea for the Patient and [illegible]

We have often wondered [illegible] numerous army of great [illegible] course of the world's history [illegible] sued knowledge under [illegible] "self made" men who [illegible] through college on a [illegible] three crackers a day [illegible] Rev. John Todd have [illegible] with three cents in their [illegible] persisted for the emptiness [illegible] by stuffing their head with [illegible] amount of knowledge [illegible] whether this "noble army" [illegible] were ever troubled during [illegible] by visitors, not to say [illegible] are they double martyrs [illegible] canonization with Christ [illegible] We respectfully submit [illegible] the Faculty, the following [illegible] unexaggerated passage from [illegible] life of one of those [illegible] who keep open house for [illegible] ungrateful rabble of [illegible] after when a faltering [illegible] comes timidly from the [illegible] these, let each professor [illegible] ruthlessly dashes down the [illegible] perhaps a scene like the following [illegible] been enacted.

POLITICAL CANDIDATES TAKE COLLEGE STUMP

(From New Student)

At Southern Methodist University, the Semi-Weekly Campus distributed five hundred bottles of soda pop, thirty gallons of ice cream, cider and pies at a political mass meeting addressed by the Methodist college "orfis seek ers." Here are some of the high-lights of the S. M. U. campaign.

Regulating campus morals seems to be an unpopular job, since there is only one candidate for the position of head of the Honor Council.

Graft is not foreign to campus politics, since one candidate for the editorship of the Campus pledges himself, if elected, to give "fullest publicity to the slightest evidence of dishonesty, graft or near-graft." Friends and acquaintances will not be spared.

The first plank of a candidate for the associate editorship of the Rotunda, presumably the college annual, promises to conduct a beauty contest.

That Student Council meetings be thrown open to the public is the foremost suggestion contributed by the Campus to whichever candidate is courageous enough to use it. Says the Campus: "Shall the Student Council continue its star chamber sessions, or shall it become a real organ of student self government?"

A COLLECTION OF SCOTCH

Sandy MacDonald betook his bowlegged way to a chemist one day, with a bottle bulging from his hip pocket. "Mon, I'm in doot about this bottle o' Scotch," Sandy said, producing the liquor. "Will ye test it for me?" The chemist put the alleged Scotch through its paces, and after various mysterious tests, he turned to Sandy. "Good heavens, man," he said, "you can't drink this. It will make you a blind. Here I'll dump this in the sink." "Hold on; hold on!" yelled Sandy, grabbing the bottle. "Don't waste it. I'll give this to a friend o' mine who's blind already."

ADVICE TO THE LOVETORN

My Dear Mr Hall

I am a married woman I hope you won't mind a married woman's writing to you but it's awfully important Its so important I don't know what to do I'm actually frantic Here is my case

My husband a heavy drinker, is sick quite often Recently, the doctor called and left a concoction for him to take, giving [illegible] the following orders Give your husband five teaspoons of the mixture in this bottle every evening before going to bed

But Mr Hall I can't do this We have only three teaspoons Please tell me what to do, as I dearly love my stricken husband and would honestly hate to see him die

Very truly yours,
Mrs A Goodtime

Mrs A Goodtime.
Dear Madam

I deeply sympathize with you in your present marital predicament However you say that your husband is a heavy drinker Very well Throw away the three spoons and let him lap the bottle

Envyously yours,
Ex-Convict

Dear Ex-Convict

I am a College House cutie who needs your theatrical advice I was [illegible] and having a wonderful time until I met Hulbert I fell in love with him on the spot just what spot I don't recall But he immediately began to find fault with me My clothes were too [illegible] my hair wasn't curly my neck was dirty oh, Ex you knew how awful men are

I said I loved him I did I wanted to do as he wanted me to do So first I shortened all my skirts Nothing happened Then I curled my hair nicely with my new Nestles outfit Nothing happened Finally I washed my neck and then plenty happened for the next time I went out the dog that [illegible] didn't bit me I ran over and upset an ash can [illegible] and a big man came to the door I exclaimed what and he gasped and demanded to know He looked at my knee in a suggestive manner

"Can't blame the dog Lady," he drawled "any sucker didn't grow ye [illegible] you not want to do

Anxiously Helen Heaven

Dear Ex

This is the time of year when everyone is broke and must [illegible] about the means of commencing How can we do so?

INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL GEOGRAPHY

By J. Russell Smith

Reviewed by P. V. H.

[illegible] and C. Otis Hall's [illegible] geography is deep [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

This week is in the form of a serial. Part I is entitled "The Hot Dogs on [illegible] Geography" Part II. Commercial Geography It is in two parts. It is divided into two sections [illegible] are you keen to it?

Part I "Industrial Geography" will [illegible] Hon farming and starch to [illegible] tobacco and minerals

Interesting but no peace and security [illegible] to be excellent I think we may with certainty that it belongs on the farm. Cereals go to the breakfast table starches to the laundry and animals to pasture. Vegetables go to the vegetarian, fruits to the [illegible] and wine to the head. Sugar is sweet and — what are condiments? Fishes are icky, violets are blue, [illegible] a baloney and so are you The forest belongs in the woods, and the paper in the street Fiber is this and imitation leather, and clothing is what you don't see on women

Leather and rubber stink when they burn So would this book, if it would burn.

Part II, "Commercial Geography"—on [illegible] goes over the trade roots and other roots of evil

1. The trade routes of the world.
2. The trade routes of North America
3. The trade routes of South America.
4. The trade routes of Asia.
5. The trade routes of Africa
6. The trade routes of Europe.
7. The trade routes of the Mediterranean
8. The trade routes of Australia.
9. The trade routes of the Eskimos.
10. More trade routes

We recommend that this book be sunk along the wettest of the watery trade routes. It would sink faster than the speed of light, and that ain't fast enough for me.

LOOSE LEAF LIVY

LOOSE LEAF LIVY: A Special Translation For Vermont Students by Lucius K Laelius; Lamper Lark, publ., loose leaf; 11,000 pp.; $1.00 dozen, $1.00 per mo., easy payment price ($13.00); Body by Fisher.]

Vermont students are admittedly connoisseurs of trots; long experience has shown them what are the fine points of excellence by which to judge, and, perhaps, approve ponies. And here, at last, we have a book worthy of such distinguished amateurs as these. You students know that some trots are good, some are bad, and the most are just mediocre. If one has some excellent mechanical feature, it is likely to be poor (as compensation) in its English. Another may be good for class translation, but when it comes to studying for exams, it's hard to connect up with the Latin. But Professor Laelius knew the faults of translations in general and he knew the needs of the student; he had just been one himself. There is probably no man living better qualified to write a student's translation of Livy than Professor Laelius.

First, take the mechanical features of the book. It is bound in several syntactical notes. These are absolutely volumes all of small size (3½ x 2½). The sheets are attached in the standard loose leaf manner, so that any of them can be detached and, being small, placed inside your Latin text, where they may readily be read. That feature is, of course, designed for recitation use. On the back of the recitation translation (which is printed on one side only, in order not to distract the prof by turning the page at the wrong time) is printed an interlinear or parsed translation. By [illegible] the whole book by libri is given to [illegible] information of anything that is comparing this and the other, one can [illegible] for exams very easily.

In the last volume a brief résumé [illegible] Then follow complete geographical, historical, personal, and [illegible], and in accuracy they have passed the revision of the ten leading Latin scholars of America and Europe. In the making of the whole work, careful comparative study was made [illegible] with works of similar nature.

The volumes are bound in flexible [illegible] though they are not intended [illegible] for use bound.

No praise can be too great for this [illegible]. Buy it and see for yourself its worth.

Football in the Sixteenth Century

Any exercise which withdraweth from godliness, either upon the boath, or any other day, ought and to be forbidden. Now we grossly blind, that seeth not aforesaid exercises not only withdraw us from godliness and virtue, but hail and allure us to wickedness sin. For as concerning dancing, I protest unto you that it may be called a friendly kind of a play or recreation, but rather a murthering practice, than a sport or pastime. For commonly one lie in wait for his fellow, seeking to overthrow him, and to throw him on his nose, thereby to break hard stones? in ditch or valley or hill, or what place he careth not, so he have him.

And he that can serve him this fashion, he is counted a fellow, and who but he? By means, sometimes their arms broken, sometimes their legs, sometimes their arms; sometime one part of joint, sometime another, and the noses gush out with blood, time their eyes start out, and times hurt in one place or another. But whosoever doeth the best, goeth not scot free either sore wounded or bruised, or [illegible] as he did, escapeth very hardly.

And no marvel, for there be sleights to meet one to dash him against the ground, elbows, to hit him under the with their gripped fists, knees to catch him withal, to pitch him on his neck with such murthering devices as groweth envy, malice, hatred, displeasure, and not else; and sometimes brawling, contention, quarrel, murther, homicide, and shedding of blood as experience teacheth.

Is this murthering Exercise for the Sabbath a Christian dealing, for one to maim and hurt another, of prepensed malice, or devise this to do to another, or suffer another to do to us? [illegible] more careful over the Brethren!

Vermont Wins First State Title Game at Norwich 7-2

Kendrick, on Mound for Vermont, Steady in Pinches—Waining of Norwich Strikes Out Fifteen Batters But Blows Up in Eighth Inning

TRAYNOR BRILLIANT FOR CATS AT BAT, IN FIELD

Vermont's baseball team invaded Norwich last Tuesday to take the latter into camp to the tune of 7 to 2 at Slade Field. A stellar hurling battle took place for seven innings between "Jimmy" Kendrick, the Catamount twirler, and Waining, the Cadet star. In the eighth, however, Vermont batted out five runs across the plate to add to the two already scored, and to win the game.

Despite the chilly rain a large crowd was on hand to witness the game. Neither side scored for three innings. The first run of the game was made in the fourth inning when the Cats batted one run. The Cadets retaliated in their half of the fifth with two runs. In the sixth Vermont pushed another run across to tie up the game. The downfall of the Cadets came in the eighth inning when Waining allowed three hits, hit one man and passed two others. A passed ball by Cannon permitted two of the runners to score. Three more came in on two hits before the side was retired. This ended all the scoring. Kendrick held the Cadets well in hand for the rest of the game.

The contest was featured by several fielding gems and by two snappy double plays on Vermont's part. "Pie" Traynor scintillated for Vermont both at bat and in the field. At the plate he made two singles and a double. His double was the only extra base hit of the day. In the field he made five assists and three assists, and took part in two double plays. Winant showed up well at first base, in his second game at that position. Kendrick was practically invincible on the mound, allowing only two free tickets and whiffing five. Kane and Coane starred at bat for Norwich. Waining on the mound struck out fifteen Cats but was rather unsteady in the pinches. His blow-up in the eighth inning is undoubtedly what cost the Cadets the game.

This victory for Vermont has rather upset the dope in the Conference standing. Norwich, previous to this game, had beaten Middlebury who subdued the Cats 7-0 on their home field last week. If the Cats can come through with a victory over the Black Panthers a week from Monday they should take the state title again this year.

VERMONT NETMEN TIE MIDDLEBURY AT 3-ALL

Green and Gold Take Both the Doubles—Pouch Captures the Singles Match—Boston College Here Tomorrow, St. Michael's Monday

Vermont and Middlebury tied in a Green Mountain Conference tennis match on the back campus courts last Monday afternoon at 3-3. The Black Panthers took the first three singles matches in a row before Pouch of the Catamounts won his match to make the count 3-1. The Vermonters staged a come-back in the doubles, however to take both matches and knot the count. The relative standing of the teams in the Conference is not affected by this match. Middlebury still holds first place by virtue of an earlier win over the Cats at Middlebury. The summary:

Woodbury (M) beat Shedd (V) 6-3, 6-2; Sun (M) beat Borkland (V) 6-4, 6-4; Daland (M) beat Goddard (V) 4-6, 9-7, 1-6.

Shedd and Borkland (V) beat Woodbury and Sloper (M) 6-1, 6-4; Pouch and Macomber (V) beat Daland and Bemis (M) 6-1, 6-0.

The Cats met St. Michael's at Winooski on Wednesday. A summary of this contest will be found in the next issue of the CYNIC. Another contest with the Purple will take place on the back campus courts next Monday afternoon at 4.00 o'clock.

Boston College netmen will be here tomorrow afternoon to stage a match as part of the Junior Week program. Capt. "Mal" Hegarty will play No. 1 for the Bostonians with "Vin" Roberts, "Bill" Flynn, and Frank Braughton as his colleagues. The Eagles are all experienced tennis players, every man having been on the team last year. The Green and Gold have a tough match on hand. Hegarty and Braughton are two of the best at the sport that have played at the Heights for several years.

FROSH-RUTLAND TENNIS MATCH STOPPED BY RAIN

Yearlings are Scheduled to Play Cathedral on Monday and Rutland Here the Following Day

U. V. M. yearling tennis team was tied at one-all with Rutland High School when rain brought an end to the match on the University Courts Tuesday afternoon. Tupper beat Seeley Rutland's ace, for the first time this season 6-2, 7-5. Matthews (R) beat Albert (V) 6-2, 7-5. Holdbrook (V) won his first set 6-2 and was leading in the second set 4-1. Torry lost his first set 6-2 but was tied at five-all when rain caused an end to the game.

CONN. AGGIES INVADE CENTENNIAL TODAY

Vermonters in Winning Stride—Visitors Have Slugging Line-up

WOOD AND MULLANEY PROBABLE PITCHERS

Larry Gardner has his baseball team on its toes and it is after the second game of the week. Victories over Williams Saturday and over Norwich here Tuesday have given the nine plenty of pep and everything is set for its tussle with the Connecticut Aggies who will invade Centennial Field this afternoon.

The Cats at last seem to have hit their stride. They have started to find the ball at the plate and the pepper that they have handed their pitchers in the last two contests has been tight and still nigh errorless.

Nevertheless they will find the New Englanders a hard nut to crack. The Aggies have been pummeled by a pair lately but they broke the spell when they conquered the strong Wesleyan team by a tight score. They have a pair of heavy hitters in Haverseat and Tamboori while their center fielder Goebel has also been making the pill pretty consistently. They also have a couple of first class pitchers in Mullaney and McCombe who have plenty of speed and hooks galore. Mullaney will probably take the box for the Aggies against the Vermonters. Wood may toss them over for the Cats mounts.

Free Aeroplane Rides

College students are being given free aeroplane rides through the courtesy of the Parker Pen Company which is sending its aeroplane the "Patter Duofold" on a tour of southern colleges from Purdue. So far the plane has visited ten colleges, and at Purdue over 1,700 students signed for the free air ride.

She (at the piano): That last note was D flat.

He: That's what I thought, but I didn't like to say anything.

—College Life.

The match will be replayed next Tuesday on the U. V. M. courts.

The team will meet Cathedral High School on the college courts Monday afternoon. The yearlings are in good shape and were counting on a victory over Rutland when rain stopped the contest. Cathedral has the same team as last year and should be somewhat improved but as they have had no matches as yet it is impossible to say at what condition they are in. The probable line-up for Cathedral will be Dowan, Dower, Cronin, Fitzsimmons and O'Connor.

The Vermont yearling team has been improving and should turn in an easy victory. The men who will play for '32 are Tupper, Holdbrook, Torry and Albert.

Cathedral was played yesterday at Cathedral and Burlington here Wednesday, the CYNIC going to press too early to carry a report of these games which will be in the next issue.

Conn. Aggies at Centennial today with the pole.

The Aggies have had only fair success this year, winning about half their games so far.

Wes Wolcott on first base the ne head as long reach and good. The remaining "Aggs" will undoubtedly come next year with experience and age.

Record is now available for pitch Hell get to look that good for a while anyhow.

Pie Traynor had another big day at Norwich Tuesday. Two singles and a double in five times at bat and eight errorless chances including two double play pivots at a Pie Jay's assist.

And now it we only had Lefty Cummings of the Lassoes of '28 record for the year's guys draw our own conclusions.

Reports from Montreal say that Lou Gehrig's 447 have a much stronger opposition at track and field meet had there brought along last Spring.

Unless they have at Georgetown that Al Mackay will surely cop five dog points in the hammer. He throw is improving daily. There ought to be a couple of places in the shot put and javelin for "Al" too.

Tufts' brand new of the biggest pools of the baseball season when it handed Lafayette its first defeat of the season to 6 to 10 Saturday at the Tufts Oval. Monday several more places and four positions of second places of the game but for the visit the hole.

Next year Judging the Penn relay carnival, Harvard will start a box track affair to be known as the Greater Boston Intercollegiates. Six colleges will compete. Harvard, Boston College, Boston University, Northeastern, M. I. T., and Tufts.

Five champions will defend their titles in the coming I. C. A. A. meet at Philadelphia. Eric Krenz of Stamford is defending his shot and discus title, Nichols a teammate will try to hold on to the high hurdle honors. Phil Edwards of N. Y. U. will uphold his half mile record and Jimmy Reed of Harvard will enter the two mile event again.

Building operations are to begin late this week on Notre Dame's new athletic plant—a $750,000 stadium which will seat 60,000 football fans. The new stadium will fill a want long felt by Notre Dame athletic teams and shift the center of the football world to South Bend.

Gentlemen:

Just a line to let you know where some of your tobacco has been going for the last ten years.

I have been smoking Edgeworth for the past ten years, in fact, since I started smoking, and it is just as good now as it was then. Have given other brands a fair trial but there is none like Edgeworth. During that time I have had costly pipes and some not so costly, but I have decided that it is not the pipe but what is in it that counts.

With best wishes for your continued success in the manufacture of this high grade tobacco, I am,

Sincerely,

MONTREAL STARS HERE TOMORROW TO AVENGE LAST YEAR'S DEFEAT

Canadians Were Defeated Last Year 71 to 64 But Will Have Stronger Aggregation Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 p.m. the crack track team of Montreal A. A. A. will clash with the Cats on Centennial field. Vermont has been able to defeat this team once and will again put forth every effort to win tomorrow. Last year the score of 71 to 64 was chalked up in favor of the Green and Gold triumphant over the Maple Aggies. The Cats are expected to win the meeting event but can they hold their own in the field events?

The Canadians have appeared at many of the schedules for several years and each year they enter a strong team. They probably have one of the finest and best balanced track teams which Vermont faces this season. Several of the Montrealers are Olympic prospects and will provide keen competition for the Cats' men. The great Carruthers, for instance is an Olympic star and will compete here tomorrow.

Last year for the first time in his life the tossed and field defeated the Canadians by the score of 11-01. In the high event the broad jump he accounted for a winner and Vermont could not overcome by capturing all other places. At record the Cats gained a few points but Vermont was supreme in the field events. Dobbin leaping was the leading man for Vermont as he will be greatly missed tomorrow. The Montrealers have not forgotten the defeat of last season and will be out for revenge.

New Club Formed

A new club has been organized at the University of Vermont. Members of this newest organization must agree to meet conditions with a view to have the fair sex are out at the question. Each member of this newly formed club is known as a cad but can prove to the contrary.

Speaking of athletics the athletic event scheduled to take place at Day Field Tuesday night was postponed on account of rain. "Freddie" Lynch was there with his winning smile but didn't get the chance to pose.

1829 Marks 100th Anniversary of James Marsh's Essay, Coleridge

Early Life of President Marsh

James Marsh, the fifth president of the University of Vermont, was born in Hartford, Vt., July 19, 1794. He was the son of a farmer, Daniel Marsh, who is described as a man of positive views and the same traits of character and resolute will formed the principle traits in the character of his son. The grandfather of James Joseph Marsh, was one of the early settlers of Vermont. He came from Lebanon, Conn. and established himself at Hartford about the year 1770. He became prominent in public affairs and was a member of the convention at Westminster which declared the independence of Vermont and upon the organization of the government in 1778 was chosen the first Lieutenant Governor.

In the house of his grandfather in the town of the Ottauquechee River James Marsh was born. For the first fifteen years of his life he followed the occupation of his father and it was intended by his parents that he should remain a farmer but his elder brother, who was destined for college relinquished his purpose and James took his place. After brief preparatory studies he entered Dartmouth College in the fall of 1810 at the age of nineteen. In November 1811 James Marsh entered the Theological Seminary at Andover with the view of preparing for the ministry. But after remaining there about a year he was offered and accepted the position of tutor at Dartmouth College. This office he held for two years. The opportunity for studies which the position afforded him was of the greatest advantage to him and was most diligently improved.

During his last year in the seminary Mr. Marsh published in the North American Review (July 1822) a review of an Italian work by Gattinora di Breme. The article bears the title "Ancient and Modern Poetry."

Mr Marsh was particularly proficient in the German language. Much of his reading at that time and thereafter throughout life was in German authors. Before he left the Seminary he had begun, with a friend, the translation of the German work of Beilermann, on the Geography of the Scriptures, which task was afterward completed, so far as his own part was concerned, during an interval of leisure at home, when he dispatched, his biographer states, "five hundred pages in a fortnight."

About two years after leaving the Seminary Mr. Marsh received and accepted an appointment to the Professorship of the Biblical Languages and Literature in Hampden Sidney College, Virginia. During the three years in which he held that office he began to translate from the German, Herder's "Spirit of Hebrew Poetry," the first dialogues of which were published in the Christian Repository at Princeton. The translation was afterwards completed and published in two volumes at Burlington in 1833.

Elected President in 1826

In October 1826 Mr. Marsh was elected President of the University of Vermont. The affairs of the college at that time were not in a very hopeful condition when Mr. Marsh was called to the presidency. The year before the college building had been destroyed by fire. "The students were few in number, the funds not wholly free from embarrassment; the library and apparatus a mere name; and besides an impression seemed to prevail with many that an institution doomed to so many strange calamities, was never destined to succeed, and had better be given up by its friends." But in spite of the discouraging outlook, Mr Marsh, regarding his appointment as the call of duty, resolved to accept it.

the favorite sport. The women voted that the Phi Delts were their favorite fraternity with Delta Psi second and Sigma Nu third. Evidently there are a good many women-haters in the class because words headed the list of the worst things at Vermont. Physical training was second with the cut system coming in a poor third. The class decided that a new gymnasium was the thing that was most urgently needed. A swimming pool was second and school spirit was third.

The humor section among the advertisements completes the book. This section was under the direction of Ben Jones Holmes Jr. who has made his department entirely original with short stories and jokes.

Too much credit cannot be given to the business department under Robert Burbage. This department has made it possible to use the many cuts and halftones on the high grade paper which contribute so much to the appearance of the book.

1929 Marks 100th Anniversary of James Marsh's Essay, Coleridge

Early Life of President Marsh

James Marsh, the fifth president of the University of Vermont, was born in Hartford, Vt., July 19, 1794. He was the son of a farmer, Daniel Marsh who is described as "a man of plain good sense, and the same active sincerity and candor which formed so beautiful a trait in the character of his son." The grandfather of James, Joseph Marsh, Esq., was one of the early settlers of Vermont. He came from Lebanon, Conn., and established himself at Hartford about the year 1772. He became prominent in political affairs and was a member of the convention at Westminster which declared the independence of Vermont and, upon the organization of the government in 1778, was chosen the first Lieutenant-Governor.

In the house of his grandfather, in the valley of the Ottaquechee River, James Marsh was born. For the first fifteen years of his life he followed the occupation of his father; and it was intended by his parents that he should remain a farmer; but his older brother, who was destined for college, relinquished his purpose, and James took his place. After brief preparatory studies he entered Dartmouth College in the fall of 1812, at the age of nineteen. In November, 1817, James Marsh entered the Theological Seminary at Andover with the view of preparing for the ministry. But after remaining there about a year he was offered and accepted the position of tutor at Dartmouth College. This office he held for two years. The opportunity for studies which the position afforded him was of the greatest advantage to him, and was most diligently improved.

During his last year in the seminary Mr. Marsh published in the North American Review (July, 1822) a review of an Italian work by Gattinora di Breme. The article bears the title "Ancient and Modern Poetry."

Mr. Marsh was particularly proficient in the German language. Much of his reading at that time and thereafter throughout life was in German authors. Before he left the Seminary he had begun, with a friend, the translation of the German work of Bellermann, on the Geography of the Scriptures, which task was afterward completed, so far as his own part was concerned, during an interval of leisure at home, when he dispatched, his biographer states, "five hundred pages in a fortnight."

About two years after leaving the Seminary Mr. Marsh received and accepted an appointment to the Professorship of the Biblical Languages and Literature in Hampden-Sidney College, Virginia. During the three years in which he held that office he began to translate from the German, Herder's "Spirit of Hebrew Poetry," the first dialogues of which were published in the Christian Repository at Princeton. The translation was afterwards completed and published in two volumes at Burlington, in 1833.

Elected President in 1826

In October, 1826, Mr. Marsh was elected President of the University of Vermont. The affairs of the college at that time were not in a very hopeful condition when Mr. Marsh was called to the presidency. The year before the college building had been destroyed by fire. "The students were few in number; the funds not wholly free from embarrassment; the library and apparatus a mere name; and besides an impression seemed to prevail with many that an institution doomed to so many strange calamities, was never destined to succeed, and had better be given up by its friends." But in spite of the discouraging outlook, Mr. Marsh, regarding his appointment as the call of duty, resolved to accept it.

COLLEGE PLAYERS GIVE "SUMMERTIME"

Annual Junior Week Play Eclipses All Other Former Productions by Its Excellence

B. HOUSEHOLDER, KROGH TAKE LEADING ROLES

All Players Do Fine Work With Presentation—Dorothy Cottrell Takes All Honors, as Usual

Playing to a large and enthusiastic audience at the Strong Theatre last Thursday night, the University Players scored a distinct success in their Junior Week presentation, "Summertime." Thor Krogh, leading male member of the cast, as Willoughby Spencer, a rather disarming rake, and Beverly Householder as Silvia, a clever and very attractive young lady, were the moving spirits of the play.

Among the excellent cast it is an invidious task to select any for special comment. Yet Miss Dorothy Cottrell deserves special mention. As Mrs. Vokins, a commonplace housekeeper, she so portrayed her part with spontaneity, delightful freshness, and understanding that she readily captivated and secured the interest and sympathy of the audience.

Harvey Butterfield, Phoebe Flint, and Robert Aiken played with poise and naturalness. They fitted their parts admirably and although the play made no great demands on them, they nevertheless fulfilled their duties with an artistry which showed that if it had been necessary they could have done greater things. Miss Flint in particular deserves all the praise which can be given. Having secured the first real laugh of the evening, she maintained this precedent throughout the three acts and kept a genuine spirit of good natured humor rampant in the large and appreciative audience.

Minor parts were carried successfully by a number of players who had their brief but important moments to accent here and there the main trend of the play.

Among the minor parts, Kathryn A. Rauh, Hope K. Ranslow, and Elizabeth M Cary deserve praise for their ease and conviction with which they enacted their rôles.

Fred Householder played his part to perfection. As Jack Hollybush he pleased the audience with his well-conceived interpretation. P. M. Perry as Harry Davenport did full justice to his character.

No critique of this play would be complete without mention of the evident care and sureness of Mr. Metcalf's direction. We feel that Mr. Metcalf has not only deserved well of his cast but of his public for such an admirable production.

The complete cast of "Summertime" was as follows:

Willoughby Spencer .... R. T. Krogh
Silvia ..... Beverly Householder
Jack Hollybush, F. W. Householder, Jr.
Harry Davenport ..... P. M. Perry
Ernest Wybrow .....H. D. Butterfield

REVIEW OF "SUMMERTIME"

For the first time in the long history of Vermont "Summertime" arrived in Vermont in May, to be exact on May 16, and it was a damn fine summer although it didn't last long. The play, the work of an English gentleman, appeared in England first somewhere about 1919 and has since then been wandering around the provinces with spasmodic productions here and there, until by this time it must have netted its author a tidy and well-deserved sum.

The plot is simple, with a musical comedy ingenuity which is rather refreshing. At any moment I expected a scantily clad chorus to rush on the stage and burst into song, but the only songs that appeared were some very ancient and preety English songs which Misses Ranslow, Rauh and Cory sang adequately with occasional as-

SENIOR QUESTIONNAIRES HAVE BEEN DISTRIBUTED

Senior questionnaires, under the direction of the chairman of the committee, Warren A. Dodge, have been distributed to the fraternities and dormitories. They are similar to the junior class questionnaires which were filled out earlier in the year. The most popular, the best athlete, the most all-round, the best dancer and others of a less complimentary nature are featured in this annual custom. The results will be tabulated and published before Senior Week.

The chairman of the questionnaire committee announces that the blanks should be filled out and placed in the questionnaire box in the University Book Store on or before May 21.

LILAC DAY ACTIVITIES READY TO BE OPENED ON NEXT THURSDAY

Committee Chairmen Report Finishing Touch Has Been Put on Preparatory Plans for Lilac Day Pageant

The Lilac Day activities will take place Thursday afternoon, May 23, at four o'clock in back of Redstone, provided Dame Weather does not frown on Burlington. In case of inclement weather Lilac Day will be postponed until Friday. In event of rain on that day the pageant will be held in the gymnasium. Inasmuch as it has not been possible to hold Lilac Day out-of-doors for several years, it is hoped especially that the weather will be favorable this year.

The committee chairmen report that everything is ready, and that all care has been taken in the planning to make this Lilac Day memorable. The committee chairmen are as follows: properties, Margaret Parry, '30; costumes, Alma Farr, '30, and Narcissa Goodsell, '30; dancing, Mildred Whitney, '29; publicity, Priscilla Campbell, '30; supper, Helen Wilson, '30; lantern walk, Elzada Fiske, '29; and singing, Hazel Ladd, '30.

KINGSLEY PRIZE ORATORS WILL COMPETE FRIDAY NIGHT IN AUDITORIUM

A Trio of University Musicians Scheduled to Augment Speaking Program—Baker, Codding, Lisman, Frazier, Jenks, and Pratt to Speak

The Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest will be held at the City Hall Auditorium, Friday evening, May 24, at eight o'clock. Everybody is cordially invited to attend as the program is expected to be intensely interesting with a diversity of types of speeches presented and a trio of talented local musicians in attendance.

The speakers will be: B Baker '31, E. M. Coddin '31, D. H. Frazier '32, R. S. Jenks '32, L. Lisman '31, and G. O. Pratt '32.

The Kingsley Prizes are prizes of twenty-five dollars, fifteen dollars and ten dollars offered by Hon. Darwin P. Kingsley of New York, a graduate in the class of 1881 to male students of the Sophomore and Freshman classes, for the best declamation of passages in oratorical prose. These prizes have from the start been highly coveted by the two lower classes and the competition has been keen. Although the interest does not seem to be so keen this year, the declamations that have been chosen indicate a very interesting evening for those who attend the finals Friday. The winners of last's year's contest were: First, R. T. Krogh; second, L. Lisman; third, B. Baker

The judges have not yet be chosen They will be announced in the next issue of the Cynic.

So far the program is as follows:

JUNIOR WEEK PEERADE CUPS WON BY ROBINSON HALL AND KAPPA SIGMA

R. H. Curtiss, '29, Takes Small Cup for Best Individual Stunt —Large Percentage of Floats Were Parodies on Vermont's Polar Summers

In the Junior Week Peerade held last Thursday afternoon to advertise the Junior Week play "Summertime," Kappa Sigma won the cup for the best men's fraternity stunt. Robinson Hall was awarded the cup for the best women's float and Richard Curtiss who won last year's individual award by his skill on a pair of high stilts labeled "The Height of Entertainment" again won it this year by appearing on an old fashioned velocipede

The following fraternities, dormitories and other groups participated: Redstone, Robinson Hall, Lambda Iota, Grassmount, Zeta Chi, Kappa Sigma, Delta Psi, Phi Delta Theta, Kappa Alpha Theta, Sigma Nu, Allen's Dormitory, and the Independents.

These floats followed the R. O. T. C. band down Main Street, along Church Street, Pearl to Winooski Avenue, and around through Cherry Street to Church Street and thence up College Street to the starting place. It is to be noted that the line of procession is different from former years. This was caused by the fact that the judges' reviewing place at the New Sherwood Hotel is no longer available. In place the lobby commanding a somewhat different view is to be had.

The judges of the Peerade were Prof. Leon W. Dean, Prof. G. Dykhuizen and E. H. Thornton of the Chittenden County Trust Company

The Junior Week Peerade committee through whose efforts the Peerade was so successful is as follows: Albert G. Sirois, chairman, Reginald H. Arnold, Paul W. Kinney, Franklin A. Sears, Philip S. Robbins.

SCABBARD AND BLADE, MILITARY SOCIETY, NOW INITIATING THE RECRUITS

Eleven aspirants for future military glory may be seen around the campus today and tomorrow, attired in ignominous blue "fatigue clothes," as a part of their initiation into Scabbard and Blade, the honorary senior military society. Tomorrow morning, during the chapel hour, the recruits will hold a close order drill on the back campus under Recruit Van Name.

Each one of the recruits has been assigned to carry out some definite task. Recruit Lawrence will act as guard commander and Recruit Aronson as bugler. Recruit Levine is in charge of refreshments while Recruit DeRose and Recruit Macomber must obtain food and act as cooks. Recruits Capron and Reed will be waiters and Vignone will be messenger. Recruit Powell, the latrine sergeant, must equip himself with a pick and shovel, and Recruits Levine and Slavin will be the clean up men.

Recruit Van Name, in addition to his duty as drill holder, must provide himself with the following: two dozen 5 inch worms, one fish pole 8 feet 3½ inches long, one fish line 29 feet 8½ inches long, two fish hooks and one 2-ounce sinker.

Tomorrow night, the recruits will assemble at the gym with full packs, ready to leave for parts unknown. At this distant place, rumored to be near Malletts Bay, the main and concluding part of the initiation will take place.

The new initiates are A. O. Aronson, C. W. Capron, C. N. DeRose, H. B. Levine, R. A. Lawrence, H. M. Macomber, E. H. Powell, W. J. Slavin, F. J. Reed, G. B. R. Van Name, and D. J. Vignone. All are of the class of '30.

A man without mirth is like a wagon without springs, in which one is caused disagreeably to jolt by every pebble over which it runs.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Vermont's Social Season Ended by Fraternity Dances

All Fraternities Have Usual Formal Dances Which Bring Activities of Junior Week and College Year to Close—Open Door Policy Prevails—At the Phi Sigma Delta Formal MacAhrens' Catamount Syncopaters Provided the Music—In the Receiving Line Were Captain and Mrs. W. E. Lauer, M. H. Lantech and Miss Shirley Saunders; and Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Sahlin—The Scene of the Occasion Was the Hotel Van Ness Roof Garden

Social events of the year terminated last Saturday night with the traditional open door fraternity dances. Every house employed decorations of some kind to lend a fitting festive air to climax a highly successful Junior Week.

Zeta Chi held a very successful dinner and dance at the Yacht Club. This was a formal affair with Prof. and Mrs. Leon Dean and Prof. and Mrs. H. G. Millington as chaperones. In a beautifully decorated ball room Happy Flinn's Black Panthers' orchestra furnished the music for the dancers. Leather covered bridge sets were the favors distributed to the guests at the dinner. At the Lambda Iota fraternity Prof. and Mrs. Metcalf and Prof. and Mrs. Carlton acted as chaperones. Frank Cormie's orchestra played and felt bridge table covers with the fraternity and University insignia were distributed to the dancers as favors.

Alpha Tau Omega enjoyed itself with the aid of Prof. and Mrs. Hartwell and Prof. and Mrs. Jordan. The Rose Marie orchestra furnished the requisite melodies. Sigma Nu fraternity held their Junior Week dance at the Burlington Country Club. The chaperones were Prof. and Mrs. Hopkins, Prof. and Mrs. Meredith, and Miss Laura Parker. Joe Lachuyr's orchestra played the latest melodies for the dancers.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon held a successful dance with the aid of Lieut. and Mrs. Herrick and Prof. and Mrs. Bullard. The music was rendered by Dee Kenyon's aggregation of musicians. Phi Delta Theta's dance was chaperoned by Major and Mrs. O. H. Stanley and Lieut. and Mrs. Frederick. Art Bostwick's orchestra of St. Albans made the proper amount of musical syncopation.

Kappa Sigma fraternity entertained itself with the aid of Captain and Mrs. Rattan and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson. Music was played by Frank Flagg's musicians. The Red Rumblers of New Hampshire University played for the Sigma Phi fraternity. The chaperones were Prof. and Mrs. Stillwell and Prof. and Mrs. Pooley.

At the Delta Psi house Prof. and Mrs. P. K. French acted as chaperones. The music was furnished by Carroll's orchestra of Barre.

The Independents also, as an innovation, held a Junior Week dance this year. It was held at the Phi Chi fraternity rooms. Prof. and Mrs. M. D. Powers and Prof. and Mrs. Yates were the chaperones.

GLEE CLUB CLOSES A SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Renders Final Performance Before Vermont Federation—Untiring Efforts of Professors Bennett and Metcalf Largely Responsible

"People come and people go but the Club goes on forever." With its final performance last Tuesday evening, the Men's Glee Club put a finishing touch on a highly successful year in its chosen field of music.

Professor Bennett endeavors each year to choose as many of the members as possible from the University Choir as the training received in the way may be of invaluable help in the Glee Club singing. However, next fall it is hoped that a large percentage of fellows who plan to sing in the New England contest next year will try out early and be at every rehearsal, as this is the only way in which the highest rating can be attained.

This year the club made a remarkable improvement over that of last year, placing eighth in a group of eleven clubs, instead of near the end of the list as it did the year before. Last year "Champlain" was used as the college song and it was a very difficult thing for presentation by a chorus of thirty voices. But this year the popular air "Vermont Victorious" arranged by Professor Bennett was sung with pep and vim, it being a much more suitable choral number.

With the untiring efforts of Professors Bennett and Metcalf, the opera "Patience" was presented in the Strong Theatre the 15th of April. Many who heard it were so enthusiastic as to declare it the best thing ever presented by college students. Certainly it is the best yet presented by the students in the musical line. The remarkable wit of Gilbert and Sullivan's perfectly irresistible melodies will not be forgotten by those who heard it. The Vermont Federation of Women's Clubs was planning its program and desired to have something good in the line of music to begin its Tuesday evening meeting. Accordingly, the Men's Glee Club was invited and it sang the songs which were worked up to such a high degree of perfection for the Boston trip. What is good enough to appear in Symphony Hall where artists the world over have been to sing and play certainly is capable of pleasing a cosmopolitan group of women from all over Vermont. The ladies really enjoyed the program and clapped loudly and long for an encore.

The officers for the club have been elected to serve during the ensuing year. Jenks, who replaces H. C. Dalrymple as manager is a member of Delta Psi. He is advertising manager of the Cynic, is on the 1930 Ariel board and belongs to Pi Delta Rho. He has served this year as manager of the Vermont Literary Magazine.

The new assistant managers are Percival Lambda Iota, rifle team for two years and Ariel board for 1931, winner of the Scabbard and Blade cup for the sophomore drill down last Tuesday. Baker, a member of Wig and Buskin, who has been active in dramatics and in music circles, and last year placed in the Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest; and Cowles, Sigma Delta was on the Cynic board for two years and has been a prominent member of the International Relations Club the past year.

NEW WORLD ANTHOLOGY CONTEST FOR LITERATI

Students of the University of Vermont who have literary ability may be interested to learn of a publication in which they may take part. The Helicon Publishing Company, which is publishing a volume entitled "The New World Anthology" states that this volume will be mainly for amateur authors of both prose and poetry. So far as it is practical the work of established poets will be excluded, nor will any poem be considered which has had previous publication.

The Helicon Publishing Company offers a prize of $100 to the author whose contribution shall be considered the most notable work included in the Anthology and it also proposes to issue during the course of the year individual volumes of those authors whose poems receive the most favorable attention.

THE PROPER THING

Let me tell you what happens when a college play is being considered for presentation

1. The CYNIC learns of it. A reporter is sent out to get preliminary facts. He turns in a fairly long story which is printed in the next issue of the CYNIC. It is then that the student body as a whole first learns of the proposed dramatic venture

2. Tryouts for those aspiring to hold down the various parts are held. A CYNIC reporter covers these and a long advance story is soon printed previous to this advance, several articles of varying length have appeared, in which the history of the play, facts about its author, what the vehicle deals with and many other interesting points have been brought to the attention of the University

3. A series of advances now begins to appear, each designed to stir up new interest among the student body

4. In the issue of the CYNIC directly preceding the presentation of the play a "big splurge" is printed. All previous material is therein condensed, brought up-to-date, revised and made public. Its purpose is to focus as much attention as possible upon an outstanding event about to take place; to stir up student interest in the affair to its highest pitch; to wake up the stragglers who have thus far failed to purchase tickets; in short, to make a big thing as big as it deserves to be

5. The play is reviewed and reported upon in full in the CYNIC.

You will admit that this entails much time and work on the part of the men connected with the paper. Why does the CYNIC do it? For two reasons: First, because it is the duty of its editors to further the success of college functions; and, secondly, because it is, after all, merely following regular, established newspaper procedure and policy.

And here we must pause to take to task those in charge of various University entertainments, plays, Kake Walk, dances and the rest. They evidently feel that it is not necessary to invite as their guest the reporter who is scheduled to review the function. They no doubt expect him to pay the regular admission fee in return for the pleasant task of placing the names of those in charge of the event in the headlines of the next issue. Or else, and we prefer to believe that this is the case, they do not realize that newspaper practice dictates "the proper thing to do" to the chairmen and directors of publicly announced events.

We are not concerned with moral obligations to print certain news. If such obligations exist, they must exist in a mutual manner. In view of this, the CYNIC takes this opportunity of declaring a new policy. It is this: Complimentary passes to each collegiate event must be turned into the office. These invitations must be delivered in ample time before the event takes place.

Merely a statement of fact. The CYNIC endeavors to do its bit; you should be perfectly willing to do yours. In other words, we ask for gentlemanly cooperation

[This editorial does not apply to the major Junior Week functions of this year; the chairmen of these events more than did their share.]

The means for getting a higher standard in Bowdoin seems to be the policy of making the work 10 percent harder every year. This is as it should be . . . .

Why this higher standard of work? Simply that with the tremendous increase in the number of colleges in the United States in the past decade, competition is becoming keen, and the college whose standard remains the same as it was ten years ago does not amount to much.—The Bowdoin Orient.

With the Theatre

Monday and Tuesday

In order that you may not think of steamships I must first point out that S. S. Van Dine is really a cultured gentleman who turned to detective stories in order to rest his art-wearied mind. He thereby made much money and now he is making more money with a talking version of "The Canary Murder Case" which if you can keep a secret is more or less based on the Dot King Murder of a few years ago. The story is interesting. The picture is well done and the cast just falls short of being perfect. William Powell is marvelous as the rather improbable Philo Vance and the man has an English accent that is a constant delight to those interested in such things. Louise Brooks is not exactly suited to the part of the Canary but she carries it off well. The picture is consistently exciting and if you haven't read the book it is consistently mystifying. It is interesting to note that in the solution of the mystery Mr. S. S. Van Dine makes use of a device which he listed as one of the cardinal don'ts in his scholarly writings on the art of the detective story. But what that device is you will have to discover for yourself. It is worth much more than the time and money which you will expend to see this and to hear William Powell being the suave gentleman of leisure who untangles the tangled web of the mystery.

Wednesday and Thursday

Though you might not believe it every clown and every comedian who ever smiled gaily concealed beneath that happy smile an aching heart and perhaps a touch of consumption or far worse, a craving for liquor. And the hearts that are broken for loves sweet sake would, if laid end to end, look quite funny. In any event, believe it or not, it is true or else we've been grossly deceived for these many years that the moving pictures have been in existence. As far back as consciousness that hardy perennial of the heart tug school has been wringing the hearts of the motion picture audiences with its touching little tale of the comedian who went on laughing and singing although some loved one was dying. And he sang merely because some one had whispered in his ear when a child that no matter what happens the show must go on. Sniff Sniff and snuff said. This version of the story is romantically entitled "Molly and Me" and has for its principal tear-tuggers Belle Bennett (the woman who has wept more tears than she should have) and Joe E. (otherwise known as Shovey Face) Brown. It is sychronized with lots of noises and a theme song entitled "In the Land of Make Believe" a song which the author guaranteed to set you to wholesale weeping . . . and you will if you have weak eyes or a weak mind. Bring along lots of handkerchiefs if you must go.

Friday

Need I again announce Silent Night. This time there is another Foreign picture with Ben Lyon and Lya Mara. The name is "Dancing Vienna" and though the story is slight and makes few demands on the actors, it will do if you are in a romantic mood. There is a whole lot in the plot which has to do with music and it makes you wonder why they didn't add noises. But perhaps they thought that soundlessness was more conducive to the romantic atmosphere and mood in which they draped the picture. It's very pretty and unless you like that sort of thing so much sweetness is likely to make you ill. The thing may be supposed to move fast but it doesn't.

The companion feature is George O'Brien in "Joy Street" and it is tough or maybe its just because I can't stand George O'Brien. There are spots in this which are supposed to be funny but I couldn't find them. There are spots in this which are supposed to be beautiful but they were equally absent as far as I was concerned. There are supposedly spots of touching sadness which I did succeed in finding. In fact the whole picture seemed a sorry affair.

Saturday

We revert to sound. Not such good sound but you can't expect too much. Phyllis Haver, whom I have long considered the most attractive gold digger type on stage or screen speaks and even breaks into song but her voice isn't anything to leave the wife and kiddies for. Raymond Hatton is less funny than he ought to be but in spite of this the picture keeps moving at a fairly good speed, aided along the way by "dialogue, incidental songs, sound effects and sychronized score." Rather spotty.

Senior: Hold on. Don't tear yourself away. Sit down.

Soph: Can't stop. (Exit.)

Third Fresh: Here comes Miss X. Hi! Look at that, boys!

(Freshmen cluster round window with exclamations. Tap at the door.)

Omnes: Come in, darn you!

(Door opens, and discovers Professor X. Prime. Freshmen, awe-struck, become quiet.)

Prof: Is this Mr. Jones's room?

Senior: Next room, sir.

(Exit Prof.)

Senior (sotto voce): By Jove! Narrow escape; came near swearing at him. (Knock.) Come in!

(Enter stranger.)

Stranger: Ugh! can you tell me, sir, where I can procure the—ugh—key to the museum and art gallery?

Senior (politely): Yes, sir. (Tells him.)

Stranger: Ugh—thank you, sir. (Exit.)

(Enter Book Agent.)

Book Agent: Good day, sir. I thought I would call in and see if any of you gentlemen would like an agency for—

Senior: Not today, sir. Try the next room. They're aching to get an agency in there.

Book Agent: Allow me to show you this "History of the Bible." I am selling a good many of them.

Senior (firmly): Guess not, today. Good day.

(Exit book agent, reluctantly.)

Third Fresh: Gosh! I hope the old Prof. when he was in here, didn't see me smoking. The whole Faculty'll know of it, and Prof. Q. knows my old man.

(Freshmen continue smoking. Room gets full of smoke. Freshmen knock the ashes of their cigarettes on the the table, on books, and on the floor. Single rap at the door. Enter Junior, who has just been blacking his stove.)

Junior: Can I wash my hands here?

Senior: O, yes, certainly. You'll find water in the large pitcher.

(Loud rap at the door.)

Senior: O, come in!

(A head is stuck in at the door.)

Head: Seen "Stumpy"? "Stumpy" been here?

Senior: Yes. He was here ten minutes ago. Think he said he was going into North College, somewhere.

Freshmen (chorus): He's in Billy's room.

(Head disappears, door is slammed violently.)

Junior: By the way, Billy got off a good thing in Old Snuffle's recitation, this morning. You see, he asked Old Snuffle what was the—

(Rap at the door.)

Senior: Come in. (Enter Second Senior.) Shut the door. Don't keep that door open all day.

Second Senior: How far does this lesson go, anyway? I wasn't in last time.

First Senior: To Chap. XXIX.

Second Senior: O, that's too beastly long! I'm not going to read all that. What time is it, anyway?

First Senior: Twenty-five minutes past.

Second Senior: Which end of the class does he begin at, today?

First Senior: Your end, I think. Your end, or in the middle. He's taken to skipping 'round lately.

Second Senior: Well, I'll learn the beginning of the lesson, and trust to luck. (Exit.)

Junior (finishing his story): Pretty good one for Billy, wasn't it? (Freshmen laugh uproariously. First Freshman, on the bed, begins to sing again.)

First Fresh: "In the old log-cabin in the dell. I'm going—going—."

Junior: Go, then, and dry up. Get thee hence; which, being interpreted, means keep chickens.

(Freshmen laugh admiringly. Gentle tap at door.)

Senior (a little irritated): O, thunder and guns, open the door and come in! What the—old Harry are you staying out there in the cold for?

(Gentle tap repeated. Senior gets up and opens the door impatiently. Discovers Mrs. Ginx, the washerwoman.)

Senior: A—I—That you, Mrs. Ginx? I'll have my clothes ready in two minutes.

(Enter Sophomore, with pipe in his mouth.)

Soph: Got a match, here? Confound it, why don't you keep matches in your room ever?

(Freshman offers match. Soph lights his pipe, throws match on the floor, where it burns a hole in the carpet.)

Soph: O, can I black [illegible]? Got 'em all mud, this [illegible].

Senior: Certainly. [illegible] closet.

(Soph brushes the mud [illegible] scattering it over the [illegible] knock at the door.)

Senior: Come in, by [illegible].

Second Soph: Can I take [illegible] I want to split some [illegible].

Senior: Yes. It's in the [illegible].

(Second Soph takes [illegible]. Heavy pounding and chopping [illegible] the hall outside.)

Senior: What time is it, [illegible]?

Freshman: Five minutes [illegible].

Senior: Potztausend! Sh[illegible] and let me study. I've got [illegible] more to read.

(Knock at the door.)

Senior: Stay out, confound [illegible].

(Enter Third Senior.)

Third Senior: I say, lend me this [illegible]ing's notes, will you? I didn't get whole of the lecture. And [illegible], have you got a copy of the [illegible]?

First Senior: Yes, take it if [illegible] it. Do you know the eight [illegible] of Division of Labor?

Third Senior: No. I haven't [illegible] the lesson.

First Senior: By Jove, I don[illegible] the first thing about it.

(Bell rings for 11 o'clock.)

Freshmen (together): Whoop[illegible] unt tumultously.)

Senior: I feel a presentiment I shall get that point about the [illegible] iron. Come along, all of you. Will stay here? Well, I'll leave the [illegible] unlocked. Break, smash, destroy can! Do your worst! (Exit.)

Cats Even Up by Beating St. Mikes After Losing to Aggies

Nutmeggers Win in Tenth on Errors Although Outhit—St. Michael's Outhits Vermont, But is Weak in Field and Box

WINANT GETS THREE-BAGGER IN EACH GAME

Once more the Catamounts broke even on their games over the week-end. Vermont took its defeat Friday afternoon when the Green and Gold was set back by the Connecticut Aggies 3 to 2. It was a tough game to lose as the Vermonters held a slim lead throughout most of the game, but two runs brought in by the Aggies in the sixth tied the score at two all, and the tie was unbroken until the tenth frame when the Nutmeg Staters sent across the winning run. The first nine innings of the game were distinguished by tight ball playing on both sides, with a minimum of errors.

Traynor played a beautiful game of baseball at second base. He accepted every chance that was anywhere near him and a few others besides. He was all over the infield and was easily the shining light of either team. Sargent, the lanky ex-first baseman was in the box for the Vermonters for the first eight innings and did some fine work, holding the Aggies to five scattered hits.

The Catamounts were the first to score, and sent Jay over the rubber in the third. McBride drove a beautiful single into center field but was forced out by Jay who advanced to second when Ryan let the ball go past him. Traynor hit a fast grounder to Darrow at short who fielded it perfectly and tosed him out at first, leaving Jay at the bat corner. Howard walked and Captain Macomber drove out a lusty single.

The Green and Gold scored again in the fourth inning when Winant smashed a liner into deep left field, which was good for three bases, and scored on Sargent's single.

The tying runs for the Aggies came in the sixth inning. Tombari walked, and a few seconds later Ryan poled out a bat single. Goebel bunted and Tombari came home when Winant could not reach McKay's throw to first. A squeeze bunt by Moore brought Ryan in with the tying tally.

In the extra inning the Connecticut boys came through with the winning run. Tombari knocked out a single, and was sacrificed to second by Ryan. He started for third when Macomber attempted to catch him at second, and Traynor's throw got away from McKay. Tombari coming home as the ball went on toward the third base bleachers.

Vermont's win was over the nine from St. Michael's by a 6-2 score. The Green and Gold outfit was outhit eight to four but they took advantage of the poorest type of baseball shown on Centennial Field so far this season to score a half dozen runs.

Connally, the hurler for the visitors was erratic and walked nine men. Two of the Catamounts runs were let in by wild pitches when there was a man on third. Vermont's infield turned in a beautiful game without a single error. Traynor had another field day with eight assists and three put outs.

The Green and Gold scored for the first time in the initial frame. Connally walked the first man up, Jay, who immediately stole second and went to third when Traynor went to first on Leddy's error. Winant walked, and Traynor and Jay both came in on wild pitches. Winant crossed the plate a few minutes later.

Vermont scored again in the third when Macomber walked, and was forced home when Connally walked three more men. The next score was in the fourth when Winant drove out a long triple and was sacrified in by Macomber. Vermont's other run came in the eighth. Jay went to first on Welch's error, went to second on another error by Welch, was sacrificed to third by Traynor and was sacrificed home by Winant.

St. Mike's scored once in the fifth inning when Lynch and O'Brien collected clean hits. Lynch was sacrificed to third by Leddy. Connally walked and Lynch was sacrified in by Shea. Their other score was in the ninth when O'Brien got to first, was advanced by hits by Leddy and Connally, and came home on Shea's long fly to center field.

M. A. A. A. CAPTURES TRACK MEET 75-56

Vermont Wins Five First Places, Ties for One—Green and Gold Makes Clean Sweep in Discus and Hammer, Montreal in 100-yard Dash

MACKAY OUTSTANDING MAN WITH 15 POINTS

Montreal A. A. A. subdued the Green and Gold track and field team 79 to 56 on Centennial Field Saturday afternoon. Both teams were rather unevenly balanced, the Canadians securing 61 of their total number of points in the running events, while the Cats piled up 45 in the field events.

Despite the overwhelming victory of the Red and Blue in the running events, the Green and Gold furnished some stiff opposition in this department and several very thrilling finishes took place. In the 880 Sadler of the Northerners put on the greatest finish of the day to nose out "Bob" Huey at the tape. Besides getting a second in the 880, Huey took a third in the 440 in another breath-taking finish. Montabone starred for the visitors in the hurdles, getting two firsts.

Vermont had the edge on the Canadians in the jumping events due to a first and second in the broadjump and ties in the high jump and pole vault. In the weight division, however, the Red and Blue aggregation was utterly outclassed. "Al" Mackay captured three firsts for Vermont in this department to become high scorer of the meet. He took firsts in the discus, hammer, and javelin. His performance in all three events was outstanding. He tossed the discus 115 feet, the javelin 145 feet, 5 inches, and the hammer 136 feet. Kropper came through as usual with a first in the shot, in addition to a second in the discus. "Charlie" Mace turned in some good work in the broad jump, hammer and shot put.

The showing of the team in the field events this year has been superb so far, and if the runners can produce the goods, Vermont stands a good chance of edging Middlebury and Norwich in the Conference meet this week.

The summary

100-yard dash—Won by McKechnie (M), second, Bourdeaux (M), third, Cameron (M). Time: 10 3/10 sec.

CAT'S MEOW

—SPORTING EDITOR—

Football practice and the game scheduled between the Green and Black teams have been cancelled on account of weather difficulties and the fact that final examinations are drawing near.

Traynor accepted seventeen errorless chances in the two games over the past week-end. His work is consistently brilliant. On the first play of the Conn. Aggie game he made the prettiest stop of either game on a hard-hit grounder.

Howard had things pretty soft in right field. The only time the ball came near him was in the Aggie game when "Pie" Traynor went to right field to catch a fly and rob him of a chance. Wis" was dropped from third to seventh place in the batting order and the change seemed to help because he got a hit in his two times at bat.

Winant seems to be a different player since he came to first from left field. His season batting average is .363, but while at first he has hit five times in ten times at bat for an average of .500. Four of the five hits were triples. Winant has six triples to his credit in thirteen games. Some slugging! Moving him up from seventh to third place in the batting order also helped.

Rutkowski looks better in every game he pitches. He had more control Saturday than he has shown all year.

Boston College called off the tennis match scheduled with the varsity for last Saturday afternoon on account of the ineligibility of three of the four men on the team.

Rain spoiled the Cathedral High Frosh tennis match Thursday.

More and more Mackay looms up as the man to be watched and feared in the weight events in the Green Mountain Conference Meet here Saturday. His three first in the Montreal meet were all that kept Vermont going.

Holy Cross has won its twelfth baseball game in thirteen starts. Nichols, the star twirler, is credited with seven victories.

Amherst is the only undefeated college ball team in the East now that Tufts and Harvard have spoiled the Lafayette record. The Lord Jeffs have played fewer games to date than most of the other eastern teams but proved their class by beating both Harvard and Princeton.

FROSH LOSE TO B. H. S. PLAY AGAIN TOMORROW RUTLAND HERE TODAY

Freshman tennis team was defeated by Burlington High School last Wednesday on the college courts by the close score of 3-2. The match was undecided until the very end and was featured by the comeback of the B. H. S. number 2 doubles. After the yearlings had lost the first doubles they took the lead at the start of the second match and it looked as though they had the contest sewed up but the school boys made a smashing comeback to win the match. Tupper, freshman ace, continued to win by defeating Captain Twitchell of the high school team 8-6, 6-4. Holbrook also won his match but Torry playing number 2 lost his. The high school won both of the doubles matches. The summary:

Singles—Tupper (V) beat Twitchell (B) 8-6, 6-4. Myers (B) beat Torry (V) 6-2, 6-4. Holbrook (V) beat Perry (B) 4-6, 6-1, 8-6. Doubles—Myers and Twitchell (B) beat Tupper and Torry (V) 6-4, 6-2. Perry and Fay (B) beat Holbrook and Albert (V) 1-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Tomorrow afternoon the frosh will tackle the Blue and White again on the high school courts.

This afternoon at five o'clock on the back campus courts the match between the yearlings and Rutland High School began last week and stopped on account of rain will be replayed. When the match was halted the teams were tied at one all. However the Freshman team was leading in the other matches which had been started and were apparently headed for victory when rain intervened. Tupper, of the Frosh had defeated Seeley, Rutland's best and the way he is going now there seems to be no indication that he can't do it again. Holbrook was getting the best of his match although Albert was defeated by Mathews. Torry was a little behind in his set. The Rutland team has defeated Burlington High which nosed out the yearlings 1-2.

Reorganized Curriculum

Almost immediately upon entering upon the duties of the office he laid before the faculty of the institution his views upon the whole subject of collegiate education. These were broad and liberal, and, in several respects in advance of the times. In some points, they anticipated present methods. Mr Marsh thought that in the training of the mind account should be taken not only of its essential nature, but of its individual differences. He approved of a certain fixed course of study for the majority of students, but considered that even the best curriculum would not be suited to every capacity, nor afford the requisite means of development of special gifts. He therefore favored what came to be known as "partial courses" for those who, for want of capacity or previous training, were unable to take the full collegiate course, and on the other hand, would encourage those students whose mental gifts and inclinations took that direction, to pursue additional studies of their own choice under the guidance of their instructors. Such freedom was quite unusual, if not altogether unknown, in the colleges of that day. Though not identical with the present elective system, these measures look in that direction. Mr. Marsh also thought that instruction was too mechanical, too much a matter of routine; that too great importance was attached to text books. He would have not the book, but the subject, taught. He would break up the monotony of recitations with frequent discussions. He would encourage freedom, and require the student to develop his native powers of thought by constantly exercising them.

Profound Kantian Scholar

It would perhaps be out of place in this sketch to say much concerning the philosophical views of President Marsh. They are too profound; they require previous philosophical training and some acquaintance with the problems and language of philosophical discussion, to be readily understood. Yet they are not obscure, and anyone who has the capacity and the disposition to reflect deeply upon the mysteries of existence may easily satisfy himself of their substantial truth. President Marsh has often passed for a disciple of Coleridge. He himself expresses his obligations to the insight of that marvelous mind. But it is clear that his obligations were very much greater to the masters of antiquity, to Plato and Aristotle, and to the great modern Immanuel Kant. While yet a student in the Seminary his biographer tells us, on the authority of his journal, that he began (in 1821) "with the aid of Coleridge and Madame de Stael to consult Kant's Critique of the Pure Reason, then a perfect terra incognita to American scholars." There can hardly be a doubt that James Marsh was the first thorough Kantean student in this country. At the same time—he was then 27 years of age—he undertook to read the works of Plato, and to make a copious analysis of each dialogue. Throughout life, we are told, "Plato was his favorite author, whom he always kept near him."

It is quite impossible within the limits of a brief sketch to give any adequate conception of Dr. Marsh's philosophical system, or even to mention the various products of his pen. Had he lived longer he might have matured a system which would have profoundly influenced philosophical thought in this country, so we judge from the fragments which he left behind. But he was cut off in his prime; he died, in 1842, at the comparatively early age of 48 years. His life, his thoughts, his character, his influence, are a precious legacy to the institution over which he presided and in which he taught. A hundred years ago, today, and a hundred years to come, his ideas and words will still be "productive ideas" and "living words"—like those

THREE GAMES THIS WEEK FOR VERMONT

Cats at Dartmouth Today—Norwich Here Thursday—Mass. Aggies at Centennial Saturday

KENDRICK AND WOOD PITCH FIRST TWO GAMES

Three games this week are on the schedule for the baseball team—one away and two on the home grounds. This afternoon the Catamounts play Dartmouth at Hanover, next Thursday Norwich comes here, and Saturday the Massachusetts Aggies will appear at Centennial Field. Vermont's pitchers have some hard assignments before them and the team will have to show some good ball playing in order to come out victoriously.

The game this afternoon with Dartmouth will undoubtedly be the hardest one this week. The Big Green has been having a successful season, being credited with wins over Columbia, Pennsylvania, Yale, Princeton and Cornell. Princeton was defeated 5 to 1 but in a later game Dartmouth lost 9 to 7. Temple also triumphed over the Hanoverites 7 to 2. "Gus" Hollstrom is Dartmouth's brilliant hurling ace and if he is on the mound this afternoon Vermont's hits will be scarce indeed. He started the game in which Norwich was beaten 19 to 3. Rolfe, shortstop, is leading the team in batting with an average around the .400 mark. The team as a whole is as strong, if not stronger than the one last year. It will be remembered that last season the Catamounts trounced Dartmouth at Hanover by the score of 7 to 0, but they will be doing remarkably well if they equal that today. This afternoon's game is the Cats' last out-of-town contest on the schedule and then the Green and Gold will finish the season with home games.

After returning from the Dartmouth contest, the Catamounts will tackle the Norwich nine Thursday afternoon on Centennial Field. Vermont has already chalked up a 7 to 2 victory over the Cadets and things look rosy for a repetition of the performance. Norwich, nevertheless, has a strong team and should not be regarded lightly. Middlebury, which shut out Vermont 7 to 0, was defeated by the Horsemen 18 to 10 and this fact made the Green and Gold win over Norwich a surprise. Kane and Coane are two batters which are dangerous for any pitcher who opposes them. Waining is the Cadets' star twirler and it is probable that he will again face Vermont. In the last game he struck out 15 Catamounts but lost the game when he blew up in the eighth.

Coach Gardner has been doing considerable shifting in his line-up to make it as effective as possible. Kendrick may be called upon to twirl this afternoon against Dartmouth. He has had some difficult assignments this season and has shown up well, considering this is his first year on the varsity. In the Norwich contest it is not unlikely that Wood will be on the mound for Vermont. Another win over Norwich will go a long way toward helping Vermont's chances of winning the Green Mountain title. Middlebury is hard after the state championship and expects to win it.

The probable line-ups:

Vermont—Jay s.s., Traynor, 2b., Winant 1b., Macomber c., Morse c.f., McKay 3b., Howard r.f., McBride l.f., Kendricks and Wood p.

Dartmouth—Harvey 3b., Parker c.f., Rolfe s.s., Walsh 2b., Downey l.f., Booma r.f., Stokes 1b., McDonaugh c., Hollstrom p.

Norwich—Kane s.s., Cannon 2b., Coane l.f., Hourin c., Tansey c.f., Aimi 1b., Whiteside 3b., O'Donnell r.f., Waining p.

ANNUAL JUNIOR PROM A SUCCESS SOCIALLY

Charles Mace, Chairman, Landed for General Efficiency in Managing Biggest Social Event of the Year

ALL COMMITTEES SHOW GREAT COOPERATION

Tasilo's Orchestra and Dutch Decorations Provide Feature Amusements for Colorful Promenade

Playing for more than two hundred couples, Lieutenant William B. Tasilo and his Governor's Fort guard orchestra helped to make the Junior Promenade the biggest social event of the year that it was. Entering the Memorial Auditorium by a gangplank, the dancers found themselves in an attractively decorated hall. On the stage, seated in a gaily-painted boat with a sail, the orchestra played music which satisfied all. On either side of them were two large windmills with their sails, brilliantly lighted by electricity, slowly turning. Truly, as was predicted by the decorations chairman, Miss Estabel Perelman, the Dutch atmosphere was unique. Praise should also go to Carl Ramn for securing such a worthwhile orchestra. Not only were the dancers satisfied but they were all enthusiastic about securing them for next year. Let us hope that the Juniors next year will do as well in the line of music.

Tables lined each side of the hall under the balcony where the promenaders could sit and partake of the light refreshments between the dances.

In the receiving lines were Professor and Mrs. Elijah Swift, Colonel and Mrs. Frederick F. Black, Professor and Mrs. Leon W. Dean, Professor Douglas Meredith and Miss Laura Parker, Charles Mace, Miss Katherine Stillman, Warren Barr and Miss Marion Edwards.

Mr. More who was chairman of the dance deserves praise for his efficient management by which everything went off in tip-top manner. No little work is it to assume responsibility for the biggest social event of the season and to see that the different chairmen do their respective work. Nevertheless each chairman was an important cog in the Junior Prom wheel. Without the cooperation of everyone of them, the Prom would not have been the success it was.

The Measure of Success

The practice of pointing out men who have accumulated a great deal of money as shining examples of success in life is as old as it is nauseating.... In a world where money represents power it is no wonder that material accumulation is regarded with awe and veneration. But it should not be confounded with success. There is no one standard achievement that can be regarded as "Success." There are as many different standards of success as there are human ideals. As an application of the principle of Pythagoras, we can say "Man is the measure of success." Each one has some ideal in life, the attainment of which is the aim and object of his endeavors and is the standard of success for that individual. To some this is represented by publicity, and they will strive for this end by all the means in their power, even if it requires sitting on a flagpole and imitating a monkey. To others it may be represented by athletic supremacy, or by historic achievement, or simply by an ability to evade work.

It is obvious that money is a false standard of success; it is a means and not an end in life, yet, in the mad race we too often mistake it for the goal of our ambitions.—McGill Daily.

sistance by Miss Householder and the rest of the cast.

The direction and presentation were smooth with no gaga creakiness. This lifted the production from the ranks of not-so-hot amateur stuff and made of it real entertainment. In doing this Professor Metcalf was assisted by a cast for the most part well chosen and directed.

The honors of the evening—oh banal phrase, because the honors of every dramatic evening in which she takes part go, as these went, to Dorothy Cottrell who brought to the part of the housekeeper a spontaneity, delightful freshness and a marvelous understanding of the dramatic devices by which an actress secures the sympathy and interest of her audience.

Thor Krogh played the hero, a rather disarming rake, much misunderstood by females, and he played the part well. He showed a tendency to go into more or less involved histrionics if given an opportunity but the play, in its lightness, offered no such opportunity.

Beverly Householder had a difficult task presented to her. She had to be clever and brightly amusing as well as beautiful. She succeeded without any effort in being beautiful, but throughout the course of the play she delivered her lines with a calm serenity which went not well with the light gaiety which she was supposed to have. Miss Householder seemed afraid to let her emotions loose as if fearing that something might happen to all the lovely furniture with which she transformed the house in the third act. As a result many of the cleverest lines in this clever play failed to click. However Miss Householder was adequately clever and more than adequately beautiful.

Harvey Butterfield, Phoebe Flint and Bob Akin were great. They fitted their parts admirably, and while the play made no great demands on them they nevertheless fulfilled those demands with an artistry which showed that if it had been necessary they could have done greater things. Mr. Butterfield and Miss Flint in particular, deserve all the praise which can be given them. As simple comedy relief, Miss Flint secured the first real laugh of the evening and, having thus established a precedent which she maintained throughout the three acts, she was consistently amusing throughout the evening. Mr. Butterfield brought the proper air of tired sophistication which has failed to his part of the gentleman crossed in love. Bob Akin played the part of the typical English butler so well that I almost liked the character, and I have, be it known a violent hatred for all typical English butlers with their cleverness and tendency to drop into epigram when no one is looking but everybody is listening.

The three land girls who were later transformed with musical comedy suddenness into three girls of society's upper crust and the ones whom our hero had jilted at that, were admirably presented by Hope Ranslow, Katherine Rauh and Elizabeth Corey.

Fred Householder said his lines as if he were Hamlet-in-Modern Dress but he didn't fool us, the little rascal.

Phil Perry gave such a preety-preety performance that I expected somebody to slap him any minute. Nobody did and he just bounded around as gaily as a lark that hadn't been pro brought up.

Class of 1931 to Name Officers for Junior Year from List Prepared by Class Nominating Committee

NOMINATE BRUSH AND MAYNES FOR PRESIDENT

Three-Cornered Contests for Vice-President and Secretary—Clark and Craig up for Treasurer

Elections for the class of 1931 to fill the offices for next year's junior class, as well as the class representatives in Student Senate and in the Faculty-Student Council, have been called for Monday afternoon. On that day, in the Old Mill Chapel at four, the class will meet to transact this final business of the year.

Officers nominated by the class nominating committee are:

President: George R. Brush, of Arlington; Roderick J. Maynes, of Woodstock.

Vice-president: Helen F. Taylor, of Montclair, N. J.; Margaret G. Stanley, of Waterbury; Dorothy D. Nash, of Concord, N. H.

Secretary: Emily Murray, of West Hartford, Conn.; Janice E. Davis, of Wallingford; Winona R. Spencer, of Barre.

Treasurer: J. E. Clark, of Richford; W. E. Craig, of Chicopee, Mass.

No Student Senate Nominations

All of the nominees are prominent in class activities and also on the campus generally. The nominating committee, in accordance with usual procedure, made no nominations for either Student Senate or Faculty-Student Council. Election to these offices will be made without nominations as the result of individual balloting.

U. V. M. DEBATERS TALK ON ADVERTISING TRENDS AT ROTARY LUNCHEON

A novel entertainment feature was provided for Rotarians at their weekly luncheon meeting Monday at the Hotel Van Ness when President Guy W. Bailey presented two University debaters who argued on the question, "Resolved, thnt the Modern Trend of Advertising is Deplorable." Each of the debaters brought out a number of interesting points, pro and con, and displayed a ready wit which was highly amusing as well as instructive.

Upholding the affirmative side of the question, George R. Nelson gave several concrete examples of popular advertising slogans and phrases and then attempted to point out how much they exaggerate the qualities of the various products which they advertise. He cited certain nationally known athletes and personages and showed how they have allowed their names to be used in connection with products. Such policies are "deplorable," the speaker said. He said that the country's advertising bill is $1,200,000,000 a year and intimated that the people of the country would be better off if they did not have to pay this huge sum.

Patent Medicines

A medical journal was quoted in an effort to show that many highly advertised medicines and tonics are worth very little but are merely sold as the result of expensive advertising campaigns. Advertising, he said, appeals to the emotions. It amounts to the injunction, "Get the order" at any cost; increase sales to make large profits. The whole scheme of advertising was characterized as "a gross economic waste," in which the buyer is confused and misled into doing something which he otherwise would not do.

Speaking on the other side of the question, Louis Lisman quoted figures to show that advertising is legitimate and that it pays from a business

REVEREND R. H. BALL AT LAST CHAPEL SERVICES

Rev. R. H. Ball of Fair Haven, Vt., who has been at that parish since he was ordained forty years ago, a record unequalled in the state, conducted the chapel service Wednesday morning.

He took as his subject—"Faith." He stressed the fact, that faith without the addition of work and energy is of no avail. No amount of faith can meet the requisites, unless back of it is a great deal of common sense. "Train the child up in the way he must go and he will not depart from it." Do not simply give him to God and then hope, but give him and train him.

Faith without work is like a bell all alone—or a singer all alone. A chorus of unity can't be made until many voices are blended with a leader.

A man who has a high moral sense but lacks the variety of graces, which give charm and glory to Christian character, is like a man squinting through smoke. One must have a clear sense of love and brotherhood as well as justice. Keats says, "Heard melodies are sweet, but unheard music sweeter," for it appeals to the soul and that is the music of human life, perfectly attuned to infinite peace. The abundant life depends upon our addition to the thought of faith.

KAPPA PHI KAPPA HOLDS ELECTION OF OFFICERS

Education Honorary Fraternity Chooses Robbins, Mace, Stewart, Hooker, and Martinetti to Reign for Next College Year

The Alpha Gamma Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, education honorary fraternity, held an election of officers last Tuesday evening in the education office of the University. The following were duly elected to serve during the ensuing year: President, Philip S. Robbins, '30; vice-president Charles H. Mace, Jr., '30; recording secretary, Robert Lee Stewart, '30; corresponding secretary, Keith G. Hooker, '30; and treasurer, Odino A Martinetti, '30. The retiring president is A. A. Luciani, '29

On Tuesday, May 28, Kappa Phi Kappa is holding a banquet at its regular meeting place in the education office. Professor W. J. Wilkinson, head of the history department of the college of arts and sciences, will be the chief speaker. Professor Wilkinson is held in great esteem by all those who have been so fortunate as either to have classes under him or to have made his personal acquaintance, and there are many regrets that he is leaving Vermont next year to return to Colby, where he previously taught

During the past year, Kappa Phi Kappa has held meetings quite regularly and the members all feel that it has been a worthwhile year for the fraternity. The business meetings have predominated, but there have been some social ones and among the speakers that were present at the latter are: Professor L. D. Meredith of the economics department, Mr. Dean, that well-known and popular banquet attender and dance chaperone, and Professor G. V. Kidder, who attended Oxford on a Rhodes Scholarship three years ago.

One of the outstanding achievements of the past year was the sending of Ernest B. Walston, '29, as delegate to the Fifth General Assembly of Kappa Phi Kappa held at Springfield, Ohio, during the early part of March.

The new members initiated during the past collegiate year are as follows: Nelson C. Wood, '29; Charles H. Mace, Jr., '30; Robert Lee Stewart, '30; Philip S. Robbins, '30; Edwin W. Davis, '29; Keith G. Hooker, '30; Loren F. Palmer, '29; and Odino A. Martinetti, '30.

Kappa Phi Kappa is planning to be more active than ever next year and is looking forward to an increase both in the activities of the fraternity and in its membership.

VERMONT DEBATERS PROVE SUCCESSFUL

Lisman, Nelson and Sears Carry U. V. M. Through to a Tie for the State Championship—Nelson Appears in Every Contest

WOMEN WIN TWO AND LOSE THREE CONTESTS

Freemann, Goodrich, Howley, Kone and Powers Annex Seven out of Eight Votes in Five Debates—Men's Contest With Texas Cowboys Features Season

This year both the women's and men's debating teams had an unusually strong group of opponents. In consideration of this fact and the additional fact that there were on the men's debating team but threo men left from last year, one of them with two years' experience and two of them with but one year apiece, they did an admirable piece of work during the year.

Early in November Coach Merrill D. Powers sent a team, composed of Louis Lisman, George Nelson and Franklin Sears to Bates College where they debated on the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved: that this house deplores the modern trend in advertising." The Oregon system was used and there was no decision. However all things seemed to point to the fact that in a judged contest Vermont would have been a most likely candidate for the victory.

In March Vermont lost to Middlebury College at Middlebury. However our men, Lisman and Sears, received two of the three Edwin Winship Law rence prizes offered to the three best debaters of the evening.

Also during March, Vermont defeated Norwich at Burlington by a 2-1 decision. In this debate P. G Andrews spoke in place of Lisman.

The next and most noteworthy debate of the season occurred when Howard Payne College of Texas sent two of its men to debate with Nelson and Lisman. In this debate Vermont took the affirmative of the proposition, "Resolved: that the American Jury system should be abolished." In its debate with Middlebury, Vermont upheld the negative of this same question. The Texas cowpunchers received an unanimous verdict over the Vermont farmers.

Trip to Massachusetts and New York

On the proposition, "Resolved: that modern advertising is more harmful than beneficial," M. A. C. received the decision of 2-1 over Sears, Nelson, and Lisman.

On the New York trip which followed shortly thereafter Vermont lost to St. John's Law School, and to the College of the City of New York. However it defeated N. Y. U. by a decision which both teams had decided would be regarded as unofficial.

George R. Nelson, '31, has appeared in every debating match for Vermont this year, while Louis Lisman, '31, and Franklin A. Sears, '30, have taken part in all but one. Lisman did not speak against Norwich, while Sears did not participate in the Howard Payne meet.

Again Debate Jury System

Again debating the jury system, Vermont's debaters easily downed St Michael's with a 2-1 decision. This debate, by a series of peculiar incidents, has brought about a tie on the state championship, between Vermont and St. Michael's. A play-off while not inevitable, is expected, and considering the ability with which the first debate was won, the next can present little difficulty, having Vermont the probable state champions.

To sum up, Vermont has garnered ten votes out of a possible twenty-four, winning three debates, losing five

Macomber were chosen to run for the office of president. Dorothy Dailey Beverly Householder, and Joyce Richardson were nominated for vice president. Ann McLaughlin, Phoebe Flint and Marjorie Huntley are candidates for secretary, while Robert P. Billings and Odino A. Martinetti are candidates for treasurer. Nominations were also made for class representatives to the Faculty-Student Council. Of the men Paul Kinney and H. Henry Powell of the Arts and Sciences College, Philip Perry and Don Vignone of Engineering, and John Elliot of the Agricultural College were nominated. Ruth Doherty, Nan Owsley, Narcissa Goodsell Dorothy Dailey and Mabel Freemann were chosen from the women. Three men and three women will be elected

MORTAR BOARD HOLDS FORMAL INITIATION

Initiation Ceremony at Redstone Followed by Banquet at Hotel Vermont—Dormitory Prize Announced—Read Letter from President Bailey

Akaia Chapter of Mortar Board announces the formal initiation of those recently elected to membership. The initiation ceremony was held Tuesday evening at six o'clock at Redstone The initiates were: Dorothy Dailey of Plattsburg, N. Y.; Mabel Freemann of Morristown, Pa.; Narcissa Goodsell of Alburgh; Beverly Householder of Burlington; Florence McKenzie of Hinesburg; and Joyce Richardson of Springvale, Me. The outgoing members of Akaia Chapter are Marion Backus, Marion Baldwin, Catherine Bassett, Charlotte Cleveland, Margaret Durick, and Lucy Morgan

The alumnae present at the initiation were: Dean Marion Patterson, Miss Katrina Storms, Miss Eleanor Cummings, Miss Alice Blanchard, Miss Laura Parker, Mrs. Paul French, Miss Marion Way, Miss Anna Smith, and Miss Katherine McSweeney.

Miss Laura Parker presided as toastmistress at the banquet which was held in a private dining room at the Hotel Vermont, immediately following the formal initiation

A letter from President Bailey was made public at this time, in which he state that an anonymous person has offered a gift of twenty dollars, to be given each year to the dormitory which Mortar Board considers to have developed the best living conditions in all ways. The dormitory winning this prize is to use it for some improvement, such as a piece of furniture. If Mortar Board so desires it is free to allow the money to accumulate instead of awarding it annually. Akaia Chapter of Mortar Board decided to accept the conditions and the responsibility of the gift

MUSIC STUDENTS WILL PRESENT PROGRAM IN IRA ALLEN CHAPEL SUN.

Few people have any conception of the work that is done at this university along musical lines. Everyone knows of the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs, which give concerts at various times throughout the college year Both of these organizations are directed by Professor Bennett, head of the music department.

But there are other parts of the department which do not receive as much publicity and so are not so well known Instruction is given, both vocal and instrumental, by the various instructors within the department

In order that the public may have a chance to see what is accomplished along musical lines, two student recitals are to be given—one Sunday afternoon and the other Wednesday evening

SUCCESS

The time is drawing near when Vermont University will graduate another class of ambitious young men and women into the world. Each member of that class will have his or her ideas and ideals. Each one undoubtedly would aspire to some form of success

Now that we have broached the subject of success, just what does it mean? Suppose a student were suddenly asked to define "success." The student at first thought might think the question simple to the point of absurdity. But upon bringing the deeper channels of the mind to bear upon the question, he realizes that "success" is something quite intangible, something that cannot be clasped in the hand except in a figurative sense. However, plunging still deeper into the subject, he soliloquizes that what may be brilliant "success" in the eyes of one man is grossest failure in the eyes of another. One may consider it brilliant success to have attained a goal through honest and persevering endeavor while another may consider it grossest failure to turn that brilliant success into a lazy, self-satisfied, and non-creative existence, which in turn is injurious to the progress of mankind. In the words, just what constitutes success is a matter of opinion. So, the definition that "success" is the attainment by honest endeavor through the aid of ability, personality, and perseverance of some goal, either material or otherwise may satisfy some, but by no means all

But, it should be generally admitted if a consensus of opinion were to be taken that ability, personality, and perseverance are factors necessary for success either material or spiritual. One cannot certainly do without ability if he is going to accomplish anything at all through his own efforts. The subject of personality as one of the factors for success may be contested, but it goes undisputed that personality is a great aid in "putting ideas across." A pleasing personality makes one likeable and popular; it impresses people no matter where the individual goes. As to the last of the three above named factors, perseverance, it might be said that one's path through life is usually so rough that it is the will which says "keep on," that finally leads one to his goal. In any case, it is the individual himself who brings this intangible, undefinable thing called "success" to his door

The CYNIC regrets to announce that the individual cuts of the Junior Class did not arrive from the printers, who used them in the 1930 Ariel, in time to feature prominent members of the class active in the Junior Week festivities. An entire page was left open hoping that they might arrive at the last minute. Consequently a good deal of feature material and left-over was needed to fill the space caused by the failure of the cuts to arrive. Two articles that were not printed in the historic pink Skynic were used at the moment in last Friday's issue to enable the appearance of it on time

Special exception has been taken by some members of the faculty to the one of the two above-mentionel articles which concerned the opera "Patience" presented about the time of the pink Skynic. Through a printer's error this article was not credited to that issue as was the other.

We hope that the offended faculty members will take the above factors into consideration in their condemnation of the article.

"Philanthropic purposes have never been the reason for undertaking extensive war."—EWART

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN SAID:

It would be thought a hard government that should tax its people one tenth of their time, to be employed in its service; but idleness taxes many of us much more; sloth, by bringing on diseases, absolutely shortens life. Sloth, like rust consumes faster than labor wears, while the used key is always bright

Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of.

ACH! DU LIEBER AUGUSTINE!

All during the evening he had been as a crown about her head. Admiring glances of the men caused her heart many a flutter. Envious glances of her sex elated her. Unusual poise seemed to be hers that night. Every now and then she gave him an assuring pat. Attempt at nonchalance was admirably carried out

Then, at intermission, she went for an auto ride. He went with her. When she returned, the way everyone stared at her, laughed, giggled, and whispered, especially the girls, in whose eyes flashed the code words "Oh, dearie, I'm so glad!" caused her almost to choke with apprehension. She raised her hand to him reassuringly. Instinctively, she knew he was gone. She rushed from the ball room floor to the ladies' room. Pale, trembling and drawn, she pressed her palms to her throbbing temples. She confronted herself in the mirror. A glance and—"Ye Gods!" she shrieked. "You came into my life but this afternoon, and immediately became an integral part of me. I grew to adore you from the start. And you did work a marvelous change in me, giving me a greater confidence in myself and a greater buoyancy than I've ever experienced before. And you had a way of drawing people to me who barely noticed me before. 'Twas you, who all evening kept me enthralled in the eyes of all who saw me. And then—and then, in a few moments—all—all—vanishes! You were mine, mine I say!" (Beating her bosom with clenched fists.) "Yes, bought and paid for by me. All mine!" (Hysterical laughter and sobs.) "I took you on the promise that you would stay with me, be permanent. And you fail me when put to the first real test! And you leave me the laughing stock of the night!" (Starts tearing her hair hysterically.) "This is unbearable! Marcel! Oh! how could you, Marcel! Oh! oh! oh!"(Stifling sobs.)

EDITOR'S NOTE: Last reports stated she is slowly recuperating in a private sanitarium, name of which was not divulged due to desire to avoid unnecessary publicity and disturbance to patient; and that she would be able to resume her studies in the fall.

"Winnowings From The Mill," a Paper Of Ye Very Olden Tim

There are two pages of advertising which, like the reading matter, are a mirror of the times. Some of our old friends like B. Turk & Bro.; Downs' Elixir, already 44 years on the market; T. S. Peck Insurance Agency, Barre Academy, Albany Law School, and the Burlington Free Press, are to be found in the list of those who were willing to pay one dollar an inch or six dollars and a half per column for the privilege of furthering "their own interests and those of the paper," but the majority of those who catered to the hat and glove and shoe whim of the students passing up and down College Street 50 years ago are strangers to the students of today, even Phillips's New Hat Establishment, which warned: "Why Wear That 'Old Hat,' purchased at some antiquated concern, probably made a quarter of a century ago; or it may have come out of Noah's Ark!" So too are the members of the faculty strangers except for those great names that will ever live in the history of the institution, somehow echoing down the years from generation to generation of students. Dean George Henry Perkins is the only one with us today.

Tuition $45 Per Annum

STUDENT JOURNALISTS EDIT THE DAILY NEWS

Student journalists of the University of Vermont under the tutelage of Prof. Walter H. Crockett wrote and edited the news and editorials of the Daily News of last Monday's edition. That they succeeded beyond measure in producing a capital paper in true "Orthodox Newspaper Style" is not to be denied when one reads it.

Those who became newspaper men and women for a day and who, according to the editor of the Daily News "smelled printers' ink for the first time" were E. M. Codding, Margaret Durick, Grace Frisbie, Constans Holden, J. Moriarty, Katherine Mudgett, Glenn Skiff, Winona Spencer, Dorothy Strong, June Westwood, Eunice Wilder, and Harriet Woodruff.

Although none of them have had newspaper experience on the staff of a daily newspaper, several of them have been prominent in literary work in student publications. Among them are Miss Margaret Durick, who was women's editor of the CYNIC for two years, and Miss Constans Holden, who was editor of the Vermont Literary Magazine.

From the material published and acknowledged under their respective names in the Daily News one finds a collection of news that presupposes a sound knowledge of the fundamentals of newspaper reporting and editing. That much of it results from Prof. Crockett's teaching is undeniable. Yet, that previous work on student publications was a powerful aid is also undeniable when we consider that many persons, who today are taking an active part in literary work of various publications, have acknowledged the beneficial training gained while having been on the staff of student publications in their undergraduate years at the University of Vermont.

CAT, CADET, PANTHER TRACK MEN MEET

Records in Field Events May Be Broken in Green Mountain Conference Tilt—Middlebury Should Take Most Firsts

MACKAY ONLY SURE FIRST PLACE WINNER FOR CATS

Vermont Weak on Track, Strong in Weight Events—Must Rely on Seconds and Thirds to Win

Tomorrow afternoon at 1.30 o'clock the Vermont track and field team is scheduled to take part in the annual Green Mountain Conference meet. This meet promises to show some of the best athletes that the Catamounts have had to compete with this season, of course with the exception of the Montreal A. A. A., who, as usual, had a fine bunch of stars.

The Green and Gold seems to have a much better chance in this year's contest than they have had in quite a while. The Green and Gold are especially strong in the weights, and should cap off two or three firsts. Mackay should be able to toss the hammer for first and will pick up seconds and thirds in other weight events together with Kropper and Mace.

Schmidt of Middlebury looks like the winner in the javelin with his teammate, Guarnaccia, is a good first in the shot and discus.

Vermont is weak in the dashes although Berry, Huey, Woodward, and Bjorn should come through with a few points in the shorter distances. Wilder is the best Vermont bet in th mile and two-mile. Smith of Middlebury is a sure first in the 100 and 220 dashes. Andrews of Norwich is good in the 880. Goltry will place first or second in the 440 for the Panthers.

Yarrington of Norwich is the best hurdle in the lot. Bagler of Midd has a good chance of breaking the state record in the high jump. He has done over 5 ft. 10 in. this year. Paul of Middlebury can do 11ft. in the pole vault. The broad jump is a toss-up with some five or six good men entered.

Following is a list of the state track record: 100-yard dash, 10.2, Smith M, 1926; 220-yard dash, 22.1, Smith M, 1926; 440-yard dash, 52.1, Cook M, 1923; high hurdles, 16.2, Shaw V, 1925; low hurdles, 26.1, Robbins V, 1926; 880-yard run, 2:1⅛, Shepard V, 1921; mile run, 4:37.5, Post V, 1925; two-mile run, 10:15.5, Wood V, 1925; running high jump, 5 ft. 9 in., Wilcox V, 1926; running broad jump, 20 ft. 5½ in., Prentice V, 1926; shot put, 41 ft. 2¾ in., Flanders N, 1922; discus, 128 ft. 6 in., Flanders N, 1922; hammer throw, 149 ft. 6 in., Hill V, 1926; pole vault, 11 ft. 6 in., Whitten V, 1925; javelin, 166 ft. 6 in., Simpson V, 1926.

TENNIS TEAM BEATS ST. MIKE'S FOR SECOND TIME

Cats Repeat Victory over Michaelmen, 5 to 1, Same Score as Contest at Winooski Park

Winning three singles matches and two doubles, the Vermont tennis team humbled St. Michael's 5 to 1 on the University courts Monday afternoon. Borkland and Shedd of the Cats turned back Daley and Caron of St. Mike's 9-7, 6-1 in the feature doubles match of the afternoon. Caron was the lone winner for St. Michael's in an extended three set match.

Singles: Shedd (V) defeated Daley (St. M.) 6-1, 6-2; Goddard (V) defeated Camp (St. M.) 6-1, 6-2; Caron (St. M.) defeated Pouch (V.) 6-1, 5-7, 9-7; Macomber (V.) defeated Brown (St. M.) 6-2, 6-1.

Doubles: Borkland and Shedd (V.) defeated Daley and Caron (St. M.) 9-7, 6-1; Pouch and Macomber (V) defeated Brown and Camp (St. M.) 6-2, 6-6.

Worcester Tech netmen will be the guests of the University when they play the Green and Gold at the University courts on May 25. Corsin will be the lead-off man for the Technicians and will have as teammates Alber, Cotton, and Collins. Tech has one of her best teams in years and the invaders are looking forward to giving the Green and Gold a strenuous battle.

CAT'S MEOW

SPORTING EDITOR—

Interfraternity baseball final today'

The feature event on tomorrow's Vermont state athletic calendar is the big triangular track meet of the Green Mountain Conference.

Middlebury, although undecided until recently as to whether or not some of her star men would go to the Eastern Intercollegiates tomorrow, finally determined to send all the luminaries to Burlington. Without Smith, the dash man, Bagler, the high jumper, and Guarnaccia, the weight man, the Panthers would have little or no chance of copping the state title again. As it is they are decided favorites.

The medals to be given to the winners are gold, silver, and bronze for first, second, and third places respectively. They are round and hang from a green ribbon. On either side of the face are the standard designs for Green Mountain Conference medals. Down the center is the inscription "Green Mountain Conference Track and Field Championship 1929." On the back is the name of the event in which the piece was won.

Our nine turned in a great performance at Dartmouth. The Green has a strong team and a wonderful record this year.

"Larry" Gardner returned from his trip to Boston in time to accompany the squad to Hanover. He didn't like the switch made by "Doc" Newton who handled the team against Conn. Aggies and St. Michael's, so he put Winant back in seventh place and Howard in third position in the batting order. Winant showed that it makes no difference where he is by lifting another triple, and Howard displayed his gratitude by hitting twice.

"Fish" Ellis of Tufts, one of best all-around athletes who ever competed for the Medford school, has been elected backfield football coach for next year at his Alma Mater.

Dartmouth athletic council accepted as a new college record for the 440-yard dash, the time of 49⅕ seconds, made by Capt. "Gerry" Swope in the Dartmouth-Syracuse meet on May 4. The former record of 49⅗ seconds, was also held by Swope.

Howard Grosskloss, Amherst shortstop, can sign a big league contract any time he wants, but it is doubtful if he ever will play professional ball. So far he has told the scouts that he has "other objectives." Primary one is to finish his college career. He is a sophomore and a brilliant student, beside being a varsity football, basketball and baseball player.

VERMONT SCARES BIG GREEN UNTIL EIGHT

Kendrick Allows Nine Hits While Cats Gather Seven—Winant's Triple is Seventh of Season

MYLLYKANGAS PITCHES AIR TIGHT BALL IN PINCH

Although leading 2 to 1 in the eighth inning, the Catamount baseball team was forced to taste defeat by Dartmouth at Hanover when the latter staged a two-run rally in that inning to win the game by a 3 to 2 score. It was a close and interesting contest and the Vermonters should be given much credit for holding the powerful Big Green team to such a close score. Kendrick was on the mound for the Green and Gold and pitched a great game.

Rolfe, shortstop, led Dartmouth's attack with three hits but it was Booma's smashing single to left that let Picken in with the winning run. This is the Green's sixth consecutive victory.

Vermont scored its two runs in the first two innings but after that Myllykangas, Dartmouth pitcher, tightened up and allowed only three scattered hits. The first Vermont score came in the first inning when Jay walked. Traynor sacrificed and Macomber and Morse hit safely. In the second frame Winant smashed out his seventh three-base hit of the year and scored on Kendrick's single.

Would Vote To Re-elect This Smoke

So. Richmond, Va.
July 25, 1928

Larus & Brother Co.,
Richmond, Va.

Gentlemen:

As a constant user of EDGEWORTH Tobacco for the past four years, I can say I have enjoyed the comforts and pleasure of the World's Finest Tobacco. If EDGEWORTH were running for re-election, here is one sure vote for it. Its uniform quality is the outstanding feature and I recommend it highly. The EDGEWORTH Club hour over WRVA is highly pleasing and helps to form a good combination.

Fraternally yours,

MASS. AGGIES AND MIDD IN BASEBALL

Bay Staters Not as Strong as Usual—Middlebury to Use Cook on Mound Against Catamounts

MIDDLEBURY ALREADY HAS VICTORY OVER CATS

As the weather has become more favorable, the Green and Gold baseball nine has been tearing up the schedule at a rapid pace. All are home games now and the fans will have a chance to see some good teams that are to appear on Centennial Field. Tomorrow afternoon the Mass. Aggies come here to invade the Catamount charges and Monday Vermont will receive the Panther tornado from Middlebury. Both of these games should provide plenty of interest and excitement.

The Mass. Aggies have only a mediocre team this season and the Catamounts should come through with a win. Springfield, Amherst and Wesleyan easily defeated M. A. C. and Williams, who fell before Vermont 5 to 4, squeezed out a 9 to 8 victory over the Aggies. On the other hand the victories of the Bay Staters even against weak teams have been by narrow margins such as 2 to 1 over Northeastern and 4 to 3 over New Hampshire. However, nothing should be taken for granted in baseball. Captain Nitkiewicz, center fielder, will probably be the most dangerous batter who will face the Vermont pitcher tomorrow. He has led his team in the attack against opponents and has helped much toward the success of the team. Calvi, second baseman, is also another player that will bear watching both at bat and in the field.

The game with Middlebury Monday should be of especial attraction. On this game may hinge the state championship title. In a previous contest Vermont lost to Midd 7 to 0, but since then Norwich defeated the Panthers and was in turn defeated 7 to 2 by the Catamounts. After viewing these past performances, one may expect a lively battle Monday. Cook is the Blue and White's star twirler and after having successfully turned back the Green and Gold once this year, he will be on the mound to do the same trick again. In the last game he allowed the Vermonters only two hits. Hasseltine, right fielder, and Anderson, third baseman, are hard hitters and the latter is very clever in the field.

Coach Gardner's men have been steadily improving and will be able to put up some interesting battles. Traynor has been going great at second. In fact, that whole fresh infield is nothing to be ignored. It is not unlikely that Wood will oppose the Mass. Aggies on the rubber. Kendrick will undoubtedly pitch against Middlebury Monday.

Bluestockings will hold a meeting on Monday afternoon, May 27, at 4.00 o'clock at the Theta House. There will be a discussion of A. A. Milne's writings.

U. V. M. Debaters Talk on Advertising Trends at Rotary Lunch

standpoint. He denied the statement that the consumer is the one who pays. He said the business man or manufacturing concern pays for the advertising by its increased business. He said that nationally advertised products do not increase in price as the result of advertising but that the sales are increased many times. He insisted that the up-to-date business man must advertise if he is to prosper. If he sits behind the counter and waits for business to come to him his competitors will force him to close his doors.

Quotations and Statistics

Several well-known business men and concerns were quoted in an effort to prove that the results of advertising have been beneficial. As the result of advertising one clothing firm increased its annual sales from $1,500,000 to $15,000,000.

The modern trend in advertising is toward truthfulness, Mr. Lisman declared. He then pointed out that many of the leading magazines and newspapers have advertising censors. National advertising clubs have adopted ethical standards.

The affirmative speaker declared it would be better for those who have goods to sell to conform to certain standards set and regulated by the government. The negative speaker intimated that this method would involve too much "red tape" and would not be practical from a business standpoint.

The Rotarians, voting on the merits of the question, declared their belief that modern advertising trends are undesirable.

Vermont Debaters Prove Successful

most ambitious program. Mabel Freeman, '30; Frances Howley, '29; and Janice Goodrich, '30; supported the cause of co-education in America and defeated the Dartmouth men, tallying three points where the men tallied none.

There followed the New York trip from which Frances Howley was kept by an unfortunate accident. Janice Goodrich and Gladys Kone therefore left on the trip and, although they worked hard and presented unusually good debates, they lost the decisions to New Rochelle, Mount St. Vincent and the New Jersey College for Women.

To finish the schedule of debates for the season it was necessary to choose another debater. Frances [illegible] back again after her little [illegible] and Janice Goodrich were only thirds of a team when it came to Midd contest. So try-outs were to pick out a third forensic [illegible] selecting Roberta Powers [illegible] were fortunate.

These three, then, on the third of April, came through with a unanimous win over the Middlebury college crack women's team.

This closed the season with the balance nearly even for Vermont, who received seven votes in five debates and missed eight, losing three contests and winning two.

Janice Goodrich, '30 has participated in all debates this season. Gladys Kone, '29, has taken part in three; Frances Howley, '29, in two; Mabel Freemann, '30, and Roberta Powers, '32, in one each.

ORATORY CONTEST HELD LAST FRIDAY

Benjamin Baker, '31, Wins First Prize, Robert Jenks, '32, Second, and Louis Lisman, '31, Third—Event Attracts Large Audience

PROFESSOR DEAN SHINES AS WITTY CHAIRMAN

Prof. F. H. Brown, Prof. J. I. Lindsay, and the Rev. Vedder Van Dyck Hand Down Decision—Music by Mrs. Paul A. Moody and Madame Bradish

At the Kingsley prize speaking contest held last Friday evening in the City Hall auditorium, Benjamin Baker, '31, was awarded the first prize of $25. Robert Jenks, '32, received $15 as second best speaker, and Louis Lisman, '31 received the third award of $10. The chairman of the contest was Prof. Leon W. Dean. The judges were Prof. F. H. Brown, Prof. J. I. Lindsay, and the Rev. Vedder Van Dyck.

Vocal selections were sung to an appreciative audience by Mrs. Paul A. Moody, accompanied by Madame Bradish. Miss Kathrina Munn also favored the audience with a few musical selections on the piano.

Benjamin Baker, the first speaker, talked persuasively to the audience on the appropriateness of honoring great persons while they are living and not waiting until they are dead. As the ideal great man who is today living and deserving of praise he cited Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court. The speech was adapted from an essay by Cameron Rogers.

"A Message to Garcia" by Elbert Hubbard was given by Robert Jenks, the winner of second prize. Speaking in a smooth and sonorous manner, Jenks brought out the full importance of "taking a message to Garcia."

Aristide Briand's address at the Washington Disarmament Conference was the selection rendered by Louis Lisman. An attack of stage-fever forced him to leave the stage shortly after the opening of his speech but his rendition of Briand's address after his return to the platform sufficiently counteracted all other influences to gain him a prize.

Ernest Codding rendered Calvin Coolidge's "Freedom and Its Obligations." Donald Frazier gave Victor Hugo's "Moral Force in World Politics." "Grape Shot and Hemp," a selection from William Brownlow, was George Pratt's address.

The program of the evening was as follows:

Thou Art Like Unto a Flower
Rubinstein

Songs My Mother Used to Sing
Dvorak

Mrs. Paul A. Moody, accompanied by Madame Bradish.

1. Country-Wide Praise—To Whom —Cameron Rogers (adapted) Benjamin Baker
2. Message to Garcia —Elbert Hubbard Robert Jenks
3. Freedom and Its Obligations —Calvin Coolidge Ernest Codding

Piano Solo, Rigoletto Paraphrase Verdi-Liszt
Miss Kathrina Munn

4. Moral Force in World Politics —Victor Hugo Donald Frazier
5. Address at Washington Disarmament Conference —Aristide Briand Louis Lisman
6. Grape Shot and Hemp, —William Brownlow George Pratt

Sleep Song Fay Foster
A Menagerie Fay Foster

Mrs. Paul A. Moody, accompanied by Madame Bradish.

All praise must go to Chairman Dean for his highly successful conduct of the evening. His interesting and witty remarks did much to enliven the program.

According to the psychology department at Princeton, one's mental alertness, patience and pocketbook are at their lowest ebb between ten and fifteen hours after a prom.

CO-EDS TO HAVE THREE CORNER ARCHERY MEET

U. V. M. coeds will compete in an archery contest, May 25, with St. Lawrence University and the Connecticut Agricultural College. This is the first intercollegiate archery contest this year. Anyone may enter. The results of the contest will be telegraphed to the respective colleges Saturday night.

The manner of conducting an archery contest is that each contestant shall shoot 12 arrows from each of three distances, 30, 40 and 50 feet from the target and they will be scored as usual, a bulls-eye counting 10.

BIG GREEN HERE TO PLAY SECOND GAME

Myllykangas, Winning Pitcher in Last Encounter, Will Take Mound Again, With Holstrom in Reserve

KENDRICK TO PITCH DARTMOUTH GAME AGAIN

On Memorial Day the great attraction for Vermont sport fans will be the annual Dartmouth-Vermont clash at Centennial Field. This has been a regular feature in Burlington for several years and has always been a great drawing-card; this year it should be even more popular because Dartmouth has won its last six games and the game at Dartmouth was a nip and tuck affair.

Lauri Myllykangas, who pitched that game for the Green will be on the mound again. He also defeated Columbia and has yet to taste defeat.

The Green and Gold are on edge to take the Hanoverites into camp in their own lair. They feel that it was only a piece of hard luck that lost the game at Hanover, for in the eighth inning the Cats were leading 2 to 1; in that inning the Green managed to sneak over two runs to win the game.

Last year the Green and Gold entered the Memorial Day contest with a previous 7 to 0 victory over the Hanoverites in the bag. The Big Green was raging to atone for this stinging defeat but was again turned back, this time by a 2 to 1 score, with Moriarty on the mound for Vermont. However, Dartmouth has a much stronger team this year as is evidenced by wins over Yale, Princeton, Columbia and Cornell. The pitching department causes no worry to Coach Jeff Tesereau with such men on hand as Hollstrom, Myllykangas, Marsh, and Wolff; in Rolfe, shortstop, Walsh, third-base, and Booma, an outfielder, the Green presents three batters dangerous to the welfare of any pitcher.

Vermont has been showing steady improvement with every game. Errors have been fewer and it is getting to be a real treat to see the freshman infield perform. The outfield department has been considerably strengthened by the removal of Dinniman from the ineligibility list, which also gives the Cats more power with the stick. It will be remembered that Dinny was a regular on Hank Dresser's great nine of last year. Kendrick, who pitched such an excellent game at Hanover, will again be given a chance to beat Dartmouth.

Coach Gardner will probably call upon "Jim" to stop the victorious march of the Big Green.

The probable line-up:

Vermont	Dartmouth
Jay, s.s.	c.f., Harvey
Traynor, 2b.	r.f., Parker
Winant, 1b.	s.s., Rolfe
Macomber, c.	3b., Walsh
Morse, c.f.	2b., Picken
McKay, 3b	1b., Stokes
Howard, r.f.	l.f., Booma
Dinniman, l.f.	c., McDonough
Kendrick, p.	p., Myllykangas

If educated men do not earn as much money as uneducated men with equal capacities, this may be because the educated men have found something in life more worth while than dollar-collecting. The monetary yardstick is one that should be used only in connection with others, and cautiously.—The New Republic.

LILAC DAY PROVES TO BE A SUCCESS

Threatening Weather Causes Events to be Somewhat Modified Friday—Lantern Walk Cancelled—Buffet Luncheon at Robinson Hall

BEAUTIFUL PAGEANT "THE SEEKER" GIVEN

Much Credit for Success Due to Professor J. T. Metcalf and Mrs. Dallas Pollard Who Helped in Management—Soft Music Adds to Beauty of Affair

Lilac Day was observed Friday. Owing to the threatening weather several of the activities, including the Lantern Walk, had to be cancelled. The beautiful pageant, "The Seeker," written by Florence Smith, '27, was presented in the gymnasium at four-thirty in the afternoon before a large and appreciative audience. Following the pageant a buffet luncheon was served at Robinson Hall.

Lilac Day was instituted by Mortar Board several years ago and is one of the most beautiful traditions of the University. The activities are in memory of Pearl Wasson, formerly Dean of Women and much loved by the alumnae.

The pageant was staged very prettily against a background of evergreens. The various costumes in pastel shades added greatly to the beauty of the pageant, which went off smoothly and showed evidence of much careful preparation. The principals of the pageant were: High Priestess of Life, Dorothy Cottrell; Seeker, Catherine Bassett; Nature, Miriam Idleman; Lake, Mildred Whitney; Mountains, Laura Bingham and Frances McKean; Learning, Marion Baldwin; Truth, Agnes Wheeler; Vision, Charlotte Cleveland; Achievement, Margaret Durick, and Memory, Lucy Morgan.

The soloist dancers received much praise. They were as follows: Sunset Colors, Lenore Aldinger; Joy and Merriment, Estabel Perelman; and Hours of Play, Pearl Brown.

There were also several groups of dancers in the pageant. They were:

Gray Mists: Christine Shaw, Margaret Miller, Helen Burns, Winona Spencer, Helen Estellonis, Dorothy Claflin, Ruth Strong, Rebecca Seaver and Catherine Mudgett.

Scholars: Constans Holden, Alice Dodge, Gertrude Levin, Marjorie Huntley, Dorothy Roberts, Theodore Wakefield, Beatrice Parkhill, Mazy Higgins, Lois Harrington and Georgina Hubert.

Forest Leaves: Marion Everest, Margaret Corbin, Louise Bosley, Margaret Nourse, Jane Corwin and Hildur Wilde.

Youth and Friendship: Helen Prentiss, Isabelle Warhurst, Rena Priest, Marion Berry, Hazel McCabe, Florence Scott and Phoebe Flint.

Hours of Work: Annette Middleton, Evelyn Wright, Marjorie Elsen winter, Inez Bellmore, Bertha Hasen and Virginia Goodenough.

Hours of Happiness: Betty Upton, Marion Lynch, Louise Manson, Esther Mandigo, and Charlotta Grimm.

Hours of Song and Dance: Norma Freeman, Edna Blackwood, Elizabeth Mandigo, Doris Brennan, Isabelle Holmes, Madeline Johnson, Marion Edwards, Lillian Mount and Janet Miller.

Soft music added greatly to the beauty of the pageant. At the piano were Cornelia Mould and Kathrina Munn. Harriet Hazard played the violin. The chorus of singers was as follows: Hazel Ladd, Doris Duprat, Irene Marcott, Elizabeth Howe, Dorothy Nash, Hope Grant, Katherine Skinner and Winona Spencer.

Much of the success of Lilac Day was due to the work of those who assisted in the presentation of the pageant, and to the committee chairmen. Professor J. T. Metcalf and Mrs. Dallas Pollard helped in the management. The committee chairmen were: properties, Margaret Parry; costumes, Alma Farr, and Narcissus Goodsell; dancing, Mildred Whitney; supper, Helen Wilson; publicity, Priscilla Campbell; and singing, Hazel Ladd.

MGR. BURR RELEASES BASKETBALL LIST

Schedule of 20 Games Includes Ten Teams Played Last Year and Five Newcomers

MONTREAL A. A. A. TO OPEN SEASON AS USUAL.

Warren H. Burr, manager of varsity basketball, has announced his schedule for the 1929-1930 season through the office of the Graduate Manager.

Games are scheduled with ten teams which were on last year's list, including the three Vermont teams as well as Springfield, Holy Cross, Lowell Textile, U. S. Coast Guard, Montreal A. A. A., Dartmouth and McGill. Middlebury, St. Michael's, Norwich, Springfield and Holy Cross are home and home games. Montreal A. A. A. opens the season here on December 7 and the Cats will journey to Hanover for the second game of the season against Dartmouth. Holy Cross winds up the season at Burlington.

Crescent A. C. and Rensselaer are two opponents who have been played in years past. The U. S. Naval Training Station team, Savage Normal School and Northeastern are newcomers.

There are two long trips, one to New York to meet the Crescents and Rensselaer, and another to southern New England to play Holy Cross and Springfield.

The schedule:

December
7 Montreal A. A. A. at Burlington
11 Dartmouth at Hanover
14 McGill at Burlington
18 U. S. Naval Training Station at Burlington.

January
4 Northeastern (pending) at Burlington
7 Savage Normal at Burlington
10 Crescent A. C. at Brooklyn
11 Rensselaer at Troy

8. U. S. Coast Guard at Burlington
11. Norwich at Northfield
13. Lowell Textile at Burlington.
15 Springfield at Burlington.
18. Middlebury at Middlebury
21. Holy Cross at Worcester.
22 Springfield at Springfield.
25 Middlebury at Burlington
27 Norwich at Burlington

March
1 Holy Cross at Burlington

INTERNATIONAL CLUB HAS AMBITIOUS PLANS

During the past year the International Relations Club has held meetings about twice a month. At these meetings the various members have presented and read papers on some foreign country.

Several interesting volumes have been contributed toward the work of the club by the Carnegie Fund and they are on the shelves of the Billings Library.

Although not as much was accomplished this year as was hoped, the plans for next year, while not complete, indicate that the society will be very active.

The only reason a great many American families don't own an elephant is that they have never been offered an elephant for a dollar down and easy weekly payments.

HE DESERVES IT

We are writing this on the home bench just before the Mass. Aggies-Vermont baseball game. The team has just gone through some snappy infield practice—the fellows look good. We don't know what the outcome of today's contest will be. After all, that doesn't matter so much. What makes us feel proud and happy to be a "V" student is the fact that we see a wonderful bunch of fellows out there on the field, willing and anxious to advance the Green and Gold banner of baseball prestige as far as they are able to do so. They're clean players; they're young players; they're good players. What more can one ask? You who come to the games cannot help but enjoy them. Again we demand—What more can you ask?

There's a man behind the scenes who's working, and working mighty hard, to dust the dust off the diamond dusters—to smooth off the rough edges, now that the team has advanced so far into the season. He's already done an excellent job. He's taken a green team, given them the golden wisdom of his long experience and produced a Green and Gold combination that we may well be proud of.

We've just walked about in front of the stands, looking the crowd over a bit. There aren't as many Vermont Eds and Coos as we'd like to find supporting the team, cheering for it, wholeheartedly interested in it.

Is this big thing called college spirit simply a myth? Is this even bigger thing called "The Old Vermont Spirit" just an empty bubble? We hardly think so. We don't want to think so. We'd rather believe that you're back of the team—the fellows deserve it. We'd prefer to think that you're right behind "Larry" Gardner—he, too, deserves your loyal support.

"It is better to preach at once the truth which visits us, no matter how dangerous it may seem to be to any or every cause, for we may be sure that it will bring its own compensation and its own restrictions."—SPINOZA

Contrary to the rabid assertions of matronly sewing circles and pessimistic male reformers, the college student of today is sober ninety-nine one-hundredths of the time. When he does drink, it is usually to parade his drunkenness,—at a football game, at a dance, during a vacation, at a social gathering,—and it is on such occasions that a shocked older generation is most liable to see youth in action. False conclusions are natural.

It is probable that if any one of the undergraduates who sometimes get thoroughly oiled on midwinter Saturday nights were to be completely isolated, with no chance of anyone seeing his antics, and no possibility of telling anybody about them afterwards, he would find something more interesting than drinking to do. Even these Saturday night escapades are limited to a small proportion of the college group.

Since the pecuniary element limits undergraduate liquor consumption from one angle, and since moral considerations limit it to a certain extent from another, it is evident that much of the too widely scattered bally hoo about "the deplorable state of affairs in American colleges with regard to the liquor situation" is founded on a basis of fairly flimsy fact.—The Dartmouth.

A REAL ASSET

Self-confidence does not mean conceit. It means the quiet conviction that success depends on things which lie wholly within our power. Honesty in word and deed is the first essential to enduring success—and we can be honest if we choose.

The old fashioned virtues of steadfast loyalty to those above us, generous sympathy for those beside us punctuality, accuracy, prudence, thrift, courage, fair mindedness—these depend not on our birth or station, but on our will power.

To want them supremely is to have them, and the one who has them has what all the world desires to secure. The world is tired of erratic geniuses—men that flare like great rockets in the sky and leave a great darkness behind them.

One steady, shining candle is of more real service to the world than a ton of fireworks. One man absolutely faithful, prompt, dependable, undismayed by difficulty is a tremendous asset in the world—to himself, his employer, his city and his nation.—Broadcaster.

"There's that girl who fainted yesterday. I hear you brought her to. What did she do?

"She drank both of them!"—Burr.

THE BOARDING HOUSE REACH

By Ex-Converse Hall

The Woman Driver

I "chauffeur" during the summer vacations. Immediately after my last exam I desert the wheel of knowledge to seek the wheel of a Studebaker or a Cadillac. I shift from collegiate surroundings into first on a President sedan and my summer activities have begun. I like to drive good cars. I like to feel the surge of power beneath a shining hood as I tap the accelerator. I like to cut in or out of Metropolitan traffic or race a taxi driver from the Concourse down to the new Holland Tunnel. I've driven cars long enough to know how to handle them. I chauffeured a year before I became of age to receive my first license, and have driven ever since I could reach the pedals of an antiquated Ford.

I, therefore, look forward to my summer vacations with much anticipation and pleasure. They are indeed a source of recreation to me after months of cramming my weary brain with facts of the natural environment, and their relation to man's activities, statistics courses, and the study of English, American and Norwegian essays.

During the first day that I assume my position I am happy, elated—proud to be guiding such an excellent piece of machinery. However, during the following weeks, my happiness and elation fade, doubt and anger fill my heart and fear grips my brain. I attribute the cause of this remarkable change to the Woman Driver.

Much has been said and much more written about the Woman Driver. Contending that too much cannot be said or written about a public menace and a source of perpetual irritation and danger, I shall add my observations to those with which you may already be familiar. They are six in number.

1. Woman's place is in the home. Not being at home in a car, she should stay out of cars and indoors.

2. Down through the centuries woman has been accustomed to do as she pleases. This she continues to do while at the wheel of an automobile. She drives as slowly as she wishes, with no regard to the impatiently honking line behind. When the road becomes wide enough to allow them to pass, she invariably swings out in the center, and from that vantage point casts dire glances at all and sundry who attempt to go by on the right.

3. Hers is the inalienable right to dive into parking spaces from any position on the road without first signaling her intentions.

4. And her signals are uncertain as her intentions. When she extends a daintily-manicured hand from the left window you cannot tell whether she means to turn left or right, is shaking a powder puff, knocking the ashes from her cigarette, or merely trying to carry on a harmless flirtation with you. The best thing to do is to stop. Then, if she doesn't decide to back into you, you can pursue your course after she has completed her entangling maneuvers.

5. The Woman Driver cannot change a tire. But she sometimes has soulful eyes, and always the right, nay, the duty, to command's man's services. For that reason my hands are calloused from changing tires after the Woman Driver has preferred to run over a milk bottle rather than exert herself sufficiently to turn the wheel a bit.

6. The Woman Driver claims first right to all parking spaces. If you attempt to drive in a one-car gap ahead of her, she will summons an officer, and plead that she saw the place first—which fact must please the Limb of the Law, as it flies to her most excellent eyesight.

I could go on thus at great length but the mere recalling to memory the Woman Driver's actions upsets otherwise even temper. The Back Driver was bad enough, but a Woman Driver at the wheel is worse than in the back. There is but one solution to the problem. If we could force women who sit directly in front of the wheel, gripping it as if they were driving back a coach and eight, to give up driving—the puzzle would work out its own solution. There would be no Women Drivers left.

One man supervises the construction of a new telephone line, a second is responsible for efficient service on that line, a third conceives an idea for its greater scope and shows the public how to use the service.

Each is furthering an important side of the many-sided business of rendering reliable, uniform and economical telephone service to every corner of the nation.

Bell invented the telephone; Vail made it a servant of every-day life. Today, the widely different types of ability represented by those two men are still essential.

What is more, as the Bell System develops in complexity, opportunities for interesting life-work become constantly more varied.

Cats Take Two Games With Plenty Of Runs To Spare

Norwich Defeated 7 to 1—Dinniman Pulls Off Circus Catch and Hits Triple and Single—Morse Stars With Steal Home and Two Hits as Vermont Beats M. A. C. 10 to 1

RUTKOWSKI AND SARGENT ARE WINNING PITCHERS

Giving Rutkowski air-tight support, the Catamounts were able to hand Norwich a 7 to 1 defeat last Thursday afternoon on Centennial Field.

Dinniman appeared in the line-up for the first time since his recent removal from the ineligibility list and he celebrated the occasion by becoming the star of the game. He robbed Hourin of a home run when he made the feature catch of the game after a long run back toward the football stands to snare the ball by his finger tips as it went over his head. He also made two hits out of four trips to the plate—one a triple with Howard on base to tie the score in the fifth inning.

Until the last half of the seventh inning the game was a close pitchers' battle between Waining and the yearling Rutkowski; but then Waining, repeating his performance of the previous contest blew up. For once the "lucky" seventh proved true to the fans. In that frame the Catamounts slammed Waining for six hits and pushed across five runs. This put the game on ice and Norwich did not even threaten once to overcome the lead that Vermont had. In all the Green and Gold made 11 hits to their opponent's six.

Waining made the first score of the game and the only one for the Cadets in the second inning. He was safe on an error and came across with a run while the Cats were cornering O'Donnell between bases for the third out. Incidently, Waining led his teammates in the batting attack by hitting safely twice out of three trips to the plate.

The first Vermont score came in the fifth when Howard walked and Dinniman tripled. In the sixth frame the Catamounts got another run. Winant and Morse singled and the former came in on Waining's wild pitch.

By this game Rutkowski has raised his credits to be rated as a reliable pitcher. The whole team gave him strong support with the exception perhaps of a questionable error. Traynor had a great day both in the field and at bat. He was credited with three hits out of five trips to the plate, and he made five put-outs and two assists without an error.

Saturday afternoon after the Green Mountain Conference track meet the Green and Gold maintained the stride set in the Norwich game and trounced the Massachusetts Aggies to the tune of 10 to 1. Sargent was on the mound for Vermont and allowed only five hits while he and his teammates were pounding out 12 safeties from the offerings of Wherity and Hall. Wherity lasted until in the eighth inning when the Cats began their overwhelming attack. Hall finished the inning and allowed two hits and one run. Vermont was plainly the superior team and was really not once in any danger.

No scores were made until Vermont's half of the fifth inning. Sargent walked, was advanced when Jay was safe on an error, and scored on Winant's single.

In the sixth frame Johnson made the Aggies' only score when he hit safely and was finally brought in by Calvi's hit which the latter unsuccessfully tried to stretch into a double, being caught at second on Dinniman's long peg. Johnson was the only M. A. C. man to get beyond second base and only six ever got to first. No more than four Aggies batted in any one inning, and only 30 batters faced Sargent.

Morse provided the sensation of the game in the last half of the sixth by his clever base-stealing. He led off this inning with a stinging single to left field and advanced to second base on Taft's error in handling the hit. He proceeded to steal third and then to the surprise and delight of the fans he pulled off a "Ty Cobb" by stealing home on the next pitched ball. It was certainly a treat to see him go around those bases for he also sent in two more runs by his hitting. Morse was a figure in the Vermont scoring. No more scoring was done that inning.

Again in the seventh Vermont made two more runs. Jay walked and stole second. Traynor flied out to Elbert but Winant singled and Jay went to third. Macomber was out on a slow grounder to first, but Jay and Winant came home on Morse's double. The inning ended when McKay flied out to Taft.

However, it was the eighth inning that made the game a nightmare for the Aggies. Five hits, two walks and a sacrifice netted the Catamounts six runs in this frame. Hall relieved Wherity on the mound but he did not fare much better.

In the ninth the Aggies looked for a score when Calvi doubled after Hall had struck out, but he died on second for the next two batters were put out

WORCESTER TECH WINS TENNIS MATCH 5 TO 1

Macomber took Vermont's only point in the tennis contest with Worcester Tech Saturday on the U. V. M. courts He defeated Cotton 6-4, 6-4 in the last singles match of the afternoon.

Borkland forced his opponent, Alber, to three sets before losing and he and Shedd did the same thing in the doubles.

The summary:

Singles: Corsini (W.) beat Shedd (V.) 7-5, 6-2; Alber (W.) beat Borkland (V.) 8-6, 4-6, 6-0; Collins (W.) beat Goddard (V.) 6-1, 6-4; Macomber (V.) beat Cotton (W.) 6-4, 6-4.

Doubles: Corsini and Collins (W.) beat Shedd and Borkland (V.) 6-3, 5-7, 6-4; Alber and Cotton (W.) beat Macomber and Pouch (V.) 6-3, 6-0.

CAT'S MEOW

SPORTING EDITOR—

In the Mass. Aggie game our nine played as good baseball as has been displayed at Centennial Field for several years

Plenty of clean hitting, brilliant fielding, good pitching, smart base running, and another asset—constant chatter—were much in evidence throughout the game

Dinniman continued his fine work in the Norwich game by getting a single and two sacrifices in four trips to the plate, stealing a base, and registering three put outs and an assist against the Aggies. Seldom does a big leaguer pull down the kind of a ball "Dinny" caught off Hourin's bat Thursday in the fourth inning. Hourin also hit him a tough one in the first inning but "Dinny" made it look easy

Hope we were not misunderstood in our column of May 24. We said that "Larry" Gardner "didn't like the switch made by 'Doc' Newton who handled the team against Conn. Aggies and St. Michael's so he put Winant back in seventh place and Howard in third position in the batting order." "Doc" was acting upon orders left by "Larry." Against M. A. C. and Norwich Winant looked so good in third place that he will probably remain there—especially against left-handed pitching.

"Burt" Morse's base stealing in the sixth inning of Saturday's game will always be remembered as a most beautiful and clever bit of baseball. He went from second to home on two successively pitched balls and his slide home was absolutely perfect. We haven't seen a faster college man than "Burt" on the base paths. By the way—that run was the winning tally.

Winant at first and Traynor at the keystone sack are playing a wonderful game. Heads up baseball gave Winant an unassisted double play against the Aggies.

The best performance in the Conference Meet was the two-mile race Dalton and Hinckley of Middlebury and Norwich respectively were together every inch of the way with Dalton setting the pace. They sprinted about 300 yards and the latter had barely enough left to come in ahead It broke the state record of 10 minutes, 15.5 seconds made by Wood of Vermont in 1925 by 10.9 seconds.

NORTHFIELD CONFERENCE COMMENCES ON JUNE 14

Northfield, the oldest student conference ground in America, will again entertain the men from the New England colleges in their annual summer conference. The conference committee has set as the date June 14-22, immediately following the close of the college year.

Plans are rapidly maturing for an unusually strong program. Among the leaders who have already been accepted are: Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, President of Union Seminary in New York; Rt. Rev. John T. Dallas, the Bishop of New Hampshire; Rev. Reinhold Neibuhr, professor, teacher, author; G. Sherwood Eddy, world traveler, authority on international relations, famous as a leader of student thought; Kirby Page, editor, speaker, world peace expert; Dr. Cyril Haas, noted for his medical work in Turkey; Richard Funkhouser, President of the New England Field Council; David R. Porter, General Secretary National Student Division; and Erdman Harris, student leader

MACKAY AND CHILDS TAKE FIRSTS FOR CATS

Three conference records were smashed and two tied as Middlebury easily walked away with the Green Mountain Conference track meet at Centennial Field Saturday with Norwich second and Vermont in the cellar The point score was: Middlebury 68, Norwich 43, Vermont 25 The Catamounts took only two first places during the entire meeting Norwich proved to be unexpectedly strong in some events and gave Middlebury a much closer battle than the Black Panthers expected Middlebury had an easy time and followed the dope very closely. Smith winning both sprints Guarnaccia took two firsts in the field and Goltry figured heavily in the point ing

One record that was broken was the pole vault, which had been set at 11 feet 6 inches by Whitten of Vermont. Paul of Middlebury did 11 feet 7 inches Saturday. Sonny Simpson's javelin record was broken when Houghton of Norwich heaved the shaft 167 feet 9 inches. Bob Dalton, a slim little chap from Middlebury, crashed O T. Wood's two-mile record by over ten seconds, doing the grind in 10 04⅘ Smith of Middlebury tied his own record in the hundred at 10⅕ and Childs of Vermont tied the record made by Howard Prentice in the broad jump

The prettiest race of the afternoon was the two-mile run with Hinckly of Norwich and Dalton of Middlebury in a class by themselves. The little Norwich speedster should have won the event but had tough luck. Three times he challenged Dalton and three times took the lead but in the seventh lap he caught his spikes and fell heavily to the ground as the Panther passed him He came back gamely and took the lead but the fall had unnal

Commencement Program to See Reunion of 15 Classes

1881, 1882, 1890, 1899, 1900, 1901, 1904 1907 1914 1919 1920 1929. Last year [illegible] celebrated their thirtieth reunion and 1914 their tenth and these classes although some of the members expect to return are not planning elaborate affairs this year. All the others are making extensive preparations. The [illegible] of 1879 1880 1881 1882 were to emerge together. So were those of 1900, 1901, and likewise 1914, 1919, 1919, 1920. The class of 1864 is celebrating its sixty-fifth reunion, the class of 1879 its fiftieth, the class of 1889 its thirtieth, the class of 1904 its twenty-fifth the class of 1919 its tenth. All alumni whose classes are not having regular reunions are also urged to return. It is hoped to make this Commencement the biggest and the most enthusiastic one the University ever has had.

There are cups offered for the class having the largest attendance of its living membership back and for the class sporting the most clever costume. For entertainment there are baseball games; class, fraternity and department reunions; the exercises of Class Day, Baccalaureate Day and Commencement Day; the alumni boat ride, the senior prom, which is informal and attended by many alumni and the big alumni luncheon, with its songs, cheers, class rivalry and class speakers. The Rev Allan P. Shatford of Montreal, who will deliver the baccalaureate sermon; and Judge Wendell P. Stafford, who will give the Commencement address, are both excellent speakers. On Friday, June 14, the baseball game is with St Lawrence University. On Saturday, June 15 comes the annual alumni game. The dates of Commencement are from June 14 to June 17 with Friday figuring as Class Day, Saturday as Alumni Day, Sunday as Baccalaureate Day, and Monday as Commencement Day.

Rev. Shatford to Deliver Baccalaureate

The Rev. Allan P. Shatford, pastor of the Church of St James the Apostle, Montreal, Canada, will preach the Baccalaureate sermon at the University of Vermont on Sunday, June 16. The speaker is not a stranger to the University. He gave an address at a vesper service at the University, February 12, 1928. At that time he was highly praised as a speaker by both college and townspeople.

He was ordained in 1896 by Bishop Courtney of Nova Scotia. His parishes have included Holy Trinity, Bridgewater, N. S.; North Sydney, N. S., and St. James the Apostle, Montreal. He has served as Governor of the Diocesan Theological College, Montreal, Fellow-Governor of McGill University, Governor of Cooperated Theological College, Montreal, since its organization in 1913.

Canon Shatford served four years during the World War with Canadian troops and was mentioned in dispatches and awarded the Order of the British Empire.

Judge W. P. Stafford Commencement Orator

Judge Wendell P. Stafford, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, distinguished Vermont orator and poet, has accepted the invitation to deliver the Commencement address at the University of Vermont on Monday, June 17. Judge Stafford is considered by many the greatest living Vermont orator. Though spending the greater part of the year in Washington, he still retains his residence in St. Johnsbury and spends much of the summer at Caspian Lake in Greensboro.

Judge Stafford represented St. Johnsbury in the Vermont House of Representatives in 1892. He was reporter of decisions for the Supreme Court of Vermont from 1896 to 1900. He served four years on the Supreme Court of Vermont, from 1900 to 1904, when he was appointed associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Since September 1, 1908, he has served as professor of equity jurisprudence at George Washington University.

Judge Stafford was president of the Vermont Bar Association in 1898 and 1899. He has lectured frequently in Vermont and occasionally in Boston, New York and Washington. His latest address in Vermont was given at the recent meeting of the Sons of the American Revolution, held in the Hall of Representatives in Montpelier this year. His subject was "Washington and Lincoln."

Judge Stafford is an author of note, having published several books of poems, including "North Flowers," in 1902; "Dorian Days," 1909; "Voices, a Dramatic Ode," 1915; "The Land We Love," 1916; and "War Poems," 1917. He also published a volume of speeches in 1913. He has edited the 69th, 70th and 71st volumes of the Vermont Reports.

in short order. Calvi was the leading M. A. C. batter.

Winant played a fine game at first base and with Traynor and Morse led the Vermont batting attack. Not a player on the Green and Gold nine was guilty of a single error and this fact speaks much for the defensive power of the team.

We want University Men for our summer classes in flying !

Individual instruction in flying is offered to selected applicants by the Buffalo Summer unit of the National Flying Schools—May to November.

Complete courses of instruction qualifying the student for various government commercial pilots' licenses are now open for your selection.

The equipment of this school comes second only to the Army and Navy schools in reliability and completeness. The training plane used is manufactured by the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, who have been exclusive primary plane manufacturers for the United States Army Air Corps, and for four foreign governments for a number of years.

Our instructors have been carefully selected from the Army Air Corps, and their classes are being limited to insure thoroughly individualized instruction.

Parents whose sons or daughters are contemplating courses in flying this summer are invited to write us for details regarding our schools. It is our belief that many of the future executives of this new giant industry will be largely selected from our various school units of which Buffalo is the first. Where possible, we suggest a personal visit to our office or the Consolidated Airport, Military Rd., Buffalo.

Full details of the subjects taught, terms, etc., will be furnished upon application. Write, phone, wire or call in person.

DEFINES REQUISITES OF SUCCESSFUL TEACHING

Wilkinson Tells Phi Kappa Phi Knowledge, Skill in Oration, and Fairmindedness are Essential

Prof. W. J. Wilkinson, head of the history department, was the principal speaker at the Kappa Phi Kappa banquet last Tuesday evening in the education office.

Professor Wilkinson opened his topic by presenting this question, "How is the teacher compensated?" and then proceeding to answer it. He recommended the reading of William James' delightful essay entitled, "Is Life Worthwhile Living?" in which James proclaims Rousseau to be a supreme example of optimism Professor Wilkinson believes that a congenial occupation is one of the best ways to make one's life worthwhile. The teacher has added compensation The economic factor is not the only important part of teaching. For example, a man teaching English Literature not only is earning his living but also his cultural background is being steadily enlarged.

In criticizing some of his former instructors, Professor Wilkinson finds that, broadly speaking, teachers can be divided into two classes The one emphasizes the spirit of teaching and the other stresses the law of teaching. It is the farmer who gives more than external facts, and it is he who succeeds in interesting students in his subject The speaker cited Woodrow Wilson, who was one of his professors at Princeton, as an example of a successful teacher. He possessed a thorough mastery of his subject and a clarity of presentation

Taking history as a specific example, Professor Wilkinson gave three requisites of a successful teacher. These laws can be applied, for the most part, to the successful teaching of any subject.

Demands Sufficient Knowledge

First, the teacher must have sufficient knowledge of his subject He must get below the surface and grasp the underlying reasons. He must

REYNOLDS SPEAKS AT FINAL CHAPEL SERVICE

Rev Joseph Reynolds spoke Wednesday at the last chapel service of the year His sermon had to do with Memorial Day—and his topic "He gave Himself for me"

A man will die for adventure but scarcely will a man die for righteousness When a man dies for others in times of peace it reminds one of Jesus dying to save man from his sins

Memorial Day applies especially to the Civil War One day a man walking through an old cemetery came across a farmer placing flowers around a grave whose tombstone bore these words, "He died for me" He learned the following story

The farmer had been drafted in the Civil War His wife was in poor health and there were several small children and very little money The farmer couldn't afford to buy a substitute and was ready to leave when a younger unmarried man took his place

In his first battle he was struck by a bullet and killed The farmer had now come to plant flowers at the grave of the man who had died for him

Today we have been beneficiaries of self sacrifice Righteousness exalts a nation but sin degrades it. He that does righteously is righteous "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me"

Since these things are so, let us prove our gratitude by striving with all our power to attain one goal, that of supreme righteousness

Eddie Winant Hits Homer With Jay on for Feature of Game—Vermont Takes Advantage of Middlebury Misplays

BASEBALL TITLE ONLY ONE ON HILL THIS YEAR

With only three veterans on the team, and an infield made up of steady ready freshmen Coach Lacey's baseball proteges the Lake Champlain champions by a 6 to 4 score championship this year Middlebury was stopped last Monday afternoon at Centennial Field when the Vermont nine played a flashy brand of ball to turn the tables on the Panthers and definitely cop the baseball championship of the Green Mountain Conference The score of that game was 4 to 2 and was featured by Eddie Winant's homer to the right field fence in the first frame with Hunter Jay on base and by the consistently sealed fielding of the whole Vermont team and how!

Captain Cal Macomber deserves much credit for his catching which was the best he has done this year Of course Winant's homer was the home-run ball of the game Fleming was the same good of Fleming He made his fielding chances look as easy as Phil he played steady ball in the short field and scored the first run of the game on Winant's blow McKay will be certainly bad his choice of the hot corner right beside and

"LUCK"

A modern wise man was asked if he believed in luck. His answer is worth remembering.

"Do I believe in luck? I should say I do! It's a wonderful force! I have watched the successful careers of too many lucky men to doubt its existence and its efficacy. You see some fellow reach out and grab an opportunity that the other fellows standing around had not realized was there. Having grabbed it, he hangs onto it with a grip that makes the jaws of a bulldog seem like a fairy touch.

"He calls into play his breadth of vision. He sees the possibilities of the situation, and has the ambition to desire them, and the courage to tackle them. He intensifies his strong points, bolsters his weak ones, cultivates those personal qualities that cause other men to trust him and to cooperate with him. He sows the seeds of sunshine, of good cheer, of optimism, of unstinted kindness. He gives freely of what he has, both spiritual and physical things. He thinks a little straighter; works a little harder and a little longer; travels on his nerve and his enthusiasm; he gives such services as his best efforts permit. He keeps his head cool, his feet warm, his mind busy.

"He doesn't worry over trifles; plans his work ahead, and then sticks to it, rain or shine. He talks and acts like a winner, for he knows in time he will be one. And then luck does all the rest."

Yes, luck does all the rest! No doubt, most of you have driven cars. All you have to do is to "know how," to proceed with a reasonable degree of caution, to keep always on the alert, to know how to start and stop quickly—and then the engine does all the rest.

You say that Jack had a lucky break? Perhaps he did. But we doubt very much if he's one of God's especially favored children. There is a great possibility that he matched his chances more closely than you, that he worked just a bit harder, that he was more kindly, more cheerful, more efficient. Find out his system, follow it, and maybe you'll get your share of "luck" hereafter.

Be an Athlete and See the World!

Be an athlete and see the world!

The travel inducements offered by the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps pale in comparison with the opportunities afforded at a modern American university.

Play football at Notre Dame and travel 10,000 miles in six weeks, see New York, Los Angeles, Atlanta. Swim at Northwestern and see California. Play baseball at Indiana, Illinois, Chicago, and cross the Pacific, swat the ball in the Land of the Rising Sun. Swish the draperies on the Pitt basketball squad and tour the Middle West. Row at Washington and do the 2,000 miles to Poughkeepsie every spring. Or better yet, pull an oar at California and compete in the Olympics 7,000 miles away. Run or hurl the javelin or put the shot at Stanford and win additional laurels at New Haven or Boston or Princeton while sweeping the Eastern Intercollegiates. Guard a goal for Amherst or Williams and enjoy Lake Placid at the peak of the season.

Nor is the wanderlust appeased only by athletes. One may attend Bates College, down in Maine and participate in grand debate tours from Europe to New Zealand and back. Or sing in the Harvard Musical Club or dance for Old Nassau, meanwhile casting your couch nightly on a different Pullman or in such scattered hostelries as the Statler, Hollenden, Lincoln, Stevens and Commodore.—The Daily Northwestern

KNOWING WORDS AND THINGS

Another principal advantage, which the ancient mode of the Greek education gave its pupils, was their early access to every branch of philosophical learning. They did not, like us, employ their youth in the acquisition of words, they were engaged in pursuits of a higher nature, in acquiring the knowledge of things. They did not, like us, spend seven or ten years of scholastic labor, in making a general acquaintance with two dead languages. Those years were employed in the study of nature, and in gaining the elements of philosophical knowledge from her original economy and laws. Plutarch observed that he got the knowledge of words from his knowledge of things. But we lie under the necessity of reversing his method; and before we can arrive at the knowledge of things, we must first labor to obtain the knowledge of words.—From J. and W. Langhorne, Life of Plutarch.

SAYINGS OF NAUTES

Why Ladies Go Wrong

OR

HE SENT HIS BOY TO NORWICH

I want to pour my heart out. My poor son John has gone to jail with his pretty stripes on, and lo what pain and sorrow tears at my heart each day, each morrow.

When I was young and crude I used to meditate whenever my cow-chaos mood and ponder what I'd have my son when he to man's estate had bravely won. My youth, 'tis truth, had all been spent in work and labor, so I wished my son to ride, to wear the saber. And oft I thought, after once he said shaking the darling golden curls of his sweet head from out his eyes, "Father dear I'll have you hear that when I'm big, a great he man like you, I'll never want to feed a pig. I'll have a uniform all of blue, and ride a horse and wear a mustache."

When I was very small, I'd had my mind and heart all set on the same ambition fine as had this golden-haired boy of mine and having failed to gain I made my mind that all my pain and loss and trouble never should touch him. With double efforts I toiled by night and day that my darling boy should have his way as smooth as possible to become a colonel, general or two.

At last, with painful toil I'd amassed the needful millions that it takes to send lads through college. And for their sakes many a poor parent starves. And now the knife of Fate into my story carves.

I sent my boy to Norwich. Weep, ye gods, shed tears oh ye fateful nymphs for all the speedy Zeps and army blimps use not the gas that has been spent in vain by fathers sad with bodies bent, by captains scorned with garments rent because their fathers them had sent to Norwich. I did not know R. O. T. C. that proudly at Vermont might be, and so my children near and dear whatever make be "two-pernt's" beer, I sent my son to Norwich.

The curly-haired son of mine that went is now the shaven-headed thug without a cent that breaks the stones that build the roads that lead to Burlington-on-Lake Champlain that is the home of old Vermont that should have built my laddy's brain.

Sad, oh ye roads, and hurtful ye prison socks—it is but meet that I, the dumb, should break his rocks, for I'm the one that sent him there, put him in that company where he lost his honesty and virtue. "Just one drink, it will not hurt you," cried the tempting Norwich devils, and at last he joined their revels. Now, dishonored, thrust from out the ranks, he's cracking stones, all noble thanks to Norwich, home of evil men. He caught upon the baseball nine, and once at Vermont, inning ten, made the fatal error—fine for old Vermont—the Gold and Green brought in on it four scores as joy was seen to fill the crowd.

But what could you expect. I'd sent my son to Norwich. And now he's sunk. Fathers, sleeping softly in your bunk, take a caution from my deed, men, I hope that you advice will heed.

I weep. I sent my son to Norwich.

Memorial Day Sees 500,000 In American Colleges Fighting W

Memorial Day came last Thursday. The R. O. T. C. cadets paraded that morning, down through the city, the American flag at their head, and the band playing military tunes. The thoughts of the boys turned to the days of the last war. Many of the cadets who marched on parade Thursday have been soldier boys marching off to war.

The picture of the last war is a grim one. Last Sunday's newspapers carried articles touching on its significances. T. H. Kelley, writing in the Herald-Tribune said:

"Eight years ago we brought the last cargo of them home. From freshly-broken sod in Marne wheat fields, from consecrated St. Mihiel earth, from holy Argonne soil, they came back for their reward—eternal sleep near those who knew and loved them best, prayers; eulogies; flowers; flags; Memorial Days without end.

"There were 2,479 of them, each a hero in his long wooden box. Unheralded, except for flags that floated solemnly in the breeze, these returning boys were stacked in piles according to numbers and designations. Then motor trucks carried them away.

"But they did not know it. Their windows of life were curtained forever. They did not see the woods string out nor the trestled streams flash by."

Youth Moves to End War

But the post-war pictures of world affairs are not so grim. There seems to be a movement among the youth of today to bring an end to war by practical means. Charlotte Kellogg, also writing in the Herald-Tribune, gives us the following account of youth's attempts since the war to foster world brotherhood and international peace.

"Youth was war's victim. At its close, the flower of Western youth lay blood drenched on Flanders and other fields. Surviving youth faced physical and mental starvation, spiritual despair; it quickly began to arm against the meance of post-war defeat—began in Europe, where the danger was greatest.

"National organizations were looking toward an international union which could facilitate the attainment of these objectives while envisioning other, higher ones. At Strasbourg, the very year following the armistice, they raised their standard—a victorious pennant—'Confederation International des Etudiants.'

"The Confederation's first resolution revealed the determination of young women and men, facing the post-war world, to make it a warless world. There is only one road to international understanding and peace, youth said—it is the open, old-fashioned way of neighborliness. It bridges areas of separation, cuts across barriers of ignorance. For, in order to know our neighbors, we must visit them, either over transcontinental hedges or around continental blocks. Student youth organized at Strasbourg 'to create bonds of mutual esteem and friendship among students of the world.'

"Since then official delegations from more than thirty countries have met in a similar way to plan for further neighborliness. They have met at Prague, The Hague, Oxford, Warsaw, Copenhagen, Prague again, Rome and, last summer, at Paris.

"In 1924 the Confederation achieved the delicate task of bringing students of conquered enemy countries into the general union. Germany, Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey sent official representatives to sit for the first time beside delegates from France, Czechoslovakia and Poland in the council meeting of the Confederation at Warsaw. This youth accomplished, while the most important international organization of adult scientists was still struggling to reach a like mile post. I believe the young people got there two years ahead of their elders!

"In the meantime they had established a central office at Brussels and a special travel bureau at London. While they were carrying on exchanges in textbooks and scientific films, in athletics and debating and building a direly needed student sanatorium at Leysin, Switzerland, they were organizing student camps and arranging for yearly exchange visits among more than a thousand students.

America Too

"American youth has given its hand in this attempt to lay the only sure foundation for a different, warless world. More than 500,000 strong, young men and women [illegible] state in the Union have [illegible] line with the world [illegible] that visions as the supreme [illegible] understanding world friendships.

"America's National Students' Federation grew out of a [illegible] Princeton in 1925 of [illegible] from forty-five colleges and universities who went there to try to [illegible] at a consensus of opinion on the World Court. In the end they formed the National Students' Federation of America, 'to achieve a spirit of cooperation among students of the United States, to give considered to questions affecting students' interests, to develop an intelligent student opinion an questions of national and international importance and to promote understanding among the students of the world in the furtherance of enduring peace.'

"It was in 1927, at Rome, that the American federation joined the international body.

"Some six years ago a handful of young idealists in the University of California dedicated themselves to the task of bridging areas of distrust in the world. How to begin? Primarily, in their own schools, by courses in modern language courses. They recognized, at the start, that the greatest barrier to understanding is the diversity of languages. They found that by cutting out less important subjects they could easily take on a language or two. Spanish proved a favorite and they told us, their elders, that if we did not overwhelm our minds with a staggering amount of unrelated and non-essential reading—drown them in a sea of ink—we could just as easily equip ourselves for adventure in bridge building.

"In the meantime, southern California youth said, all peoples could understand a common language, the language of beauty. Why not study late beauty? They selected from the world's paintings certain outstanding ones, bought excellent prints of them and set down briefly on the reverse of each an account of the painter and the particular culture he represented. These became a loan exhibit that has never yet caught up with its waiting list!

Practical Moves

"They launched a Latin-American week, uniting in this celebration all other southern California colleges. There were talks, 'movies,' a Spanish barbeque—a variety of attempts to 'put across' information about our South American neighbors.

"At the Institute of Technology youth hung in a conspicuous place a fine world map equipped with a system of colored lights, and beside it a bulletin board furnished with corresponding lights, they listed important world occurrences.

"The University of Kentucky designated certain foreign countries for special study. Last year it studied people had a Russia month, a Spain month and a China month. Next year they propose giving three to Spain, Latin America and Mexico."

The future of the world lies in the hands of youth. The attitude of diplomacy of an older generation led us into the World War. Youth today is opposed to war as a means of settling international disputes and is making determined efforts to reform the old order of things.

Memorial Day in the future will always recall to mind the tragedy of a great world's catastrophe, the World War.

Two young actresses were discussing about a third.

"Do you really think she's [illegible]" asked one.

"Popular!" said the other, "I've the longest run she ever had in her stockings."

CATAMOUNTS CAPTURE CONFERENCE CHAMPIONSHIP

Dartmouth Scores Shutout as Catamount Nine Falters

Big Green Scores Four Runs in Second Inning to Sew Up Contest —Sargent Relieves Rutkowski in Box—Harvey Steals Home

VERMONT INFIELD CRACKS UNDER NERVOUS TENSION

Blanked by Myllykangas, the Green and Gold nine was forced to take the short end of a 7 to 0 score in the annual classic played with Dartmouth on Memorial Day.

After playing remarkable baseball for seven straight games, winning five and losing only two to Conn Aggies and Dartmouth at Hanover by 3 to 2 counts, the Cats blew up under the strain of the long grind and strenuous opposition. Such a thing is to be expected when the fact that six of the starting line-up were playing their first year of varsity ball Inexperience and immaturity as college players is usually the direct cause of such an affair. The Middlebury game Monday showed what the boys are capable of doing and they should not be belittled

Rutkowski, who started on the mound for Vermont, whiffed the first two men who faced him. Rolfe, the next man up, was safe on Howard's error but was left on base when Walsh was thrown out at first by Rutkowski.

In the second frame, however, the Big Green let loose a barrage of hits, which coupled with two errors in the Vermont infield netted four runs.

Rutkowski was sent to the showers in the third after one run had crossed the plate. Sargent, who relieved him, retired the side without any further damage being done.

The Big Green scored a run in the seventh frame when Harvey singled, stole second, reached third while Parker was being thrown out at first by Traynor and stole home while Sargent was winding up. It was the prettiest piece of work of the game Another counter was added in the eighth when Shea tallied on McDonough's single after having reached first on Jay's error and pilfered second

The Cats threatened to score in the sixth frame when with none out, Traynor singled and took second after Rolfe had muffed Winant's easy grounder. With two men on the Big Green tightened up. Macomber was tossed out at first by Myllykangas, Morse struck out, and McKay grounded out to third. This was the only serious attempt at scoring by the Cats

Everyone on the Green and Gold team seemed to be having an off day as six errors were made and the boys couldn't hit the ball consistently. Rolfe starred for Dartmouth with three assists, three put outs, two stolen bases and a single.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA FRAT WINS BASEBALL TITLE

A. T. O. Defeats Independents 8 to 7 in Well Played Interfraternity Championship Final

Alpha Tau Omega won the Interfraternity Baseball Championship by defeating the Independents 8 to 7 in the final contest held on Centennial Field Tuesday, May 28 The game was featured by the sharp hitting and clean fielding of both nines

The Independents got off to a bad start in the opening frame and five runs had crossed the platter before the Gooch clan could be retired After this erratic start the Independents tightened up and held their opponents on even terms for the remainder of the game.

"Tim" Halligan was on the mound for the A T O's and the non-frat men were unable to fathom his delivery for more than three runs up to the last inning. "Tim" weakened a little during this frame, allowing four runners to score With the tying run on third base he tightened up, however, and whiffed Jastremski to end the game

Bussey starred for the frat men with two singles, a double, and a triple in four trips to the plate

Romanos led the Independents at bat. With one on he poled out a long four-ply clout in the seventh that almost broke up the ball game

The line-up:

Alpha Tau Omega: Bussey, c.f.; E Donnelly, r.f.; Carrigan, 2b; Gooch, s.s; Dorey, c; Halligan, p; Robbins, 3b, A. Donnelly, l.f; Wissell, 1b

Independents: Blanchette Beaupre, Jastremski, r.f; Codding, l.f; Riani, 1b.; Seutakes, s.s; Allen, 3b; Ryan, c.; Dowhan, 2b.; Romanos, c.f.; Pfenning, p.

Score by innings:

Innings:	1	2	3	4	5	6	7-	R
A. T. O	5	1	0	1	0	1	0	8
Independents	1	0	6	2	0	0	4	7

A. T. O. reached the final by winning the League I title. In the preliminary round they beat Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa Sigma defeated Sigma Phi, and Lambda Iota was set back by Phi Mu Delta, Sigma Nu going into the next round on a bye. In the quarter finals Kappa Sigma defeated A. T. O. but was ruled out of the league on account of using an ineligible man. Phi Mu Delta won over Sigma Nu and in the semi-final A. T. O defeated Phi Mu Delta

In League II Sigma Delta beat Phi Delta Theta, Phi Sigma Delta came through against Tau Epsilon Phi and the Independents eliminated Zeta Chi Delta Psi drew the bye. Phi Sigma Delta then defeated Sigma Delta while the Independents slugged out a win over Delta Psi in the quarter finals In the final of that league the Independents subdued Phi Sigma Delta

VERMONT OUTHIT BUT PLAYS SMART BASEBALL

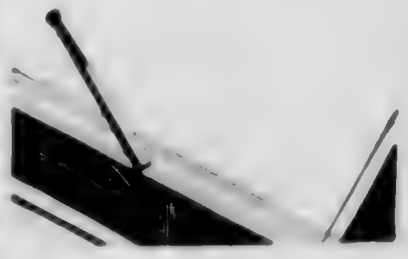
one pitcher out on fly balls. Three of his steps were of the "impossible" variety.

Dinny" Dinniman continued to lead the team in batting with a clean double past first base. He started a relay in the first inning on a ball hit under the football bleachers in left field that caught Hemeston at the plate. He started after the ball at the crack of the bat and this staved off what looked like a sure run. Morse covered a lot of ground in center and made a running catch in a fill which looked good for a couple of bags at a crucial moment. Howard drew one of the biggest gasps of the day when he caught a liner over the fence which almost burned a hole in his glove for the third out of an inning with two men on the base paths. So runs the story of the sensational scratches supplied given Jimmy Kendrick who pitched his warriors to the championship. Jim had good control working only one man. He got one of the three hits credited to Vermont. In the pinches he was great.

Although outhit eight to three the Catamounts took advantage of errors and by fast base running won the game.



Flaherty Hemeston and Kelley led the attack for Middlebury with two hits Over the Medd pitching ace twirled a great game but had to taste defeat on account of the superior fielding of his opponents.

The first inning opened with a bang and the fans settled back expecting to see a slugging battle. Dearcorn started the game with a single but was forced out at second by Jacobs after Hasselline had struck out. With Jacobs on base Hemeston slammed out a long hard drive which looked good for a home run. It was the longest hit seen on Centennial Field this year and was picked up by Dinniman under the football stands in left field. By fast relaying the ball was returned quickly and Hemeston was caught at the plate, making the third out after Jacobs had crossed the plate.

JOHN DEWEY CLUB HAS HAD AN ACTIVE SEASON

Philosophy-Psychology Organization Was Addressed by Seven Professors During Past Year —Discussion Group an Interesting Feature

[illegible] of the John Dewey Club for the year have come to a close. A review of the work accomplished by the organization during the year reveals the present activities [illegible] Dewey Club was originally organized to promote interest in philosophy and psychology and the work of the organization has not changed in this respect. Seven professors spoke before the club during the year on matters of a practical value into the realm of philosophy or psychology. A special discussion group also featured a part of this year's program.

The professors who addressed the club are Professor Gifford, who spoke on evolution; Professor Metcalf, who spoke on "Criticism"; Professor Hutchinson, who spoke on the nature of philosophy; Dean Swift who spoke on the "Relation of Mathematics to Philosophy"; Professor Dickinson, who spoke on the "Point of View of Science"; Professor Jordan, who spoke on "Some Biological Speculations"; and Professor Gettell, who spoke on "How the Biologist Might Regard It."

The discussion group was a unique experiment and it was so successful that more such meetings are planned for next year. Robert Lee Stewart was the chairman in charge of this meeting, at which many student problems were discussed in a frank and open manner and valuable opinions were disclosed. A questionnaire was an interesting part of this meeting and the results which were obtained are both instructive and helpful. The Cynic carried a full account of the discussion meeting and the questionnaire.

Harrison Goddard, '30, of Colgate N. Y., who has been prominent in musical activities, was president this year and at the last meeting of the club was re-elected to that office for next year. Miss McDonough, P. G. was vice-president. Kenneth Rosenberg, '30, former secretary-treasurer succeeds her as vice-president for next year. Edmour Germain, '31, has been elected secretary-treasurer for next year.

As many as fifty students have attended some of the meetings of the club this year, great interest being shown in the club. It is planned to enlarger the number of students interested in the organization next year.

Bertrand Russell to Lecture Here

In February, the 25th, will come Carl Sandburg, perhaps the most virile and vigorous American poet since Walt Whitman. Mr. Sandburg gives lecture-recitals which combine readings from his own compositions and folk songs with his guitar.

The Committee on University Lectures comprises A. R. Gifford, chairman, R. E. Bassett, G. H. Burrows, F. C. Mower, Elijah Swift.

The committee is negotiating for the filling of two additional dates in December and March. The lectures will be free to the general public and friends of the University.

"Steven dear," whispered the bathplug's bride as he started on his evening's work, "try to be a little more quiet when you come in tonight."

"Certainly, dear," replied the fond husband. "Did I wake you up last night?"

"No but you awakened mother, and I don't want her running up to the prison and complaining to father that I married an amateur."

Catamounts Annex State Championship

The Catamounts were not to be outdone by their rival of the same initials for the lead-off man was walked after Hunter fled out to center field. Winant then made himself a hero and [illegible] by driving out that inner home run. Hunter [illegible] for his team-mates scoring [illegible] at the end of the first inning. He was also responsible for the last Vermont tally scored in the first of the ninth.

After the first inning the Middlebury team settled down and no more scoring was done until in Vermont's half of the fourth. In this frame Winant and Macomber walked and then Morse laid down a neat bunt. The throw to first went over Sorenson's head and Morse raced to second while Winant and Macomber scored.

Kendrick kept the hits scattered and prevented Middlebury from scoring until the ninth. In the final frame the Blue and White made a desperate rally which netted only one run, thereby failing short of even tying Vermont's score. Opening the ninth, Nelson grounded out, McKay to Winant. Humeston and Crocker then hit safely in succession but Anderson popped out. Kelley followed with a safety which scored Humeston. Willis ended the game by fanning to Jay who tossed out Kelley at second.

In a previous game with Middlebury Vermont had lost by the score of 7 to 0, the only defeat in the state series. However, since then the Catamounts have been rapidly improving and thus this recent victory did not come as a surprise, except to the visitors from Middlebury.

Dares Fate for Favorite Pipe Tobacco

Darby, Pa.,

Larus & Bro. Co.
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

I have a mania for crawling through a number of unexplored caverns between the towns of Woodstock and Mt. Jackson in the Shenandoah Valley. One cave was exceedingly dangerous with its tight passages, etc. I spent three hours in this cavity, groping blindly with a "dead" flashlight and a severed guiding string.

To cut my story short, I was finally rescued by a searching party after a terrible experience. It was a wonderful feeling as I sat at the mouth of the cavern telling my friends that I would not go back in there for love nor money. I meant it—until I reached for my can of Edgeworth. It was gone, and I recalled dropping something during the excitement in the cave.

It is queer what a man will do when his favorite tobacco is concerned. I realized that without my tobacco it would be as bad as being lost in the cavity—so I crawled back.

It was a grand and glorious feeling as my hand came in contact with the Aristocrat of Tobacco.

Yours very truly,
Joseph P. Fink, Jr.

Defines Requisites of Successful Teaching

[illegible] more than mere external facts [illegible] read intensively is a necessary duty of the history teacher. If a certain historical personage is being studied, one must succeed in getting the spirit of the character. He must know the best he can the inner life of a man before he can translate the character of that man to others. The same thing is true of a period in history. To understand that period thoroughly events, characters, figures, action—all must be carefully studied in order to get a complete understanding of the spirit of the age. Never give facts without showing how they fit into the significance of the period.

The second essential of a good teacher is skill in oration. By all means, don't imitate. Let your natural interests guide you. Present your subject as clearly as possible, but above all, be sure that it is your personality, and not another's, that is putting the subject across. The teacher should make sure that he is teaching the subject which he can handle best, and is teaching it according to his own method.

The last, but not the least, necessary factor in proper teaching is fair mindedness. Professor Wilkinson considers it frightful the way in which American history is taught in some of our schools. He deplores especially some of the text books. Referring somewhat ironically to that "wonderful" educator, "Bill" Thompson, and his henchman, "Sport" Herman, the speaker told of the suppression of a history book by Professor Muzzy.

CLASS DAY PROGRAM DISTURBED BY RAIN

Seniors Deliver Orations in Fine Style, Some Indoors—Fraternities Give Receptions in Afternoon

SENIOR PROM CLOSES ROUND OF ACTIVITIES

Showers upset the well-laid plans for Class Day, celebrated Friday as the first of the four days of the 126th Commencement at the University of Vermont. The morning was cloudy, but with no rain, and the gowning of the statues and class walk took place. But soon after the Class Day exercises started on the front campus in the afternoon it began to sprinkle and soon there was a downpour which drove seniors and spectators alike to cover in the gymnasium annex.

It cleared up a bit, however, so that the ball game was played between St. Lawrence and Vermont. But the hardest shower of the day ended the game before the last half of the ninth inning could be completed, when hail and rain came down in torrents. Thus were the festivities of Class Day considerably dampened.

Raise Class Colors

Part of the ceremony of the class pilgrimage Friday morning was the raising of the class colors on the campus flagpole as the class sang its college songs. The song leader at that time and later at the gowning of the statue of Lafayette was Miss Marion Everest of Plattsburg, N. Y.

A feature of the gowning of the statue of Ira Allen, which followed was the annual address to Ira Allen given this year by Paul B. Hopson of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Class Walk

Following the exercises at the statues the line of seniors, carrying their class canes and led by their class president, wound its way across the campus pausing in front of the various buildings, which had played so important a part in their four years of college life, to listen to parting words from their various professors. Among those who spoke to them this year were President Bailey, Dean Perkins, Dean Jenne, Dean Swift, Dean Hills, Professor Aiken, Judge Mower, Professor Groat and Professor Dean, with department talks by others.

Class Day Exercises

Class day exercises opened on the rostrum beneath the campus pines at 2 o'clock, but had to be adjourned to the gymnasium about 2.30 when a lively shower interrupted Miss Dorothy Cottrell in the middle of the Class History. Those who represented the class as speakers were John P. Hyland, formerly of Burlington, now of Worcester, Mass., who gave the president's address; Bertel W. Gustafson of Proctor, chosen for the campus oration; Dorothy Cottrell of Boston, who gave the class history; Francis F. O'Keefe of Staten Island, N. Y., who delivered the address to undergraduates; Margaret B. Corbin of Burlington, who gave the class poem; Corbin C. Lyman of Middletown Springs, who presented the Boulder oration; Noble L. Page of Hinesburg, who had the Pipe oration, and Catharine B. Bassett of Burlington, who gave the Ivy oration. Music by Lechnyr's orchestra accompanied the program.

John P. Hyland, the first speaker on the class day program, gave the president's address, welcoming the members of the faculty, classmates and guests to the occasion, speaking of the pleasant associations formed at the university and the regret with which the class is leaving it.

One of the most original productions of the class day exercises was the class history by Dorothy Cottrell. The subject of Miss Cottrell's paper was "The History of the Class of 1929—A Closed Book." In humorous and entertaining vein she recounted the exploits of the class from the days when they arrived as open mouthed freshmen, wandering with timid awe about the campus, to their graduation day as revered sen-

DR. JOHNSON NOMINATED TO BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Dr. Peer Prescott Johnson of Beverly, Mass., has been nominated by the votes of the alumni of the University of Vermont as trustee of the University for a term of four years to succeed Carroll W. Doten of Cambridge, Mass., whose term expires. The announcement of the nomination was made at the Alumni Council meeting Saturday morning. Dr. Johnson received 480 votes, Fred B. Wright 352 and William T. Whelan 190. Action upon this nomination by the alumni will be taken by the Board of Trustees, which body elects its own members.

NEWLY ERECTED SLADE DORMITORY FOR WOMEN SEES ITS FIRST SOCIAL

New Women's Dorm is Scene of Informal Tea Given in Honor of Mrs. Albert Cromwell, Friend of Donor

The first social function to be held at the new Slade dormitory for women of the University, just south of Robinson Hall on South Prospect Street, took place Thursday afternoon, June 13, from 4 to 6 o'clock, when an informal tea was given in honor of Mrs. Albert Cromwell of New York. Mrs. Cromwell was a close personal friend of the late Mrs. William Gery Slade of New York, whose gift of $50,000 made possible the new women's dormitory. The gift was made in memory of Mrs. Slade's daughter, Mrs. Harriet Slade Crombie.

It has been the custom for some years to hold a tea for the girls of the senior class just previous to the closing of college. This was the occasion for honoring that custom. Several ladies of the faculty were present.

Tea was served in the living room of Robinson Hall as only the first floor of the dormitory was ready for inspection, at this time. Workmen are still busy there and a number of things remain to be done before the building is complete.

Ground Broken a Year Ago

Ground was broken for the new Slade dormitory for women the latter part of June, 1928. McKim, Mead & White of New York were the architects and O. S. Nichols of Essex Junction was the contractor.

The new dormitory is of Colonial type with a large amount of window space. It is built of brick with white trimmings. It has attractive entrances on both the east and west sides and a magnificent view of the Green Mountains may be obtained from the east windows. It is three stories in height.

Rooming facilities for 26 girls are provided in the new dormitory, each room being a single one. The average size of the student rooms is 9 by 12½ feet.

On the first floor, the south end of the dormitory is given over to a reception room in the southwest corner. This reception room may be divided up into three small rooms by doors which fold back and give the entire southwest section of this floor as one room, when desired. The southwest section of the first floor is taken up by the matron's suite, including sitting room, bedroom and bath.

The north end of the first floor is divided into student rooms, as are the whole of the second and third floors, except that there is a bathroom on each floor and on the second floor there is a kitchenette, with sink and cupboards where the girls may get light lunches and wash dishes. There is no dining room in the dormitory. The girls who live there will take their meals at Robinson Hall.

In the basement is a large room which may be used for storage or recreational purposes, and the heating equipment, which is of the vapor type, the same as that in the new City Hall. There is also a hot water heater.

The new dormitory will be ready for occupancy for the Summer Session at the University, which opens July 5.

HOWARD TO CAPTAIN 1930 BASEBALL TEAM

Powell Chosen Manager—Corbin, Smith and Tobin Given Positions as Assistant Managers

CATAMOUNTS WON BUT 10 OUT OF 22 STARTS

W. W. "Wis" Howard, of White River Junction, an outfielder and a junior, was elected captain of the University of Vermont baseball team by his teammates at the annual election. E. H. Powell of this city is elected manager with S. S. Corbin, F. S. Smith and R. E. Tobin as assistants.

Howard played right field for the Catamounts two years ago, going south with the Cats as a yearling and quickly earning place on the team by his sensational hitting. He was forced to quit during mid-season, however, but returned this year and formed a valuable addition to Larry Gardner's outer defense. It is the first time in a decade that anyone but a senior has been elected to captain the diamond aggregation. Howard will have two more years to play with the Green and Gold.

The Catamounts closing with a defeat at the hands of the alumni, had a rather strenuous season winning ten contests out of twenty-two starts while five were called off on account of rain. Larry Gardner was faced with a tremendous task at the start of the season and his work in whipping together a fair ball club out of the handful of mediocre freshman talent has made him the "miracle man" of Vermont baseball. Only two veterans were on the list at the start of the season and both of these were outfielders. Coach Gardner changed Captain Cal Macomber into a backstop and built up an entirely new twirling staff and infield. The infield was a 100 per cent freshman affair and all will return. Eddie Winant at first, Pie Traynor at second, Orrie Jay, shortstop, and Dutchy McKay, third. Another yearling on the club was Chief Rutkowski, a southpaw hurler, who won several games for the Cats.

Captain Cal Macomber, catcher, Jimmy Kendricks, southpaw pitcher, Nell Woods, right hand hurler, and Burt Morse, outfielder, are the members of the team lost by graduation. Besides coming material from next season's freshman class, Larry will have the services of Lefty Cummings, southpaw hurling ace, and a heavy hitter, who was ineligible this season. Captain Howard and Dinny Dinniman are returning outfielders while Wally Sargent, the old reliable, and Lefty McBride, a twirler, will all come back.

BLUESTOCKINGS DISCUSS A. A. MILNE AT MEETING

Bluestockings held its last meeting of the year shortly before final examinations at the Theta House. There was a general discussion of A. A. Milne's writings with particular emphasis paid to his poems. Selections from "When We Were Very Young" were read. Following this discussion plans for next year's program were talked over. Refreshments of punch and cookies were served. Constans Holden, '29, was in charge of the refreshments.

PHI BETA KAPPA PICKS FIFTEEN NEW MEMBERS

Vermont Alpha of Phi Beta Kappa announced last Saturday the election of fifteen new members of the society. Four of these were chosen last March. Their names follow: Dorothy Claflin of Burlington, Gladys Ruth Gleaser Kone of Hartford, Conn., Alice Rose Miller of Morrisville, Charles Hayes Overly of Burlington, Bruce Edson Palmer of Waterbury, Donald Everson Palmer of Burlington, Wilmond Warner Parker of Bethel, Minerva Eliza Risdon of Danby, Dorothy Edith Wheatley of Brooklyn, N. Y., Irene Orella Witkus of Newport, N. H.

In addition to these elected at last Friday's meeting who were initiated Saturday, there are four other members of Phi Beta Kappa from the class of 1929, these having been elected at the meeting in March. They are Laurence Golden Cowles of Burlington, Margaret Agnes Durick of Fair Haven, Simon Gabriel Hanson of Winooski and Genevieve Perley Hook of Burlington. Also John G. Medlar, who died on February 2, last, was elected to membership post obitum at the meeting in March, and was initiated.

At the Phi Beta Kappa meeting, a nominating committee consisting of Professor A. B. Myrick, Miss Mary Bates and Professor L. W. Dean was appointed for the proposal of officers for the coming year.

The members voted to hold the annual mid-winter initiation on December 5 instead of the present date, which will make it a little earlier. One reason for this is because December 5 is the date of the founding of the society. It would also permit undergraduates to be members of the society for a longer period. Only a very small number of the highest ranking students are admitted to the society at this mid-winter initiation.

It was the sentiment of the meeting that a larger proportion of candidates should be admitted at this time.

MR. AND MRS. SMALLEY RECEIVE STUDENT GIFT

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Smalley, University of Vermont '21, who have been working as missionaries in the Belgian Congo for the past five years, were in Burlington Wednesday, June 12, to meet a group of students from the Christian Association and receive the money collected during the Smalley campaign which amounted to $400.

Harvey Butterfield, president of the "Y," presented the gift. Merle Duval acted as chairman of the Smalley campaign. Mr. Duval is vice-president of the "Y" for 1929.

Mr. Smalley explained very carefully the use to which this money is to be put. It is to be used in an agricultural project in the school where the Smalleys have been working for the past five years, which is located in the Belgian Congo, and connected directly with the work of the Methodist Foreign Missions.

HENRY POWELL HEADS GREEK HONOR SOCIETY

At the last meeting of Eta Sigma Phi the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Henry Powell, '30; vice-president, Virginia Goodenough, '31; secretary, Hazel Ladd, '30; treasurer, Charles Knapp, '31; door tender, A. A. Maislen, '31; reporter, Harriett Howard, '30; song leader, Joyce Richardson, '30.

The meeting was held at the home of Professor and Mrs. Kidder. The last book of the Iliad was read.

JUDGE STAFFORD GIVES COMMENCEMENT SPEECH

The University awarded degrees to the graduates of the various courses as follows: Bachelors of Science in Agriculture, 8, Bachelors of Science in Home Economics 11, Bachelors of Science in Electrical Engineering, 14, Bachelors of Science in Mechanical Engineering, 24, Bachelors of Science in Chemistry, 5, Bachelors of Science in Commerce and Economics, [illegible], Bachelors of Science in Ed[illegible], 1, Bachelors of Science, 39, [illegible] Philosophy, 35, Bachelors of Arts, 14. There were 30 graduates of the College of Medicine.

Judge Stafford the Speaker

The address of the day was given by Wendell Phillips Stafford, of St. Johnsbury and Washington, D. C., for the past 25 years associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on the subject "The Conquering Ideal." His address was very popular with the large audience of some 1,200 people, who interrupted with applause on several occasions. The address will be found practically in full in another column.

Four Receive Honorary Degrees

Justice Stafford was one of the four to receive honorary degrees from the University. The other three were Arthur Edward Pope of New York, George Edson Philip Smith of Tucson, Arizona, and the Rev. Allan Pearson Shatford of Montreal, P. Q., the baccalaureate speaker and chaplain of the commencement exercises.

President Guy W. Bailey of the University awarded the honorary degrees, the candidates being presented by Professor Samuel E. Bassett, head of the Department of Greek, as follows:

For the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Wendell Phillips Stafford, son of Vermont; jurist, idealizing the profession in which he has become eminent; poet, singing now to the Dorian lyre, and now the sweet songs our pines intone, orator, adding new lustre to the great name he bears, finding in many a human theme some spark of the divine, and by the power of his lips sending that spark to kindle in the minds of his responsive listeners. As he himself has said of another illustrious native of the Green Mountain state: "You are worthy of Vermont, and Vermont is proud of her son."

For the degree of Doctor of Divinity, Allan Pearson Shatford, native of Nova Scotia; graduate of King's College, Windsor; a man both of deeds and of words, distinguished alike on the battlefield and in church, in governing bodies of higher institutions of learning, in civic brotherhoods and in larger movements for the advancement of righteousness, preacher, gladly heard; his winged words have borne from his own land to ours many messages of friendship, which have wrought intangible filaments to link the two sister countries more closely together in the bonds of the spirit.

For the degree of Electrical Engineer, Arthur Edward Pope, native of Vermont, graduate of the college of engineering of this university, whose best traditions he has upheld in the field of applied electrical science; influential officer of a great electrical company; his scientific knowledge and his business ability have produced notable results in mastering the power of nature for the economic good of society and for the material upbuilding of New England.

For the degree of Doctor of Engineering, George Edson Philip Smith, native of Vermont, graduate of the college of engineering and at one time member of its faculty; in him the pioneering spirit of Vermont has found a wide opportunity for service in the arid southwest. By formulating and solving important problems of irrigation, and by securing the application of these solutions through his writings and his personal influence

Judge Stafford Addresses Graduates On Subject of the Conquering Ideal

Speaking with the stirring oratory for which he is noted, Wendell Phillips Stafford, of St. Johnsbury and Washington, D. C., for twenty-five years associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, brought to an audience of more than 1,200 people attending the Commencement exercises of the University of Vermont in the gymnasium annex yesterday morning the message that not beauty and idealism alone, but "the consummate union of beauty and strength is the conquering ideal in letters and in art."

"Our test is as true for nations as it is for men," said Justice Stafford. "There is no beauty without strength. What is a nation good for if it has no backbone? And what is that but its constitution and its laws? And what is law good for unless it is obeyed?" (Applause.)

"Did you ever hear of a great nation that did not keep the law? Sparta had a law that no soldier of hers should ever retreat a step—let him bring home his shield or else be brought upon it. At Thermopylæ all the other Greeks had a right to run away, and they lost no time in doing it. The 300 Spartans died where they stood. It may have been a foolish law. The rest of the world thought so. But the rest of the world has thrilled, from that day to this, over the inscription on their tomb: 'Stranger, go tell the Spartans that we lie here obedient to their laws.' (Applause.)

"Is American law something less solemn and august?—the formulated will of a hundred millions of free men. We may cover the land with cars, and fill the sky with planes; we may build palaces and plant gardens from Casco Bay to the Golden Gate, but if we lose the binding strength of that idea we shall go to pieces like a rope of sand."

Justice Stafford opened his address yesterday with a well-worded tribute to the beauties of Vermont in general and Burlington in particular. He said:

"We are happy in our meeting-place, and happy in the time of our meeting. It is June. It is Vermont. Is not that enough? If not, I am ready to go a step further and say, it is the loveliest place in Vermont.

"From the top of the hill behind us we look out upon a land fair as the vale of Lacedaemon, the Spartan Hollow of old Homer's song, and touched by the glamor of memories not less heroic. Meadow and valley stretch away in smiling repose while above them Mansfield and Couchant Lion keep everlasting guard.

"Yes, this is Vermont. Here even the stranger might stand and pluck out the heart of her mystery, winsome beauty united to indomitable strength.

"But we children of the Green Mountain State have yet another reason to be happy. We are here at the bidding of a University that bears the name, cherishes the tradition, and perpetuates the character of Vermont. We are invited to say something that possibly may be remembered by those who stand this morning with eager faces on the alluring threshold of the world.

"We need not cast about us for a subject; our theme is thrust upon us by the place, the presence and the hour. Beauty without strength is enervating; strength without beauty is forbidding; but from the glad embrace of strength and beauty spring all the godlike children of art, of letters and of life."

Strength Must Aid Beauty

"You have heard it said, 'beauty is only skin deep.' It is a smart saying, but smart sayings are apt to be untrue. Beauty is not superficial, it is structural. There is no shape of beauty that has not its backbone, not even a rainbow or a bubble. 'What do you mix your colors with?' asked the dilettante. 'With brains, sir!' was the master's reply.

"Is the painter a colorist merely, or must he know how to draw as well as paint? Must not a sculptor know anatomy? Why, you can study anatomy in the sculptures of Michael Angelo. Music has been called the most sensuous of the arts; but is any art more closely allied to mathematics? Is there any art wherein the artist must be more careful to keep to the narrow path? Will not the slightest step aside bring him to discord?

"Do you think a great speech is a series of rhetorical sentences arranged like beads upon a string? Must not a speech have a beginning, a middle and an end—especially an end? Will not even a sermon be ruined if the end is too far from the beginning? And last of all, a poem, a real poem, do you think it has no such thing as a backbone? The Greeks knew a little about poetry, and they thought a great poetical work had something that might be called structure."

Great Poets Must Be Strong

The speaker went on to develop the theme that the writing of great poetry or great drama is hard work and requires endurance and strength, real masculinity, that is misleading to associate poetry with the effeminate.

In this connection he discussed the "melodies of Swinburne" and the "magical expression of Keats." He said, "Milton is an awful precipice overrun with luxuriant vines," and declared, in speaking of Dante, "no work of poetic art was ever conceived and brought forth with such large design, with such firmness and sureness to the last detail, as the Divine Comedy."

"If you have thought of poetry as a schoolgirl's recreation," said Justice Stafford, "you might try your sinews on that stupendous work which Dante told us 'for many years had kept him lean.' He said he was singing for ten silent centuries. His song gives you the world as the middle ages knew it. Hell, purgatory, heaven—they are there too; and the poet made the most of his opportunity to put his enemies in the proper place. The Inferno must have been a fairly complete 'Who's Who in Hell for A. D. 1300.'"

The Drudgery of Greatness

"Milton believed that no man should attempt to write of heroic things without being himself heroic," said Justice Stafford. "And so he turned away from Italy and went back to England to take whatever part he might in the battle that was coming on, upon the side that he believed was God's.

"Italy with all her sorceries of land and sea and sky, of history and art and letters, could not hold him. He went back to his studies; went back to those long nights when he outwatched the Bear, and to those winter mornings when, as he has told us: 'Before the sound of any bell woke men to labor or devotion,' he rose and began his arduous day, with no fire except the fire of his great purpose to warm his blood. That admonition Milton gave has been echoed by the most eminent jurist of our time, who said: 'To think great thoughts you must be heroes as well as idealists.'

"In every calling in life it is the same. The law is a Spartan mistress, hard indeed, and jealous enough, yet not without a certain high and austere beauty of her own. I can remember when I thought a lawyer was a man who spent his time making fine speeches in a court. I have hung about the court house in one capacity or another for nearly half a century and I have concluded that, whatever a lawyer may be, the lawyer is a man who gives his days and nights to drudgery no one else is willing to submit to, in order that when the hour of doubt and difficulty comes he may have a sensible word to offer when no one else knows what to say. His whole life is hiving up knowledge, acquiring skill, training, disciplining, chastening every faculty to unwavering obedience. He has cast off every impediment, like the Lacedaemonian youth in the footrace at Olympia who in the final dash threw behind him the heavy girdle, and ran naked to the goal."

The Dream of a Messiah

"Our theme demands a deeper look into life itself. We must call for witness a greater race than any we have cited; I mean of course the Hebrew. Israel's ideal, to begin with, was a God of strength. Jehovah was a man of war. Earth shook at his coming. The mountains flowed down at his presence. Pagan poetry has nothing to match the terror and sublimity of that conception. But out of that awful and forbidding background emerged from age to age another ideal, the most ravishing that ever visited the children of men, Israel's dream of a Messiah.

"The Hebrew turned his back on painting and sculpture and seductive handmaids to that idolatry his soul abhorred. Perhaps because his rich, productive mind was so restrained it burgeoned forth with unexampled beauty in the spiritual world. It was moral beauty that cast on Israel its spell. The images of glory and splendor that flew across his dream soared above the loftiest embodiments of heathen art as high as the heavens are above the earth; and they culminated, all in the transcendent vision of the Anointed One, whose Kingdom was to have no end.

"That is the majestic presence that haunts all Hebrew history and makes it all poetic. It went with Israel into every exile. It was with him in the fiery furnace of every persecution. It moved beside him in the chain gang of Pharaoh. It stood by him in the palace of the Great King. It sat with him in the filth of every ghetto.

"Prophet after prophet caught the glow as mountain peak after mountain peak catches the splendor of the

he has helped to pour the floods on the dry ground and make the desert like the garden of the Lord.

Exercises Start at 10

The processional for the Commencement Exercises formed on University Place between 9 and 10 o'clock and marched into the gymnasium annex shortly after 10 o'clock, led by President Guy W. Bailey, the deans of the colleges and trustees. Music for the processional and for the exercises was furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Harold A. Haylett.

On the platform with President Bailey during the exercises were the deans of all the colleges of the University, George H. Perkins of the College of Arts and Sciences, J. L. Hills of the College of Agriculture, J. W. Votey of the College of Engineering and J. N. Jenne of the College of Medicine, also Miss Marian Patterson, dean of women; members of the Board of Trustees, the men who were to receive honorary degrees, Professor Howard G. Bennett, director of music, Commissioner of Education Clarence H. Dempsey, Colonel F. F. Black, professor of Military Science and Tactics, Dr. C. S. Ferrin, class of 1865, one of the oldest alumni; Dr. David Marvin, chief marshal, and Prof. Samuel E. Bassett, who presented the candidates for the honorary degrees.

Following music by the orchestra, Canon Shatford offered prayer, following which President Bailey presented the speaker of the day, Justice Wendell P. Stafford. Justice Stafford spoke impressively for about half an hour, holding the close attention of his audience. Several of his witty remarks brought ripples of laughter, while several times the approval of the audience was expressed in applause, particularly when he stressed the importance of obedience to law as a fundamental of a great nation.

Black Gives Commissions

At the close of the address, "America" was sung and the degrees were awarded. Colonel Frederick F. Black administered the oath and presented commissions to the members of the Department of Military Science and Tactics.

Commissioner Dempsey of the State Department of Education presented the diplomas to the graduates of the two-year teacher training course.

President Bailey conferred the degrees in course and announced the awards of prizes and honors. The names of the candidates for degrees were read by Dr. David Marvin, chief marshal. Following the award of degrees came the singing of "Champlain" and the benediction of Canon Shatford.

Warren R. Austin, '99, was marshal of trustees; Prof. George G. Groat, marshal of the faculties; Charles F. Black, '07, marshal of alumni; Eugene W. Knapp, '29, and Claire G. Cayward, '29, M class marshals.

Bailey Announces Honors

President Bailey announced the following list of those receiving high honors in their college work:

Canon Allan P. Shatford Delivers Pleasing Baccalaureate Serm

Likening the closing of the universities throughout the country each June and the sending out of graduating classes to the breaking up of the eagle's nest so that the young eaglets will be compelled to take care of themselves, the Rev. Canon Allan P. Shatford, minister of the Church of St. James the Apostle, Montreal, Can., in the baccalaureate sermon at the Ira Allen Chapel Sunday afternoon urged the graduates to go out with determination to tackle the great adventure and to persevere toward a definite goal.

Canon Shatford took his text from Deuteronomy, 32nd chapter, 11th and 12th verses: "As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings: so the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him."

The Brood of the Eagle

"You are in more senses than one the brood of the eagle," the speaker told the members of the graduating class. He pointed out that the University of Vermont is in a sense a State institution and as such it is a part of the United States, whose national bird is the eagle. And so, at this season of the year the University with many others throughout the country, breaks up and sends forth its students to become citizens.

Pointing out that the eagle destroys the nest and thus compels the young eaglets to fly, Canon Shatford declared: "There is nothing so much to be feared in life as the status quo. It is a law of nature that there must be removal from one condition to another to prevent stagnation."

Thus God, finding the Children of Israel in a state of practical stagnation in Egypt, drove them out, shattering their nests of safety and compelling them to seek uncertainty in the wilderness.

Thus has God shattered the nests of the nations through the ages, Canon Shatford declared, in order to break up their self-satisfaction with their condition and compel them to make progress.

"We are continually needing to be shattered out of our grooves and our ruts, for grooves are nothing more than graves with the ends knocked out, and ruts are merely rot."

Just as perpetual sunshine or perpetual rain would be fatal to man, so life cannot continue to exist without continual change, without casting off old conditions and seeking adventure in the unknown.

Need Adventurous Spirit

"There never was a time when we needed the adventurous spirit so much as at present," Canon Shatford declared. "We need those who will not be satisfied with things as they are."

Speaking of the things which contribute to success in any undertaking of life, Canon Shatford said: "Everything depends upon the consciousness of your position. If back of you there is the consciousness of a divine mission, you can accomplish anything. You must go on believing that God has a place for you in his purpose."

The speaker told the members of the graduating class that the problems which they would have to face after leaving college would not be easy ones, but that they were worth the tackling, and the prizes to be obtained worth the winning. Life is a real challenge, he declared.

Reassurance of Sustaining Strength

Just as the mother eagle swoops underneath the young fledgling and bears it up with her strong wings when it is exhausted and falte there will be always a Sust Strength ready to bear up the fa one when he has given his be weakens.

Qualities of the Eagle

Canon Shatford recommend the graduates the qualities eagle, namely vision, love of fr leadership, endurance.

The eagle is a symbol of visi in church art it is a symbol of tion, of the spiritual values.

In speaking of the quality dom, Canon Shatford mention importance of freedom of tho well as of action. He warned partisanship which breeds mi standings and hatred. He urg the United States and Canada hands in a common bond for ity. He mentioned the Kello the Dawes plan, the Young repa settlement as indications th United States, though not a of the League of Nations, is hard for peace and goodwill nations.

The eagle is the leader of th feathered tribe, said Canon S The world needs leadership of the colleges and universities country can produce. "We loo to be eager leaders," he told th people of his audience.

The endurance of the eagle known and worth emulating, s on Shatford. Just as the eagl to endure long nights without ing, so young college men and must go forth to their work determination to tackle hard stick to them, not failing in m The speaker pointed out that are none too promising regar success of college men and w life, but the difficulty is o lack of perseverance in well-

"It's no easy task that is you," he declared, and added not need self-starters so much stayers." Most men get st right, but somewhere along they "get stalled in the sand-

Courage and strength are to make a long flight, sai Shatford, and in closing he young hearers to go forth wit to begin the great adventure make a long and sturdy flight greater area of the larger li

OLD TIMERS PROVE THEIR SUPERIORITY

All-star Aggregation Returns and Takes Varsity's Number, 5 to 3—Eight of 1928 Team Play

YOUNGSTERS RALLY IN NINTH BUT TOO LATE

The varsity dropped the final game of the season last Saturday, when the Alumni took them out, 5-3. It was some ball game to watch with the old timers biting hungrily at that ball and crashing out a veritable barrage of base hits although some fine chasing by the varsity pasture guardians held the tally down. And the game was not over until the last ball had been hurled, for the present varsity started a closing rally which scored two runs and had the tying runs on the bag before the old timers, with the aid of the fire department, retired the side. The varsity had two great ball teams on the field and Doc Beecher started his Notre Dame team, with most of the old '23 aggregation in action and then he shifted to the ponies with last year's infield and batterymen working. Big Chief Fogg held the varsity to one puny bingle in his five frames on the mound. Captain Cal Macomber who is playing his last game after four years of athletics on the Hill made it a memorable occasion with three solid smacks out of five trips, one the only hit that Fogg allowed.

The alumni went after the game at the start but had a tough break in the first frame when three solid smashes and a sacrifice failed to net a run. Conlin picked the first one and shoved it in to short center for a crack. Nels Duba sacrificed. Ed. McInnis pasted a beauty to right and Morse's pretty throw held Conlin from scoring. Newton pasted out a safe hit but the ball struck McInnis forcing him out and according to the ruling, Conlin had to return to third.

Finally in the fourth round, the old war horses landed on Sargent. Billy Cogswell and Bill Burns each pasted successive doubles. Conlin crashed out a single and stole second. Conlin scored on Duba's single to center. The varsity connected once in the sixth. Macomber pasted his second hit to right. Morse fanned, but McKay and Howard singled in succession, Cal scoring.

The old timers garnered another one when Doc Newton singled but was forced by Morse. Morse was safe on first on the play. Bill Burns cracked another one sending Morse to third and Morse scored on a passed ball. The final alumni tally came in the eighth. Bunny Prentice got his clout and went to second. Tom Hayes jumped up and yelled for Bunny to pilfer third and he did. Then Billy Cogswell pasted his second double to center to score Prentice.

The varsity made a wild stab in the ninth which almost gave Doc Beecher heart failure. Jay was out, Smith to Prentice, and the stands got right up and howled at the way Snicker made that play on a seemingly safe hit. Traynor was safe on Conway's error. Eddie Winant in his last time at bat for the season ordered his specialty, a triple to right scoring Traynor. Cal Macomber wound up his great college career with a smashing double to center which scored Eddie. McKay was hit by a pitched ball and with the tying runs on base, Bill Randall flew in to snare Howard's drive and put an end to the pastime. The score:

CAPTAIN K. L. BERRY TO COACH FROSH FOOTBALL

Comes to Vermont With Impressive Record as Military Man, Athlete and Leader

The Athletic Council is glad to announce the selection of Capt. K. L. Berry, Inf. U. S. Army, succeeding Lieut. Fredericks on the faculty of the Military Department of the University, as Head Coach of the 1933 Freshman football team. Capt. Berry is a graduate of the University of Texas where he participated in three major sports—basketball, football and track—and in addition was intercollegiate champion heavyweight wrestler of the Southwest.

For the past three years he has been football coach at the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga. At present he is a member of the All-Army Rifle Team which is now engaged in firing in the national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio. During the World War he was a member of the A. E. F. in Russia and Siberia. He brings with him a wealth of knowledge in the handling of men and should prove an inspiring leader to those who have the good fortune to come in contact with him. Vermont gains an invaluable asset in a man of Capt. Berry's calibre and eagerly awaits his arrival on the Hill.

COACH RATTAN SHY ON VARSITY GRID MATERIAL

Captain "Bump" Levine, Star Center, Only Veteran Sure of Position in Fall

At the close of the first season of spring football practice Coach Rattan states that it was a success and will be continued in future years. At the spring practice sessions the freshmen turned out in large numbers and many of them should develop into excellent varsity material. At present, however, a good many of the football men are under warning and it remains to be seen if they crash through in exams or not. Notwithstanding the loss of ten letter men by graduation if all the men who are under warning come out chances for a strong team in the fall will be good.

In spring practice some freshmen who showed up well are Pelofsky, Bowers, Bedell, Manning, Winant, Leonard, Collins, Jay, and Brown. Some of these men should be sure of varsity jobs next year. "Larry" Bowers did some of the prettiest work at tackle on the freshman team last fall and Pelofsky at guard is another sure bet.

Some of the men expected to return from last year's team will be Capt. Levine, Halligan, DeRose, Gourson, Dorey, Park, DeWitt, Segal, Scutakes, Huey, Mace, Burstein and Sirois. At present there seems to be no one to do the booting. A good fullback is needed as much as anything else and the best man for that post seems to be "Ed" Gourson. Capt. "Bumps" Levine will undoubtedly hold his position at center again next year. There are a good many candidates out for the other positions and it is hard to guess how Coach Rattan will allot the positions.

Coach Rattan says it is hard to say how the team will make out until we see how many stay in college. It will take all the men he has out to fill the gaps left by graduation. But with good luck and a lot of hard gridiron work next fall Rattan looks forward to turning out a real good outfit.

CAT'S MEOW

—SPORTING EDITOR—

At the end of the athletic year, in retrospect—Middlebury has won the basketball, track, hockey and tennis championships of the Green Mountain Conference; Norwich was conceded football, and Vermont, with a green team, clinched the cherished baseball title.

Coach "Larry" Gardner has relieved the minds of his numerous followers by signing a two-year contract to nurse his baseball team from its present inexperienced state to an outfit which we expect will be stopped only by the end of the season.

In the 14-inning Tufts game each team had the contest sewed up about three times but bad baseball by both outfits kept the score tied. It looked as if neither team was in a hurry to win. Finally Stanley, the third Medford twirler, got hungry and ended the game by walking Sargent to force in the winning tally.

At that time Sargent had three and two at bat and picked out an "ankle ball" to swing at. Luckily he barely hit it foul. Stanley thought he'd bite again so he repeated but Sargent fooled him. Result—one good ball game won.

Weston was here for revenge in the Boston College game. Last year Schoppe's slow ball benched him three times. This year the giant first-sacker made sure he wasn't "gipped." His homer went all the way to the football bleachers in centre field in the air. "Al" was past second base when the horsehide hit the dirt. It was probably the longest smash ever seen at Centennial Field.

Capt. Tupper of the Frosh tennis team is a clever player and has displayed enough ability to assure him of a varsity berth next year. He should be a consistent winner.

The freshmen didn't win a tennis match. Ties with Cathedral and Burlington High Schools were the best they could do. Their one defeat was at the hands of Burlington.

Three more months will bring out the football players. Captain K. L. Berry will have charge of the frosh. He has a niche in the U. of Texas hall of fame. Captain W. V. Rattan and George C. Tully will be back with the varsity.

Football camp and training table will start a short time before enrollment week. The squad must get an early start to be prepared to tackle New York U. September 28.

VARSITY TENNIS SQUAD WINS TWO, TIES TWO

Under the leadership of "Barney" Shedd the Vermont tennis team closed its season by tying New York State College on May 28. Considering the facilities and inexperienced material at hand the team completed a fairly satisfactory season. Numbering as its only victim St. Michael's, Vermont tied Middlebury and in turn lost to Middlebury, Rensselaer, and Worcester Tech.

Next year's team promises to be one of the best with only two veterans graduating—Shedd and Pouch. The remainder of the team remains intact with Borkland, Macomber and Goddard of this year's team. There are several likely prospects including Tupper and Holbrook of the frosh team. Tupper, in particular, seems to be made of varsity stuff and should provide the veterans with some tough competition. A likely-looking squad seems in the making and ought to provide its opponents with plenty of opposition.

The season's record:

Vermont	2—Middlebury	4
	0—Rensselaer	6
	3—Middlebury	3
	5—St. Michael's	1
	5—St. Michael's	1
	1—Worcester Tech	5
	3—New York State	3

GODDARD BEATEN—STATE CROWN TO WOODBURY

In the State Collegiate Tennis Tourney held at Middlebury May 30 Ralph Woodbury of Middlebury defeated Phil Goddard of Vermont in the final match to win the singles crown. Woodbury won the first set with ease, 6-1, but in the second set Goddard raised the hopes of the Green and Gold by winning 6-3. The third and last set went to Woodbury 6-2.

The summary: First round—Woodbury (M) defeated Shedd (V) 10-8, 6-1. Goddard (V) defeated Lun (M) 6-3, 6-1. Second round—Woodbury (M) defeated Caron (St. M.) 6-2, 6-1. Goddard (V) defeated Dooley (St. M.) 6-3, 7-5. Final—Woodbury (M) defeated Goddard (V) 6-1, 3-6, 6-2.

CONFERENCE MEET ENDED TRACK SEASON FOR CATS

Captain Lyman and Mackay Display Ability in Field—One Victory, Two Defeats, Third in State Meet is Record

Vermont was not very successful on the track this year but that was rather to be expected on account of lack of material and ineligibility of last year's star versatile athlete, "Freddy" Robbins.

However the Green and Gold has some material which should develop for another year.

The Catamounts started out on the wrong foot when they were severely beaten by the trackmen from Union. The Garnet was easily superior to the Vermonters, and had little trouble taking the meet by the overwhelming score of 90⅛ to 55⅝. The Cats' greatest weakness was in the running events in which they failed to take a single first place. The Green and Gold fared much better in the field events. In the shot put Kropper took a first, Nellie Wood captured a first in the discus, and Mackay took second. Lyman won a first in the broad jump.

In the next meet, with the Mass. Aggies, Vermont won its only contest by a 69 to 66 score. The Green and Gold made a beautiful start when they took two firsts, a second and two thirds in the running events. As before, the Catamounts were decidedly weak on the cinder path and they were saved by their excellence in the weight events. Berry, of Vermont, took first place in both the 100-yard dash and the 220-yard dash. Kropper also had two firsts to his credit. In this meet Mackay was high point man.

The Cats received their second defeat of the season when they met the Montreal A. A. A. Once again the Green and Gold was defeated by its weakness in the track events. However, the Cats were so strong in the field events that the Canadians didn't have a look-in there. Mackay starred for the Green and Gold when he captured three first places, one in the javelin, one in the discus, and one in the hammer throw. Kropper had a first in the shot and a second in the discus.

The Vermonters were again conquered in the Green Mountain Conference track meet when they came in third with 25 points. Norwich was runner up to the Panthers with 42 points, and Middlebury was on top of the heap with 68 points. There was some beautiful work done on the field that day with three of the state records broken. Baldy Whitten of Vermont lost his title in the pole vault when Paul of Middlebury vaulted 11 feet 7 inches. Houghton of Norwich broke Sonny Simpson's record when he hurled the javelin 167 feet 9 inches. Hilton of Middlebury broke O. T. Wood's record for the two-mile run when he did the grind in 10.04⅘.

Vermont's only firsts were by Childs who tied the broad jump record and by Mackay in the hammer. Francheschi, Kropper, and Captain Lyman took seconds.

Throughout the season Captain Lyman and Mackay were the dependables who could be banked on to come through with several points.

ST. LAWRENCE AND RAIN DEFEAT VERMONT 5-3

Ten Safe Hits Coupled With Two Timely Double Plays Give Canton Boys Victory on Larry Gardner Day

St. Lawrence beat Vermont 5-3 at Centennial Field last Friday afternoon and the weatherman combined with the result to disappoint the crowd which attended the feat as Larry Gardner day. It rained just prior to the game and cut down the attendance figures greatly while in the last half of the ninth with a chance to tie or win the ball game, rain again cut short the exhibition. Jimmy Kendrick got some tough breaks but at that the Cantonese were clouting them and landed on Vermont's southpaw for ten safe bingles. Vermont collected six off Scully.

To start proceedings Caldwell pasted a double. Eckhart flied to McKay and O'Brien picked a safe one. O'Brien started for second and Kendrick started to corner him. Caldwell raced home and Jimmy's throw was in the dirt allowing Caldwell to score and O'Brien to take third. Tenney sacrificed, scoring O'Brien.

In Vermont's half of the same inning, the first two batters went out in order and then the Cats sprang a surprising burst of fireworks when Winant, Macomber and McKay clouted successive doubles to tally two runs and tie the count. The visitors got an easy tally in the second. Killeen was safe on McKay's error, Heister bunted, Kendrick slipped and threw wild, and the runners advanced to second and third respectively. Ketchum drove a long sacrifice fly to Morse, scoring Killeen.

St. Lawrence made it 5-2 in the sixth. Scully basted a savage liner over short. Killeen bunted safely, Heister sacrificed and both runners came home on Ketchum's screeching drive to right. Orrie Jay ended the frame with a neat double play, taking Strickland's hopper and touching second, then throwing to Winant to complete the twin killing.

Vermont made a desperate rally in the eighth. Jay walked, Pie Traynor tripled to right, scoring Jay, but died on third as Winant was thrown out by Tenney and Macomber by Caldwell. Morse walked and pilfered second but McKay popped to Caldwell.

In the ninth, Howard flied out to O'Brien, O'Brien walked Ruthowski who was hitting for Dinniman. Wood hit for Kendricks but with the count two and two, the downpour precluded further activity. The box score:

WILBUR WILLED GREAT FUND TO UNIVERSITY

That the late James B. Wilbur, retired Chicago banker, and summer resident of Manchester, Vt., for some years, had created a big trust fund the greater share of which ultimately will go to the University of Vermont, became known with the notification to the Vermont Historical Society that it had been named in the trust as beneficiary to the extent of $100,000.

The paragraph in which Mr. Wilbur sets forth the conditions which the university must accept, are as follows:

"The University of Vermont Trust, hereinabove referred to shall not be created unless the Legislature of Vermont pass a law limiting the number of students attending the University of Vermont in any one year to one thousand, and no students from outside of the State to be admitted until after native born Vermont students, who apply and qualify, are admitted, or the Trustees of the University of Vermont, if they have authority to do so, pass a similar resolution. This number of one thousand may be added to at the rate of two hundred and fifty for every one hundred thousand increase in the number of inhabitants of the State over the United States census taken in 1920, as determined by the best available information obtainable in the State of Vermont."

JUNIOR VARSITY WINDS UP ITS BASEBALL GAMES

Dinniman's Promotion to Varsity and Cummings' Twirling Feature Season—"Doc" Newton Turns Out Good Team as Coach

With a 4 to 0 defeat May 25 by Jeffersonville the junior varsity baseball nine ended its season. Three games were played with one victory and two defeats. The victory was over the medics by the score of 1 to 0 and was notable in that previously the same medic team had beaten the varsity by the score of 7 to 2. "Lefty" Cummings was on the mound for the Jay Vees and it was chiefly his pitching that accounted for the medics' poor showing. In this game he struck out 14 of the doctors, allowed only four hits, and did not issue a single free trip. He is a transfer from Syracuse University and due to transfer rulings was ineligible for the varsity this year. Next season he will be the star pitcher for Vermont. The medic game was seven innings by agreement and it was not until in the final stanza that Kendall scored on Wetherell's single with the only run of the game to give the juniors a 1 to 0 victory in their initial start of the season on Centennial Field.

In the next game, however, the Vermonters looked like a different team with Pfenning in the box and were defeated by the Queen City Cotton Company's outfit by the score of 8 to 6. Wetherell, freshman infielder, led the batting attack of the Jay Vees with three hits out of five trips to the plate.

Last Saturday the junior varsity journeyed to Jeffersonville and was defeated by the nine there by the score of 4 to 0 with Stevenson pitching for the Jay Vees. After the home team had scored their runs Cummings pitched for Vermont and held the winners scoreless for the rest of the game. This officially ended the season for Coach Newton's charges.

Dinniman, who started with the Jay Vees, has already become a varsity regular. None of the regular players this year will be lost by graduation. Proctor, third baseman; Wetherell, second baseman; Grant, left fielder; Stroh, Kendall and Bowers, catchers; Stevenson and Pfenning, pitchers; Heaton, shortstop; Carrigan, right fielder, are others who will be out for varsity next spring.

"Doc" Newton, coach, taught the boys a lot of baseball and many are prepared to bid for positions on "Larry" Gardner's Catamount aggregation.

One of Professor Tupper's most cherished pictures has disappeared from 3 North College, the English room. This picture is a photograph of the portrait of Sir Walter Scott which hangs in the National Portrait Gallery in London. Professor Tupper bought it in London eight years ago while on his sabbatical leave. Information regarding its whereabouts would be appreciated by the English department.

"I saw the doctor about my loss of memory."

"What did he do for it?"

"Nothing yet. He wants his pay in advance before he starts treatment."

GROWING INTEREST IN COMMERCIAL AVIATION

Wing loading, dihedral and gliding angle are becoming stock terms among technically-inclined college students as a result of growing interest in commercial aeronautics.

Thousands of students now discuss the merits and advantages of various types and makes of aircraft as formerly they compared popular automobiles. It is a sign of the times.

The extent of this aeronautical knowledge on the campus was a revelation to the judges of the Alexander Eaglerock Awards, a scholarship program sponsored this spring by one of the country's leading light plane manufacturers. In papers submitted to the committee, airplanes were discussed intelligently from both engineering and operation standpoints.

Many students revealed a surprised grasp of aerodynamic fundamentals. Others showed insight into the present situation in the industry, and indulged in much practical speculation as to its future.

According to officials of the company, the contest committee is swamped with manuscripts. The competition closes May 31 and the winners of the $1,000 aeronautical scholarship in New York University and the Eaglerock airplane will be announced by the Committees on Awards as soon as papers can be judged.

RESEARCH CLUB HEARS SPEAKERS AND ELECTS

At a meeting of the Research Club held Tuesday evening at Morrill Hall the following officers were elected for the next year: President, J. I. Lindsay; vice-president, F. K. Jackson; secretary-treasurer, E. W. Jenkins.

Preceding the election various members gave interesting speeches on some of their research work.

F. W. Weitzmann, "The English Elegy."

J. M. Kelly, "Quietism in the Seventeenth Century in Bossuet and Fenelon."

L. S. Hartwell, "Actual Political Problems in Mexico."

Juanita Witters, "Electrical Properties of Molybdonites."

W. H. Behney, "Certain Characteristics of Algae."

Other speakers were: W. H. Sears of the Mathematics Department, S. W. Francis of the English Department, and Miss Lois Burbank of the Art History.

Class Day Program Disturbed by Rain

iors. The racy sketch touched with bright colors the outstanding events in the four-year life of the class, its elections, social functions, banquets, the deeds of its heroes—and heroines—on the athletic field, in the class room, on the debating platform, in dramatics, not forgetting their escapades and the strenuous days of the flood.

Bertel W. Gustafson portrayed in the Campus oration the spirit of the Green and Gold as manifest in the lives of alumni, expressing the hope that the Class of 1929 might carry on the same traditions and spirit.

Corbin C. Lyman, speaking for the Boulder Society, told of the history of its symbol, the U. V. M. Boulder, and described the society's ideals and functions, urging its members of the future to profit by the mistakes of the past and make of it an organization for greater service to the University.

The seniors lighted their class pipes. Through the smoke cloud mounting upward came the voice of Noble L. Page.

Margaret B. Corbin gave the class poem, always one of the most interesting features of the program.

Francis F. O'Keefe, giving the address to undergraduates, spoke of the fight and will to win of the University baseball team in its recent game against Tufts and of the enthusiasm displayed not only by the team but by the spectators, using the incident as an illustration of the spirit that should permeate a student body.

The planting of the class ivy beneath the class numerals on some building of the campus is one of the customs of the senior class at commencement time. This year the class selected the northwest corner of the Old Mill as its location for the plant that had been tended through the winter for the purpose. The Ivy Oration usually is given by a girl of the class who is among the most outstanding for personal qualities. This year it was given by Miss Catharine B. Bassett.

Most of the fraternities having houses held receptions and served tea in the afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

There was a large attendance of seniors and alumni at the dance which followed the reception, and for which Lechnyr's Vermonters furnished the music. The program included 16 numbers and two extras.
